Recession

Tallahassee will be hit hard, local experts say

BY DAVE BRYAN
staff writer

Local economic experts say the state of Florida may skirt the worst effects of a short-term recession. But they also say a number of factors makes the outlook for Tallahassee a lot less rosy.

Bob Bone, president of the Tallahassee Area Chamber of Commerce, pointed at state revenue shortfalls and the resulting "downsizing" of state government as one sign that Tallahassee—where many residents are employed by state government—is headed for an economic slump.

Bone also cited an impending national recession, the near standstill in local construction as a result of regulation mandated by the Tallahassee-Leon County Comprehensive Plan and a reduction in local retail sales, as factors in an economic downturn in the city.

"The combination of ... these at once has not made us as invincible as we sometimes think we are," Bone said last week. "We'll see it show up in all aspects of the economy."

John Betsy, economic analyst with the city's finance department, echoed most of Bone's analysis of the economic situation. He confirmed that Tallahassee is experiencing a decline in sales tax revenue the city was counting on to pay for road work, but now must be used to ward off a revenue shortfall.

Betsy explained that when state workers get laid off, they usually leave the city or vastly reduce the amount of money they spend. The result is that services are hurt as less money is spent on everything from houses to retail items. In addition, the decrease in spending results in a lower sales tax revenue the city receives, he said.

"As the state lays off, it could have a substantial impact,"

These construction workers are busy building apartments on Ocala Street behind Winn Dixie. But other construction workers aren't so lucky. Local developers say the recession is hitting business hard and causing them to fire construction workers. The apartments, known as University Commons, are scheduled to open this fall.

Businessman attacked

A man who hid in a business building until after closing time attacked the store owner early Saturday evening, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Mark Meadows said Sunday.

Charles Prescott, owner of Prescott Supply at 1218 W. Tharpe St., was attacked around 5 p.m. after he let the last of his employees go home. The attacker hit Prescott on the head and face several times with an unknown object then forced the business owner to get two bank deposit bags, Meadows said.

"The elevated attacker raped Prescott's body and fled."

The suspect — found the victim steel bands, mauve and eyes with duct tape before leaving the store through the front door," Meadows said.

Prescott freed himself and called police. Meadows said the victim did not get a look at the man who attacked him.

Prescott received minor bruises to his neck and head.

Crack pipe found

Two TPD officers responding to a domestic dispute arrested a woman after finding a device used to smoke crack cocaine in her purse.

Officers were called at 1010 Basin St. No. B-107 and found two women arguing and throwing things. The officers stopped the fight and were preparing to leave the complex when a group of children stepped them and told the officers that one of the women had a gun, Meadows said.

Police went back to the apartment and asked Collette Denise Green, 25, for permission to search her purse. Meadows said Green, who gave her address as 1526 Patrick Ave. Apt. D, complied. But instead of finding a gun, the officer found a crack pipe, Meadows said.

"When the officers told the woman she was under arrest she began to fight the officer, striking one of them with her fist," he said.

The officers were able to get the woman to the ground, but had to have the assistance of several back up officers to handcuff the woman.

Green was charged with disorderly conduct, resisting arrest with violence, battery on a Law enforcement officer and possession of drug paraphernalia. She was taken to the Leon County Jail and is being held on $8,500 bond.

Talk about it

President Bush's offer and Iraq's acceptance of a meeting between Secretary of State James Baker and the Iraqi Foreign Minister in Switzerland this coming Wednesday has brought a glimmer of hope to a world in the brink of war.

But judging by the way both sides are talking just days before the meeting, it's hard to remain optimistic for long. Both Bush and Iraqi President Hussein seem more bent on proving who's more macho than in resolving the crisis peacefully.

Last week, for instance, Iraqi Foreign Minister Aziz reiterated Baghdad's desire to link the Iraq-Kuwait crisis with the long-standing Israeli-Palestinian dispute. By taking the stance, Hussein somehow thinks he can present himself as the defender of the Arab world. Bush has refused the cynical notion, and rightly so.

But while Bush has responded properly in that regard, the public stance he is taking as to the purpose of the Switzerland meeting is [illegible] backed by the muscle of 400,000 U.S. troops in the Saudi desert. Bush says there will be "no negotiations, no compromises, no attempts at face-saving and no rewards for aggression." The purpose of the meeting, he says, is solely to inform Hussein of the resolve of the U.S. to force Iraq from Kuwait in compliance with the United Nations' resolutions.

If that's the case, it probably won't be much of a meeting.

The tough-guy rhetoric needs to be toned down. What is needed is a face-saving gesture that would allow Hussein to reverse his decision to invade Kuwait and survive at home. That can be granted by the U.S. without rewarding Hussein for his move against Kuwait, but it can't be done without talking.

Both Bush and Baker have publicly offered possible ways out for Hussein in the past. Baker has said that if Iraq pulls out of Kuwait, it will not be attacked by the U.S.-led forces. He also said that once Iraq pulls out, it can then go about settling its differences with Kuwait.

For his part, Bush has hinted that once Iraq pulls out of Kuwait, doors to addressing other problems plaguing the Middle East—like the Israeli-Palestinian conflict—may be opened.

If Bush is truly committed to finding a peaceful solution, he should authorize Baker to tell Aziz all these things, face to face. To do otherwise, to stick to saying things like "he's going to get his ass kicked," is irresponsible and can only strengthen Hussein's resolve.

It's even more irresponsible in light of the fact that Bush has imposed a deadline on himself to get things moving. Bush continues to criticize the sanctions—contrary to reports that indicate they are taking their toll—and continues to play up the military option.

Critics might say that in light of the Jan. 15 deadline and Bush's stance on the upcoming talks, it appears that the U.S. is only going through the motions for war. With failed "talks" in Switzerland, Bush could say that every avenue possible for a peaceful solution had been tried.

That shouldn't happen. A little bit of talking in Switzerland could accomplish everything the U.S. set out to do in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait: reverse the aggression, secure the free and cheap flow of the precious oil the United States unfortunately depends on, and begin to address the problems that make Hussein so dangerous and the region so volatile.

But so talking in Switzerland, and maybe ultimatums on the other hand, will prove to be one of the final steps toward a major war with unpredictable consequences.

Self-black centered

In response to the "Endangered Species" editorial printed on Dec. 12, 1990.

The statistics may be true but to no fault of their own black people are killing black people more and more these days. Why does it have to be "white people behind the scenes pulling the strings" to inhibit black strength? I think that African-Americans need to sit back and take a look around and not be so self-black centered. Opportunities are given to minorities in an overabundance and still some people think it is not enough. Some "white" people would extremely appreciate these numerous opportunities. If "black" people would think mentally that they were equal to "white" people, which they are, then most of them certainly wouldn't have an attitude about how the way that things went on with our forefathers. It is because of our forefathers, including our fathers and mothers and their fathers and mothers, etc., that this invisible black and white line is drawn. And if we, the new generation, let them instill that line in us, that means that we haven't gotten anywhere, no matter how equal things are now! What this all comes down to is education! This is a place, but not always so, that we are judged by our gray matter more than anything else. Everyone should take advantage of knowledge and not just think that because a person has a different skin color it makes them a better person mentally or even physically for that fact. Making the grade and obtaining the knowledge is all up to the individual, not to past history. If education was so important to those people who were out in the streets, killing their likes, they would know that their is a better alternative. Let's all be brothers and sisters instead of taking sides. PEACE.

Simply whining

Editor:

I would like to say a few words regarding the letter written by Bruce Harrington in the Dec. 13 issue of the Flambeau. Mr. Harrington found the "Kill the Gays—Stop Gay AIDS" T-shirt to be among other things "offensive" and "threatening." Mr. Harrington then considers the real issue to be concerned with the alleged "harassment" and "intimidation of oppressed people"—and not with free speech.

I would just like to know why he feels this way. Mr. Harrington openly admitted to being gay. So why does he feel offended by the notion of what appears to be a UF Gay-rights organization's sexist T-shirt? I'm also surprised that he didn't appreciate the irony of such a depiction. And he certainly can't deny that a large majority of the Americans infected with the AIDS virus are homosexuals. So why should Mr. Harrington feel so threatened by the depiction of this cartoon? Besides, the T-shirt is merely a tongue-in-cheek jab at our racist/sexist UF administration—was not meant to be taken seriously. Furthermore, since Mr. Harrington is courageous enough to openly advertise his homosexuality, it seems highly unlikely that he honestly feels threatened by such an insignificant T-shirt. It appears that he is simply looking for something to whine about.

Mr. Harrington may not be able to "afford to defend the 'free speech' rights of those who espouse hatred and violence," but I can certainly afford to defend the "free speech" rights of all people. We have no right to invade the constitutional rights of anybody else, no matter how hateful or violent their words may be. As ignorant as they sound, they have as much right to voice their anger towards homosexuality. Of course, the majority of people in our society would probably prefer it if both groups of people would quit running their mouths.

Calder C. Haas

If you don't like it

Editor:

In the Dec. 5 Flambeau, a letter to the editor by Mr. M.K. Norbeck entitled "Watch Out, Draft Dodgers" was printed. As I read the Dec. 12 Flambeau, I noticed four rebuttals to Mr. Norbeck's letter. Of the four, the only letter I can say validly refutes any opinions Mr. Norbeck expressed may be C.S. Kim's letter. Concerning the first three I simply say, "If you don't like where you live—MOVE."

Whether you vote or not, the republic we pledge allegiance to is founded on trusting our elected leaders. I'm not advocating blind obedience, that is not democracy. Scrutinizing, questioning, and even peaceful protesting are all valid ways of expressing individual discontent with policies generated at any level of government. But at least in the U.S. you have that right. Most other countries in the world would never allow you even the basic right to argue (remember Tiananmen Square?). As for whether or not you believe this government has treated you fairly or not, it's still your government. If you don't believe this then you have forgotten that you again have the right to vote for the candidate of your choice. Just because you choose to abstain from voting or your choice did not win, you still have the right. Do you think the Soviet satellites that are breaking with Moscow are happy not having the right to vote?

Finally, the armed forces are voluntary and have been since the end of the Vietnam War. The ratio of blacks to whites, Hispanics and blacks can has no bearing in this argument because every black, white, Hispanic, Asian, etc., that is in the service chose that as his/her profession. This is not Vietnam. Those serving here and abroad are there because they chose to defend the United States, its Constitution and its government. I am a veteran and a student and I don't claim to have any more life experience than anyone else. But I do know what I'm talking about here because I've experienced these areas of life. Mr. Norbeck and I are not "Mr. Know It All's," but we both know that the bottom line is there is no such thing as a free lunch, especially not with democracy.

FSU library to benefit from Blockbuster Bowl

Florida State University Athletic Director Bob Goin, after consulting with football head coach Bobby Bowden and FSU Athletic Board Chairman Charles Ehrhardt, made a $200,000 contribution from Blockbuster Bowl receipts to Robert M. Strozier Library, the university's main library facility.

"The donation to academics will help offset the book Operating Capital Outlay (OCO) reduction because of mandatory budget cutbacks."

FSU President Bernard F. Sliger, Provost Gus Turnbull, Vice President for University Advancement Jim Pitts, Director of Libraries Charles Miller and Faculty Senate President Alan Mabe expressed their appreciation for the Athletic Department's "generous gift."

This gift brings total contributions from athletics to academics at FSU to more than $3 million over the past decade.

The Florida State Seminoles beat the Penn State Nittany Lions 24-17 in the inaugural Blockbuster Bowl on Dec. 28 in Miami's Joe Robbie Stadium. FSU expects to receive $1.6 million from its bowl appearance, plus an additional $100,000 donated by the bowl to academics.

FSU College of Human Sciences dean to retire at year's end

Dr. Margaret Sitton, dean of the College of Human Sciences at Florida State University, has announced her retirement, effective Jan. 1, 1992. At that time, she will have served as dean for more than 19 years.

"In planning my retirement, I wanted the college to be as it is now — strong and with a positive, promising future," Sitton said. "We have an outstanding faculty, excellent programs and a very positive outlook for the future."

Dr. Margaret Sitton

Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs Gus Turnbull said he accepted the dean's decision with regrets. Praising Sitton's high standards of excellence and her dedication to the advancement of the college and the university, Turnbull added that, under her leadership, the college is recognized as one of the nation's best.

Sitton, 62, came to FSU in July 1972 as dean of the School of Home Economics. Under her guidance, the school was designated in 1976 as the College of Home Economics, then in 1989 the name was changed to the College of Human Sciences.

The Wellington, Texas, native earned her bachelor's degree in home economics with honors from North Texas State University in 1949 and her master of education degree from Southwest Texas State University in 1953. She earned her doctoral degree in education from Texas Tech University in 1965. In 1989, North Texas State honored her as one of its "Grads Who Made Good."

Speedy FSU scientists net top supercomputing awards

A Florida State University researcher and his colleagues zipped past all competition in the United States recently in a speed contest of supercomputer users around the world.

Dr. David Moncrieff, a chemist in the FSU Supercomputer Computations Research Institute, with Dr. Stephen Wilson and Victor Saunders in England, reached a speed of 2.229 billion calculations per second.

The speed netted Moncrieff's team not only the fastest time in the United States, but the third fastest time in the world and high honors in the 1990 Gigaflop Performance Awards.

The contest, sponsored by CRAY Research Inc., makers of FSU's CRAY Y-MP supercomputer, tested scientists' ability to solve a "real world" computational problem at sustained speeds of more than 1.5 billion calculations per second.

The problem solved by Moncrieff's team described electron correlation effects in molecules.

Also placing high were SCRI supercomputer consultants William H. Holter and Daan Sandee with former SCRI consultants Dennis Morrow and Vasant Butala. Their code for predicting groundwater pressure in a heterogeneous aquifer system placed eighth in the world with a sustained speed of 1.85 billion calculations per second.

A total of 30 awards were presented. The team of Pratt & Whitney Canada and Concordia University in Quebec took top honors with a speed of 2.3 billion calculations per second.

FSU financial aid director appointed

Robert L. McCloud has been named director of the Office of Financial Aid at Florida State University.

McCloud has served as acting director since May.

Elisabeth Muhlenfeld, dean of undergraduate studies, who announced McCloud's appointment, said McCloud "has made dramatic improvements in the office and earned the respect and strong support of its staff."

"Under his leadership, student services have improved markedly, the number of student checks processed on schedule has increased, more students have been served and more dollars delivered," said Muhlenfeld.

HONORS OPPORTUNITY FOR FRESHMEN

Freshmen with 12 to 16 college credits and 3.8 grade-point averages after the fall term are eligible to join the Liberal Studies Honors Program.

Eligible students should schedule an appointment with Emilie Morlock, 644-1841, by Jan. 9.

HONORS OPPORTUNITY FOR UNDERGRADUATES

Spaces remaining in honors-only Liberal Studies seminars and sections are given to qualified students during the last two days of drop add. Qualified students are those writing theses in Honors in the Major, Liberal Studies Honors finishers, and any FSU student with a 3.8 after one term or a 3.5 after two or more terms.

Pick up an honors course list from the Honors and Scholars Office. Call 644-1841 or go by Honors and Scholars Jan. 8 or 9 for permission to add.

TEACHING or ADVISING AWARD NOMINATIONS

Nominations for the 1991 TEACHING or ADVISING AWARDS are due in the President's Office by Wednesday, Jan. 23. The awards recognize excellence in undergraduate teaching and advising.

Each recipient will be recognized and given an honoranum at the Spring Faculty Convocation on April 8.

Nomination forms have been sent to all faculty and deans. Additional forms are available from departments.

PRESIDENT'S CONTINUING EDUCATION AWARD

FSU President Bernard Sliger announced Jan. 4 the opening of nominations for the President's Continuing Education Award which recognizes outstanding tenure or tenure-track faculty contributions to continuing education as a vital component of the University's mission. The award carries a $2,000 stipend.

For this award, continuing education is considered to be any teaching, research, publication or administrative services related to outreach educational services.

Nominations may be submitted by any FSU faculty member, staffer or student, and will be accepted through Feb. 1.

To nominate, send a card with the nominee's name and the nominator's name, address and phone number to: President's Continuing Education Award Committee, Office of the President, 211 Westcott, Florida State University, Tallahassee, FL 32306. The nominator will receive a questionnaire to be completed.

A-Z	1 p.m. - 5 p.m.	Tuesday, Jan. 22

DEADLINE: Jan. 22 is the last day to pay tuition in full or turn in a tuition deferment. After this date, your schedule will be canceled and you will no longer be allowed to attend classes.

NOTE: In observance of Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday, the University will be closed Jan. 21.

CHECK DISBURSEMENT: Disbursement will occur from Jan. 14 to 18 and Jan. 22, 1991. You MUST pay your total tuition or defer by Jan. 22 or your schedule will be canceled and you will not be allowed to attend class. (See schedule above)

LOAN ENTRANCE COUNSELING SESSION: You must attend an Entrance Counseling Session before your Stafford/SLS loan check can be released to you if you did not previously turn one in to the Cashier's Office when you received your previous disbursement. Call the Office of Financial Aid at 644-5871 for the schedule.

TUITION PAYMENT: Tuition payments are due in full by Jan. 22, 1991. Tuition will be deducted from all checks available during the distribution. The student MUST appear in person at distribution to endorse all checks and sign all required documents in order for any deductions to be made. Your student ID will be validated upon payment of all fees.

DEFERMENTS: You are not automatically deferred! If your aid is not available at the mass distribution, you may be eligible for a tuition deferment. The last day to receive a deferment is Jan. 22, 1991. You MUST apply to a financial aid counselor at the distribution site and receive your confirmation number for the deferment to be valid. Students who do not receive a deferment or pay tuition in full by Jan. 22, will have their schedules canceled and will not be allowed to attend class.

CHECK CANCELLATION: Any GSL check available at the distribution and not picked up by Jan. 31, 1991, will be returned to the lender for cancellation.

LATE DISBURSEMENTS: After Jan. 22, 1991, financial aid checks will be issued at the Cashier's Office in 109 Westcott between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

REGISTRATION CANCELLATION POLICY: If you have not paid your tuition or made formal arrangements (turned in a deferment, a type of billing or installment contract) by Jan. 22, your registration will be canceled without liability for fees. You will not be eligible to receive any financial aid for the semester since you will no longer be an enrolled student.

fight against tyranny, against injustice, against corruption and against the mad U.S. administration and its puppet, the Zionist entity (Israel), and against those damned people who have formed with them an alliance of tyranny and injustice," Saddam said.

"You must not imagine that the battle against tyranny represented by the American administration and its slogans of domination will be short," he added, vowing that, "the battle to expel the atheists and atheism from the sacred land of Moslems will not be short."

But he vowed, "Victory in this battle is certain, God willing."

But as Saddam delivered his defiant speech, his ambassador to Washington took a more moderate tone.

"If you don't want to call it negotiation, call it discussion," said Iraqi Ambassador Mohamed al-Mashat on the NBC News program "Meet the Press." He added, "Everything is negotiable but has to be in the context of the whole Middle East problem."

Saddam's fiery speech marking the 70th anniversary of the foundation of the Iraqi army came a day after President Bush warned the Iraqi president he must quit Kuwait or face "terrible consequences."

The speech also came as Secretary of State James Baker left Sunday for Europe, where he will meet Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz on Wednesday.

Baker is carrying a letter to Saddam Hussein from President Bush which is designed to underscore American resolve to evict Iraq from Kuwait by force unless it does so voluntarily.

Prior to his departure, Baker rejected any attempts to negotiate Iraq's withdrawl or introduce discussion of other issues. "We will not agree to anything that will constitute linkage of the Kuwait-Iraq problem with any other problems," he said on the ABC News program "This Week with David Brinkley."

Baker also said he would refuse any invitation to meet with Hussein in Baghdad.

"You are in the same battle . . . you have prepared a historical opportunity, long awaited by your fathers and grandfathers—the return of the branch to the tree, the return of Kuwait to the motherland," Saddam said. "The creation of a greater Iraq is now a reality."

Saddam's address offered no policy change or readiness to compromise on the five-month-old gulf standoff, triggered when Iraq invaded and occupied the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait on Aug. 2.

The Iraqi leader praised the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and said the forthcoming battle with Western forces in the gulf would be for the liberation of Palestine.

"The battle for the liberation of Palestine is not going to be short if we want it to be serious and glorious," he said. "You should not imagine that its sacrifices will be small or simple."

British Prime Minister John Major, leaving for a tour of Britian's gulf allies Sunday, said it must be made clear to Saddam that Iraq will not be attacked if it withdraws from Kuwait. Major was scheduled to inspect British troops in Saudi Arabia, meet with Saudi and Kuwaiti leaders, and then travel to Oman and Egypt.

In other developments Sunday:

The Cypriot-registered freighter Demetra Beauty was damaged by what may have been a mine in the Gulf of Oman and was reported sinking. The 23-member crew was rescued and later taken to the Omani capital of Muscat. Lloyds Shipping Intelligence reported. The Greek owners of the vessel said that latest reports indicated the vessel was still afloat.

Saudi Arabia, Syria and Egypt, key Arab allies of the United States confronting Iraq in the gulf, were reported to have disagreed after two closed-door meetings in the Saudi capital of Riyadh on how to deal with the Iraqi war machine should hostilities erupt in the region. Saudi Arabia apparently wants the Iraqi military destroyed so that it can no longer pose a threat to gulf Arab states, but Syria wants the Iraqi armed forces left intact so they can be used against Israel if necessary.

Eighteen German jet fighters arrived at a Turkish base north of Iraq Sunday as part of a NATO force to deter possible Iraqi aggression against Ankara, a member of the Atlantic alliance. Jets from Belgium and Italy were to arrive in Turkey later Sunday.

Iran called for an emergency summit meeting of the Islamic Conference Organization in a last ditch bid to find a peaceful solution to the gulf crisis, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said Sunday. There was no immediate word of a response from other members of the ICO, which loosely brings together countries with a large Muslim population.

Jackson

away with, however, is living in the dormitories with the students. Jackson said summer enrichment counselors combined with competent dormitory personell make it unnecessary for him to live with the students.

"It's not a high priority. Nobody (at other universities) lives in the dormitories," he said. "I don't see the big deal."

When Dean of Undergraduate Studies Elisabeth Muhlenfeld dismissed Ammerman from his non-paying position it caused a stir in the local academic community. Professors and students questioned if the university would continue supporting the summer programs. Students from the FSU Black Student Union united with the university chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Black Progressive Men and marched to the Westcott administration building to voice their concern.

And when Muhlenfeld hired Jackson at $57,000 a year to replace Ammerman, the controversy continued. Leaders from BSU and the NAACP were angered because the university did not consult them before hiring Jackson.

But Muhlenfeld, Jackson's supervisor, said he has the necessary experience for the position.

"He was hired because of his strong credentials and his history of work in the area of minority academic support," she said. "He has a strong commitment to education."

Jackson said that despite the controversy, he is optimistic. He said he offered Ammerman a "role in the programs."

'I want the programs to maintain a diversity and offer special kinds of services so they can prepare themselves.' —Norman Jackson

Ammerman said he is not taking Jackson up on his offer because he wants to make a "clean break" from the programs and is busy with his new position—special consultant to University President Bernard Sliger for minority academic programs.

Ammerman was given the position, which pays $6,000 a year, in November and is looking into the success of minority recruitment and retention at the FAMU/FSU School of Engineering.

"I'm earning my money," Ammerman said. "All the reports are preliminary, but it looks to me like FSU needs to put more emphasis on retention and recruitment of minority (engineering) students."

Jackson said he is mailing applications to high school students who are interested in participating in the summer programs and the forms should be out within two weeks. He said he is also busy attempting to raise money for the programs, but is available for students whenever they need to talk with him.

"I will be accessible to students and I told them I have an open door," he said.

New Year's Forecasts

Fifteen predictions for 1991

BY MARTIN ALLEN
STAFF WRITER

Well here we are once again, the start of a new decade, a new year, month, all that rot.

It's time once again to gaze into a slightly cracked crystal ball and see what horrors and delights the New Year might have to offer . . .

• Fugitive ex-billionaire Donald T. Rump will be found floating face down in the East River. Suspects can be found in the New York City phone book.

• Paramount will release Star Trek VI. The Apology. During a tense chase scene, the Enterprise will be unable to outrun the Klingons unless the starship jettisons Mr. Scott to lighten the ship.

• George Lucas will carry through on his threat to release the first of 10 sequels to Howard the Duck.

• The new version of Dark Shadows will be a surprise hit in the ratings, thanks to every single Nielsen-family household being bitten by vampires.

• Vanilla Ice will take pity on Rob and Fab of Milli Vanilli and hire them for his live shows. It will then be revealed that they are all androids from the ninth dimension bent on eating the brains of America's youth.

• New Drug Czar Bob Martinez will be quickly replaced by 'Killer Bob' from Twin Peaks and no one will be able to tell the difference.

• Oprah Winfrey will be seen dating Marlon Brando. Famine will stalk the land in their wake.

• Roseanne Barr will pose for a nude centerfold. Monasteries will be crowded for the first time in 900 years, while the rest of the country's suicide rate will triple overnight.

• 2 Live Crew will release an album that offends everybody that wasn't hit on their previous effort, but no one will give a damn, having realized at last, that they are simply terrible musicians.

• Twin Peaks will be canceled, and several ABC executives will be found dead. Wrapped in plastic.

• There will be a confirmed Elvis sighting on Mikhail Gorbachev's birthmark.

• The New Kids On The Block will fall by the wayside, to be replaced by a troupe of genetically altered penguins, and again, no one will be able to tell the difference.

• The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles will be squashed by a falling Scotty and become a new craze in pizza-topping.

This year makers of Star Trek will come out with Star Trek VI: the apology.

COMMENTARY

• In the event of war in the Persian Gulf, President Bush will answer his critics by declaring himself Emperor for Life and shut himself behind the White House doors.

• Vice President Quayle will attempt to toughen his own public image by wearing studded leather jackets, smoking Clove cigarettes, insulting minorities and billing himself as "The Viceman."

• Madonna will have a child. Suspects can be found in the New York City phone book.

Marriage brings mixed emotion

BY JAN WESNER CHILDS
NEWS EDITOR

Close readers of the Flambeau will notice something different about my byline today: I got married Dec. 30.

While organizing a wedding is always a huge task, it was especially hectic for us because we set a date only three weeks earlier. Mark and I had been dating for almost six years and engaged for two, but kept changing our wedding date for various reasons. My husband is in the Army and we could never be sure of when he would have leave. Finally, we found out he would have a four-day weekend for New Year's . . . and here we are.

A lot of people say marriage is old fashioned, outdated and conformist. While the last may be true, the first two definitely aren't. We lived together for two-and-a-half years before we got married, but then we decided to symbolize our commitment publicly. We wanted to have that sense of permanence that marriage brings.

Now, people keep asking us if we feel any different, or if life has changed for us. My husband summed it up perfectly before we got married: "It's not like the clouds are going to part and we're going to suddenly have blue skies from now on."

And Mark was right, nothing is different—at least not on the outside. We keep saying that, yet we keep talking about the transition we are making. It's something I can't describe, something deep down inside that is saying "Now you're a grown-up, a responsible adult." And that's a scary thought.

Does this mean I can't hang out at Bullwinkle's and Finale's until 4 a.m. anymore? Does this mean people are going to start calling me "ma'am?"

I think what it really means is that I have chosen someone I want to spend the rest of my life with, and we chose to make that commitment in the traditional, popular way. Like I said before, there's a certain sense of permanence that comes along with that, and that's a great feeling.

While that's something we can depend on, there is another event in our lives that we can't be so sure of: The prospect of war in the Middle East. Everyone wants to know if my husband will be going there.

Unfortunately, no one knows the answer to that. Right now he's going through Infantry Officer's Basic Course at Ft. Benning, Ga., as a second lieutenant. He's scheduled to go to Ranger school after that, and then on to one other school. We're supposed to move to Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, in August. But we always have to preface that by saying " . . . unless Mark goes to Saudi Arabia."

In the meantime, I'm staying here with friends and finishing school. I should graduate in August, just before we leave for Hawaii.

People want to know what I think of the whole situation, and I can't really say. For the men and women in the military, it's their job. They have pledged their lives to the United States, and while not everyone may agree with U.S. policies, you have to respect the soldiers for their commitments. They are regular people, just like anyone else. And now one of them is my husband.

That's what getting married does—it brings a whole other person with an entire separate set of circumstances into your life. What happens to my husband also happens to me, and what happens to me likewise effects him. Marriage brings a lot of things closer to home than you ever realized before.

Christmas: A tale of getting older

BY LAUREN V. LUSTIG
ARTS EDITOR

It was the best of Christmases. It was the worst of Christmases. It was a time of celebration, reunion and remembrance. It was a time of small talk, readjustment and longings for the past. It was a time of change.

To start things off, the foolish powers-that-be at New York's Channel 11 decided to can the Yule log, thus ruining a deep-seated family tradition. No longer could we sit around the TV and warm ourselves with that 22 second circular film clip of a fire. No longer could we listen to the sweet virgin voices of the Mormon Tabernacle Boys Choir floating somewhere behind those three continuously leaping flames.

Instead we had to be content in acting out parts to It's a Wonderful Life: good ol' Bedford Falls, good ol' Building and Loan. My Dad's seen the movie, black and white, color, male and female versions (the family agrees: Mary Tyler Moore doesn't cut it) about 200 trillion times, so he got to be George Bailey. Since Mom's angelic, she took on Clarence's role and told Dad a la George two important things. First, they don't use money in heaven. And secondly, each man in some way touches every other man, and when he is not there he leaves a terrible void (hence, the plot).

Dad, being himself, not George, interrupts our acting to tell us this latter creed is his religion. Yes, he worries a great deal about hermits.

Mom also interrupts our Wonderful Life revelry to remind us of another time-honored tradition: calling the relatives in Great Britain. Hi Grandpa, Hi Grandpa, Hi Grandpa, words echo beautifully across the ocean. No Grandpa, I don't have eight boyfriends, that was the sixth grade. Yes Grandpa, I'm still your little girl.

It's so difficult to communicate over the phone over the seas that I could probably say: "Aunty Trice, I'm going over Niagara Falls in a barrel tommorow," and she'd say, "Oh love-ly, how love-ly."

Everyone has dreaded these phone conversations for as far back as I can remember. Luckily, these days my two-year-old niece and six-year-old nephew take up a lot of the time and attention. "Say 'Hi,' Miranda, say 'Hi' to Grandma, say 'Hi' Miranda, Miranda, please just say 'Hi,' Miranda dammit can't you just say 'Hi!' "

I think my niece and nephew have in some ways saved Christmas for our family; they bring in a little joie de vivre and provide good entertainment. Since we don't have any relatives here in America, we have a small family and it's been hard adjusting from two adults and four kids to six adults plus various significant others.

This was the first Christmas that I spent a lot of time with my family. As silly and sentimental as it may sound, it was a Christmas of great significance.

I started out the holiday stating I hated Christmas: the commercialism, being sort of forced to hang out with the family, the hassle of feeling like you have to buy gifts. Why are we supposed to feel and promote this so-called good will only once a year? I considered Christmas sentimental tripe which caused more bad then good. (Check the suicide rates this time of year) Bah Humbug!

Then, perhaps with the first snowfall, my idea of Christmas began to change.

The first realization was that I had to get rid of the many harmful and silly resentment I harbored against my family: "Mom, remember the time you let all the boys go sleigh riding down the hill and I had to stay in? Remember the time you let the three of them climb up Snowdon Mountain and I had to take the train with you and Daddy? Remember when . . . "

For my brothers it was: "Remember the time you and your friends told me to go into the store and get you a Coke and then you drove away and left me there and I had to walk four miles home in the rain?" And so on.

These incidents from years past colored the way I dealt with each of my family, colored our communication, our friendship. I've forgiven my high school buddies a thousand times over for any small injustices that were wrought on my person. My family, however, was another thing.

I don't know why I expected them to be perfect.

Now, despite my niece and nephew being young, Christmas is a very different thing—maybe not fun in the old way, but fun in a new way. This Christmas was the first I really paid any attention to that. It was the first Christmas that I began to appreciate the difference.

So I left New York and Christmas '90 with mixed feelings. It was sort of painful to come to these realizations and let go of some past perspectives. But it was a good thing too. When this Christmas was over, I finally, perhaps for the first time, had a good sense of what Christmas was for me: an ever growing and fascinating family ritual.

THE FILMS OF 1990

Celluloid not to remember

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

Fifty or 100 years from now, when film historians look back at the films of our time, 1990 will be a vast wasteland of forgotten movies and deteriorating celluloid.

Film over the last year sunk to new depths. Fewer films were made, which meant there were fewer good films. Not only were there fewer studio films released, but the independent films that seemed to flourish not so long ago almost completely disappeared.

Instead we got $100 million-grossing blockbusters like Pretty Woman, Home Alone and Ghost—nothing more than fluff that the movie-going public ate up.

If there were some sort of imaginary battle within the film industry pitting Style vs. Substance, Substance would be on the ropes right now and Style would be setting up for the knockout.

In the imaginary battle, Pretty Woman and others like it represent what is bad about film. There is nothing to see in films that are little more than a fairy tale without the presence of a wicked witch or fairy godmother. Nothing realistic ever happens. There are no happy endings in life; if you'll remember, everybody dies at some point.

Martin Scorsese (l) talks with Ray Liotta and Robert DeNiro (r) on the set of GoodFellas in 1989.

But if a film makes over $100 million, are studio heads going to listen to people who want a little more substance when they drop $6 down the hole?

We all know the answer to that, but filmmakers like Martin Scorsese give us a little ray of sunshine in the extremely dark skies that are hanging low over modern cinema.

Scorsese's 1990 release GoodFellas was the only saving grace to an otherwise uneventful year at the movies.

When I left the theater after seeing GoodFellas back in September I was physically exhausted. The film was so fast paced and upbeat that I felt like I was running along with it at breakneck speed.

But along with the feeling of physical exhaustion came an equal feeling of mental exhilaration. Within that two-and-a-half-hour span, I felt like I had just seen the entire body of filmmaking—past, present and future—summed up on far too few reels of celluloid.

GoodFellas is the type of film that shows the possibilities that this medium has to offer. It breaks down the boundaries and mores of traditional filmmaking and makes all new rules.

COMMENTARY

MIND REELS

The film, based on the true story by Nicholas Pileggi, is about mob informant Henry Hill—a man who became a part of a Mafia family even though he was an outsider. But when things got tough for Hill he turned to the FBI and entered the witness protection program. The film shows bits and pieces of Hill's life like a rollercoaster—things and events, sometimes too ghastly to believe, flash by—until the film comes over the last big rise and grinds to a halt.

GoodFellas breaks the mold of the conventional Mafia film. Scorsese has taken an often romantic lifestyle and brought it down to the middle-class level. These are real people who inhabit each frame, not epic figures who struggle for a bigger piece of the pie. These are everyday people who inhabit the streets of

Christmas didn't offer film bonanza

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

Here's a look at four Christmas releases still loitering in theaters everywhere.

The Godfather Part III

Francis Ford Coppola's third installment in this masterful epic about the Corleone family is by far the best of the releases that made their way south of the snowbelt.

In Part III we join Michael Corleone, the head of the family since midway through the original film, in the last steps of bringing the family into legitimacy. The year is 1979 and it's been a long, hard struggle for Michael. We can see it in the way he stoops and the tired sound of his voice.

The most interesting thing about this film is that Michael is actually searching for redemption in the eyes of his family, the public and even the priests and clergy who figure into the plot. But as we know, redemption just isn't the kind of thing that comes easily to the head of a Mafia family—especially when he's being dragged back down into the filth of crime and murder that he never seems to escape.

Probably the biggest question that had to be answered about The Godfather Part III didn't have to do with the film, but with its director. Everyone was waiting to see if Coppola could pull it off—pull his career which would probably be over if this film had bombed, out of the dumper.

But he shows a deft hand in his direction and his casting choices were brilliant. Al Pacino as Michael pulls another incredible job out of his hat while newcomer Andy Garcia shows the fire that the young Pacino had in the first two installments of this epic. Even the casting of his own daughter Sofia, as Pacino's daughter Mary, seems inspired after watching the film. Winona Ryder or Madonna or any other high-profile female actor you could pull out of a hat could not have played this extremely understated role. The young Coppola is not a great actress, but she was just what Coppola and Mario Puzo's script called for.

I only have one complaint about the film. It needed to be at least a half an hour longer. There wasn't enough time for character development. At one point near the end, there doesn't seem to be much rhyme or reason for some of the characters' attitude changes. And why would George Hamilton and John Savage make appearances when their characters aren't even properly explained? Between the two of them they probably have 10 lines.

But that's only bickering. Overall, the film checks in as one of the year's best.

Edward Scissorhands

Tim Burton's Edward Scissorhands is the kind of film you have to see when you're in a good mood but your expectations aren't too high.

It's a modern fairy tale, modeled after Frankenstein, about a boy who was made out of spare parts by an inventor (Vincent Price) who dies before he can put hands on his creation. In place of hands the boy has scissors, which he can do amazing things with, like creating beautiful hedge sculptures or wild, whacked-out hairdos. But most of the time Edward, who is played wonderfully by Johnny Depp, ends up cutting himself or someone around him accidentally.

Literary lovers: Connery and Pfeiffer

The film begins as we follow the neighborhood Avon lady (Dianne Weist) from one ugly prefab, pastel-colored house to another. Doors keep slamming in her face until she looks up on a hill and sees a castle placed safely out of reach of this garrish suburbia. When she goes to the castle she finds Edward and brings him home. The rest is . . . well, very, very predictable. But this film is fun, the perfect Christmas release.

The weak point in the film is the script (written by Caroline Thompson) which is nothing more than a recycled mad-scientist film with a healthy dose of Mary Shelley's masterpiece thrown in to boot. But Edward is chock full of charm and visual wonders. In fact, Tim Burton and Art Director Bo Welch make the film so fun to look at that it's very easy to forget about the script. Once again Burton shows us that he can compete with the best of them visually, as he did with the ominous Gothic cityscape in Batman and the playfulness of his designs in Beetlejuice. Now if he could only find a screenwriter who can match his visuals with words.

The Russia House

You heard it here first—the Cold War is over.

You can tell by the quality of spy thriller espionage films, which has not been very good lately. At the top of this list of poor international intrigue films rests The Russia House, based on the novel by John LeCarre.

In a nutshell, Fred Schepisi's latest is about a book publisher named Barley Blair (Sean Connery) who gets wrapped up in the world of espionage when a Russian scientist (Klaus Maria Brandauer) gives him a manuscript filled with high-level Soviet military secrets.

What makes this film so lackluster is the fact that no filmgoer really cares about that type of situation anymore. You can actually feel Hollywood producers reaching for stories that they can cram down the movie-going public's throat.

In many ways, The Russia House could have been good. Instead of a shoot'em up film, there's more of a cerebral angle to it. Watching The Russia House is more like reading a book. The acting by Connery, Brandauer and Michelle Pfeiffer, who plays Connery's love interest, is superb. But the film's ending rings hollow and there's nothing exceptional about the story or the film.

Bonfire of the Vanities

Brian DePalma's latest film, Bonfire of the Vanities, adapted from Tom Wolfe's bestseller, is by far the worst film to come out during the Christmas season, if not the year.

When the novel came out, everyone hailed it as the best thing since sliced bread, but if the book (which I haven't read and may never read now) is any indication of the film, why did just about everybody read it?

Bonfire—the film—is supposed to be a wildly funny satire about racism. But what it turns into is a laughably racist piece of well-directed fluff. The story concerns a down-and-out reporter named Peter Fallow (Bruce Willis), who makes his meteoric rise to temporary fame by capitalizing on a sensational story of a bond trader (Tom Hanks) who runs over a black kid in The Bronx while he's sneaking around with his mistress (Melanie Griffith).

Three things can be ascertained from the film: a) Everybody is a racist; b) The justice system in America is as crooked as a two-bit hood who steals from blind people; c) Reporters don't use facts. They embellish their stories and sell papers by sensationalizing everything.

There's no telling where this film went wrong. In the pre-scripting stage would be a good guess. There aren't any real people in this film. Everyone is a stereotype of some sort or another. There's a disgustingly unfunny caricature of Rev. Al Sharpton, and a rabidly racist Jewish district attorney with political aspirations.

Films like this lead you to ask the question: where does an artist draw the line between satire and actual promotion of the subject that is being satirized?

Obviously, the creators of this film never even paid attention to any imaginary lines drawn in the dust. As it stands, there are only two positive things about this film. Morgan Freeman, who plays the hard-as-nails judge who eventually clears the Hanks character of all charges, proves once again that he is one of the best actors in the business.

The second positive aspect of the film is DePalma's direction. As usual, he serves up a visual feast with luscious set pieces and interesting camerawork. Now we just have to wait for the day that may never come—when DePalma can find another script that can complement his little-used talents.

The Godfather Part III*, Bonfire of the Vanities and Edward Scissorhands are playing at the Capitol Cinemas. For more information call 385-1311. The Russia House is playing at Oak Lake Six. For more information call 893-0468.

Latest Vincent CD shows how great rock 'n' roll once was

BY FRANK YOUNG
STAFF WRITER

Gene Vincent, Capitol Collector's Series
Capitol Records, compact disc and cassette only.

An unexpected result of the CD boom has been the welcome archaeology of American record-label vaults. Classic, heartfelt music that hasn't seen the light of day in our country for decades is being dusted off, respectfully restored and given a dignified second life. This is reassuring to those who don't go for the corrupt, artless and fradulent pabulum palmed off as "pop music" today. So much great music of all kinds has been revived that the discriminating listener can thumb his or her nose at the likes of Vanilla Ice or Milli Vanilli and take their pick of a smorgasboard of material time hasn't begun to diminish.

For example, the music of Gene Vincent: virtually forgotten in his native America, it's been kept alive by three generations of fans in Europe. Vincent's leather-clad, hay-seed-Othello image was appropriated by British "teddy boys" in the 1950s while many major British musicians who emerged in the early '60s—Albert Lee, John Lennon, Jimmy Page, et al—drew inspiration from the singer's impassioned style and the guitar fireworks of Vincent's backup band, the Blue Caps.

The well-to-do European Vincentphile can choose from two complete collections of Vincent's classic '50s '60s music, or purchase exact replicas of Vincent's rarest early LPs.

Here, Gene Vincent is a vague name to most, who might know his most famous hit, "Be-Bop A-Lula," and lump him in with the other pretenders to Elvis Presley's throne. Thanks to this terrific, great sounding new CD, which compiles the high-lights of Vincent's first dozen 45s, taped from May 1956 to December '58, the casual listener or committed fanatic can get a generous serving of music that's more than museum material.

Discovered by Capitol during a frantic '56 search to find an Elvis of their own, and co-opt some of that lucrative teenage coin, Virginia-born Vincent, then 21, was already a distinctive figure. Victim of a Brando-inspired motorcycle wreck, Vincent walked with a foreboding limp and sported a heavy leg-brace. While recuperating from his near-fatal skirmish, the musically inclined Vincent took up songwriting. Later, he made some demonstration recordings with a talented local guitarist, Cliff Gallup. Capitol execs liked what they heard and shunted Vincent, with Gallup fronting the hastily-assembled Blue Caps, to a Nashville studio. They were immediately rewarded with a Top Ten hit in "Be-Bop-A-Lu'a." Vincent racked up enough money-spinners to remain on Capitol's roster into the 1960s.

"Be-Bop-A-Lula" and its notorious flipside, "Woman Love," open this CD. Among the small elite of perfect rock 'n' roll performances, these two tunes sound as new and immediate as they did in 1956. Backed by Gallup's mesmerizing, spontaneous guitar, the steel-brush drumming of Dickie Harrell and Willie Williams' four-to-the-bar rhythm guitar, Vincent delivered the goods with a vocal style bridging the stylized swagger of Elvis and the adenoidal charm of Buddy Holly. With this ace band, Vincent made five singles and two LPs, but they never topped this initial assault. "Woman Love," with its insistent guitar figures, swampy atmosphere and Vincent's NC-17 crooning (many people insist he utters the "F-word" herein, but with all the echo, it's hard to tell), is Vincent's masterpiece.

Not to knock the rest of his early repetoire: "Race With The Devil," "Gonna Back Up Baby," "Bluejean Bop," "Crazy Legs," the impossibly demented "B-I-Bickey Bi, Bo-Bo-Go," "Lotta Lovin'," "Dance To The Bop," "I Got It," "Baby Blue," "Git It" and "Say Mama," all included here, are fresh, original rockers.

Cliff Gallup's guitar leads are continually astonishing. A devotee of the Les Paul/Chet Atkins school, Gallup combined a complex, precise fingerstyle techinique with a weird sense of humor. This latter aspect best surfaces on 1956's "Blue-jean Bop," in which Gallup begins a solo by delightfully quoting "Mary Had A Little Lamb," turning its toybox melody into a roaring, mellifluous improvisation. On Vincent's LPs, Gallup galvanized familiar standards such as "Up A Lazy River," and "Jezebel," endowing them with a distinctive, torrid atmosphere.

Vincent excelled on the then-obligatory ballads and mid-tempo softies. On this compilation's "Important Words," "Wear My Ring," "Walkin Home From School" and "True To You," he boosts the lightweight tunes with a sincerity and assertiveness that often transcends their cliches. But even Vincent can't conquer the Jordanaires, villains on many of Elvis' best records, who moo away on the otherwise-superb "Important Words." (The dream of many rockabilly fans is the development of an "Ex-Jordanaire" device that could wipe out the obtrusive backup vocals that mar some great performances).

Another pioneer rocker, Eddie Cochran, lends a hand on two tracks, Bill Monroe's bluegrassy "Rocky Road Blues" and "Git It," a bizarre exercise in vocal hysteria.

This CD is a fine treat for anyone who'd like to know how great rock 'n' roll music once was. Capitol promises another Vincent CD volume next year; perhaps we Americans will eventually have our own pick-of-the-crop of this fantastic music that's a vital part of our popular culture heritage.

More success for Seminoles, but still no national champ

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

While the 1990 year was another good one for the Florida State athletic program, Seminole fans may remember the frustration more than anything else. Like years past, there were plenty of wins, but the Big One stayed away for yet another year . . . still no national championships.

The Seminoles pulled out a win over Penn State, 24-17 in the inaugural Blockbuster Bowl in Miami.

The win was the Seminoles sixth consecutive and the team's ninth in a row without a loss--furthering Bowden's reputation as King of the Bowls. Bowden also gained his first win against Joe Paterno.

Florida State's softball team came the closest to gaining a national championship, but it lost to UCLA at the College World Series

Amp Lee, a team leader as a sophomore pooled the sportswriters' votes to win the game's MVP and junior quarterback Casey Weldon played solidly for the second game in a row.

The Seminoles finished the season 10-2 and ranked among the nation's Top five for the fourth consecutive season. And, yes, FSU managed to finish just behind the Miami Hurricanes for the fourth consecutive season.

FSU's little use of seniors means 1991 will likely be the season to talk and write about. Many fans are already pinning next season as the one Bobby Bowden finally gets his life-long payoff--a season-ending No. 1 ranking.

For the first time in Coach Pat Kennedy's stint at FSU, the basketball team didn't get invited to a post-season tournament. The Seminoles struggled all season to find a leader, but never did and finished the year at 16-15.

FSU could not replace George McCloud, who took his act to the NBA.

FAMU football team highlights Rattler's winning ways

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Talk of Florida A&M's 1990 athletic accomplishments has to begin with the school's football team.

Coach Ken Riley said it was difficult to pinpoint the most outstanding moment in FAMU's football season, and he wasn't kidding. Not only did the Rattlers win their first-ever Mid Eastern Athletic Conference title, but they went undefeated in MEAC play. They finished their season at 7-4 after a 1-3 start.

After the poor start, the new and enthused Rattlers won the next 6 out of 7 games and "really showed what they were made of," according to Riley, who was named the MEAC Coach of the Year. When pressed, Riley said he thought that the Homecoming contest against South Carolina State and the season-ending blowout of rival Bethune-Cookman were his favorite moments.

But the most meaningful game, according to Riley, was the one against Delaware State, in which the Rattlers put up a whopping fight to hold off the Hornets in the last few minutes, winning 43-38.

"That game gave us the confidence to go on and win the conference," Riley said. "The whole team gave everything for that win."

FAMU's offense certainly proved itself this year. It established—thanks almost entirely to Tony Ezell—single-season school records for passing yards (2,463), touchdowns passing (22), and passing attempts and completions (300, 147). The offense boasts eight all-MEAC players, including record-setting quarterback Ezell, who set a full dozen single-season, single-game and career passing records. Ezell returns next year to undoubtedly rewrite the record books.

FAMU's premier running back, Amir Rasul, earned himself a seat in the Rattler record arena, too, finishing his career with 2,072 yards to become only the fifth back at FAMU to rush for over 2,000 yards. Rasul also caught 59 passes for 600 yards and six TD's during his FAMU career.

The other all-MEAC players include senior tackle Terry Beauford, guard Robert Frost and kicker Jimmy Vertuno, all first-teamers, and center Wally Williams, receivers Harry Brown and Terry Mickens, a freshman. Vertuno broke virtually every FAMU kicking record and became the school's all-time leading scorer and most accurate field-goal and extra-point man.

FAMU's defense played outstanding as well, despite its youth and early-season criticism. The defensive line, led by second-team All-MEACs Keith Austin, Chris Blue and nose tackle Irvin Clark, who was also named to the Academic All-America team, became a big-play squad in the Delaware State game and pressured the opposition into scoring 20 points or less in the remaining 4 out of 5 games.

FAMU's banner year was a triumph for Coach Riley, who refocused the team after a bleak start and turned the youth-laden team into conference champions.

"I'm so pleased that these young or Tony Dawson. Tharon Mayes played well, leading the team in scoring, but missed eight games due to suspensions.

The FSU baseball team began the season ranked number one by virtually every publication in the country. However, it didn't finish that way. The Seminoles played good baseball all year, but they didn't get a bid to host a regional in the NCAA Tournament. Forced to go to Starkville, Miss., FSU had to face host Mississippi State in the regional final, losing a heart-breaking, one-run game.

Despite the disappointment of not going to the College World Series, Seminole fans have to be happy with the prospect of watching Chris Roberts and Kenny Felder in the next three years.

Both Roberts and Felder turned down pro baseball contracts and came to play at FSU. Felder wowed the crowd and opponents with mammoth home runs, and Roberts showed his versatility with impressive pitching and a strong season at bat.

The Lady Seminoles had a strong season on the softball field. FSU made it to the College World Series where they shocked everyone by beating a great Fresno State team.

The Lady Seminoles finished 47-16, falling to eventual national champion UCLA in the playoffs—all on the arm of Debbie DeJohn, who was the team's only pitcher during the post season.

The school's volleyball team had a successful, but disappointing season. With a nearly all-senior cast, the Lady Seminoles were expected to make it past the NCAA tournament's first round for the first time in three years.

But after finishing third in the Metro and receiving an at-large bid, FSU fell again in the first round, this time to Kentucky. Lady Seminoles Coach Cecile Reynaud will likely be miffed in the midst of a rebuilding season this year wondering what happened in 1990.

FSU's women's basketball team perhaps was the biggest surprise of the year, recording a 21-9 mark and receiving an at-large bed to the NCAA tournament. For the impressive season, Lady Seminoles' Coach Marynell Meadors was selected as the Metro Coach of the Year.

The best things are seemingly yet to come for this team, which returns all five starters and 11 of 14 players.

In fact, it seems for each of FSU's team, the best is still yet to come. In 1991, will the national championship finally come?

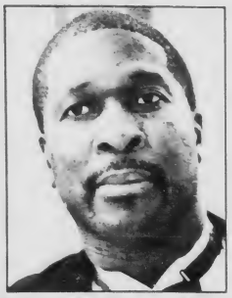
Rattlers done with December; now comes January win-fest

BY MICHAEL HARRIS
STAFF WRITER



"We're going to need a big home crowd behind us to help us beat Deleware State."
—FAMU Coach Willie Booker

So far, 1991 has been a jolly good year for FAMU's men's basketball Coach Willie Booker.

The new year has brought with it the return of 250-pound DeLon Turner, who last year averaged 9.3 points and 5.6 rebounds per game, the use of a re-finished gym all to themselves, and a 89-71 blow-out Saturday over Maryland-Eastern Shore.

To add to this is the possible return of the highly-talented Reginald Finney, who last year averaged 16.4 points and six rebounds per game.

And, it all goes according to past Januarys, Booker's team should make this month a win-fest, turning his 3-5 team around. In the past two seasons, the Rattlers have gone into January with sub-.500 marks, only to come out of the month well above .500. Last year, the Rattlers were 1-6 in December and ended January at 11-7.

This January, FAMU attempts to raise its record to 2-0 when it plays Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference rival Delaware State, 5-4, tonight at 8 p.m. at Gaither Gym.

"We're going to need a big home crowd behind us to help us beat Delaware State," Booker said. "We're definitely going to have our work cut out for us."

Booker's troubles could be eased tonight if star forward Reginald Finney returns. Both Finney and Delon Turner were forced to sit out November and December due to academic troubles. Unlike Turner, who returned Saturday night, Finney will either become eligible to play on Monday or will be red-shirted until next year.

"Since the summer, I've been preparing the team with the understanding that neither Finney nor Turner may return," Booker said. "I don't want to drag Finney on. Life goes past Finney. If he's not back Monday, then we'll go on and he'll just have to wait until next year. It's a shame, though, because it's not his fault."

Booker wouldn't elaborate on Finney's academic troubles.

FAMU's priorities for January are to improve its defensive intensity, rebounding and outside shooting.

"We're not where we want to be," Booker said. "We need to work much harder. We need the shooting of (point guard) Kenneth Davis and (shooting guard) Reginald Kennion to come through. Right now we're shooting about 40 percent. We also need to start rebounding and playing defense like I know we can."

Since November, Booker said that it doesn't matter how many points they score as long as they play with intensity—defense- and rebounding-wise. In their five losses, the Rattlers lost by 45 points to Kansas, 29 to Missouri, 16 to Washington State, 23 to Alabama-Birmingham and 36 to New Orleans. And they've been out rebounded 314 to 276.

To solve their defensive troubles, Booker believes that the team needs to increase their intensity and pressure.

"Right now I'm going with the attitude if you don't work you don't play, sort of like if you don't work you don't eat," Booker said. "And if I use this concept right now, we'd be starving."

Kennion and Davis were both victims of Booker's new attitude as Davis sat out against UAB in the second half and Kennion sat out against Washington, UAB and New Orleans.

Against Maryland-Eastern, with the help of Turner, FAMU, for the first time this season appeared to be intense and yet relaxed.

FAMU point guard Kenny Davis is averaging 12.3 points, and he leads the nation with 3.84 steals a game men are being recognized for their hard work," Riley said. "I'm very proud of our guys and what they accomplished."

FAMU volleyball fans were no less excited about their team's success either, as the Rattlerettes finished as runner-ups in the MEAC with an overall 25-19 record.

Third-year Coach Pamela Reilly guided her squad to its third consecutive MEAC finals appearance as well as securing a third-place finish in the New South Conference Tournamanet. The Rattlerettes' hottest rival, South Carolina State, edged FAMU in their five meetings, 3-2, including the MEAC tournament to win the conference title.

FAMU seniors Tyrona Clark, Irma McClendon and Fabray Smith anchored the squad, with Clark leading the team in kills with 362. Juniors Nicole Wells, Valarie King and Nina Bell also added experience to the Rattlerette lineup with Wells recording 352 kills and 129 service aces.

Bell had a team-high 155 service aces while King and McClendon added 120 and 91, respectively. Sophomore Henrietta Porter scored 83 service aces and was named to the MEAC All-Tournament team and the All-New South Conference second team. Clark was also a member of the MEAC All-Tournament team and the All-New South second team. King garnered first-team All-New South honors and will return to lead next year's club.

FAMU's women's basketball team, off to a 5-4 start this season, has been hampered with illness and injuries, leaving the basketball squad depth-thin. An exciting last-minute win over defending New South Women's Conference champion Georgia Southern 86-85 marked a bright beginning for 1991.

First-year head coach Claudette Farmer said she was very happy with the progress of her club. "The team seems to be open-minded to a new coaches' philosophy," Farmer said. "I know they're working hard to adjust, especially with the injuries and all."

Farmer's team had already gotten the attention of NSWC statistics rankings before the holiday break. The Rattlerettes were tops in scoring margin (+2.0); second in rebound margin (+4.5); tops in field goal percentage defense (.374 percent by opponents) and second in 3-point field-goal defense (.339 percent by opponents).

Individually, Rattlerette senior Donyale Ferguson is leading the team in scoring with 21.3 points per game (5th in the NSWC), minutes played (35.0 avg.), assists (6.1 avg.) and steals with 4.3 per game. True freshman Theodora Allen, a 6-foot-1 Rickards High graduate ranks second in both scoring (15 ppg) and rebounding (7.0 rpg), while 6-foot-1 sophomore Sherrall Bass grabs the most rebounds per game at 7.5 and chips in 7.8 points per outing.

Forward Sherrie Barnes is averaging 7.8 ppg and 3.8 rebounds, while junior guard Shelly Boston is third in the NSWC in steals with 4.3 per game, while adding 5.6 points a game for FAMU.

The Rattlerettes return to Gaither Gym tonight to host Alabama State in the first half of a double-header.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Career progress will come swiftly if you learn from other people's mistakes. Pay attention to what is happening around you. Work to strengthen a parent-child relationship next month. April will bring new financial rewards, letting you pursue a longtime dream. Travel during the summer months. September begins an important period for your career. Resist an urge to gamble in November. A family reconciliation will make the winter holidays especially joyful!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President Millard Fillmore, writer William Peter Blatty, actress Erin Gray, publisher Jann Wenner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Working behind the scenes provides a positive outlet for your energy. Get involved in a charitable project. A new partnership gets off to a great start. Be supportive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The emphasis now is on protecting your reputation. Too much food or drink will affect your productivity. Finish up old business before starting an exciting new project.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Travel and interaction with people from another culture are stimulating. You derive great pleasure from broadening your horizons. Enroll in a special study program.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Project an image that reflects your real self. A new wardrobe or hairstyle could do wonders! A physical fitness program is an excellent investment of time and money. Romance gradually intensifies.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work harder to increase your personal resources. When tackling major projects, be aware of your limitations; consult experts when necessary. Your friends offer valuable encouragement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A long campaign ends in victory! You receive the recognition you deserve. Share information and broaden your database. The contacts you make now will open new doors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your psychic awareness increases; trust your intuition and use your new insights judiciously. Getting to the root of a chronic problem will relieve domestic stress. Be more tolerant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An older person helps you see the underlying meaning of someone's actions. Get in touch with a former employer or co-worker if you are job-hunting. Your loved ones respond better to praise than reproaches.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The pace at work accelerates. Avoid stressful situations by working on your own whenever possible. Take a chance on making your dreams become reality. A love relationship is serene.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Loved ones are more attuned to your needs now. Be objective about the image you project. Someone influential will be impressed by your flexible approach to changing circumstances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ingenuity will lift you out of the winter doldrums. Loosen up and have some fun! Staying in shape can be pleasurable if you exercise with someone you care about. Discuss the future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your artistic touch can be a major career asset. Be sure those in authority know what you can do. Do not be afraid to make major decisions; your instincts are right on target.

Lady Seminoles in action out of town

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Tonight marks the beginning the Florida State's women's basketball team's 14-game Metro Conference schedule and its bid for an NCAA Tournament appearance.

FSU, 6-2 with impressive wins over intra-state rivals Miami and Florida, went 11-3 in the Metro last season to win the title and make a brief run for the National Championship.

The Lady Seminoles meet Virginia Tech—a team they beat in both meetings last season—at Blacksburg, Va. FSU has a head of steam built up after beating both state foes during the holiday break and have extra punch since adding 6-foot-2 center Tracy Walker back to the lineup after elbow problems.

Most rewarding for the FSU squad has to be the improvement in its free-throw shooting. A sore spot in the early season, the Lady Seminoles beat the Gators, 79-78, mostly on the strength of their 20 for 28 free throws. Chris Davis went 5 for 6 and Tia Paschal went 7 for 8 at the line to lift FSU to the win.

Paschal led all scorers with a career-high 23 points, while sophmore Danielle Ryan added 11 points and 10 rebounds. Davis scored 21 points and Wanda Burns chipped in 19.

In the Miami game, FSU placed five players in double figures in a decisive 76-62 win. FSU scored on 17 of 24 free throws, and the recovered Tracy Walker scored 13 points in 13 minutes of play. Center Chantelle Dustman led FSU with 15 points and Davis sunk 14 points and had 11 rebounds. Burns and Paschal each added 13 points in the contest.

FSU is tied with Louisville in the conference standings at 6-2. Southern Miss has the same percentage points at 3-1. Tulane, 3-2, is fourth, and South Carolina, 3-3, is fifth.

The Lady Seminoles, who have fluctuated among the nation's top 20 to 30 teams, return to Tully Gym for a two-game conference homestand against Cincinnati on January 12 and Louisville on January 14. FSU's only other home game this month following the Louisville contest is against Arkansas on Jan. 21.

Prison term ends for Rose today

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

MARION, Ill.—Pete Rose, who spent his days in a prison machine shop while his Cincinnati Reds played in the World Series, will be released from jail Monday after serving a five-month sentence for tax fraud.

The release of baseball's all-time hit leader from federal prison camp is to come at 9:30 a.m. EST. At his request, the media will be kept 50 yards from the prison gate and a car waiting for him. He is expected to be headed for Cincinnati.

Rose still must serve a 1,000-hour court-imposed probation, working at a boys center and five inner-city Cincinnati schools as a teacher's aide beginning Jan. 14. He will be assigned to physical fitness and health teachers.

Rose, 49, was banned from baseball in 1989 following an investigation that disclosed he bet on baseball games.

He pleaded guilty to filing false income tax forms in 1985 and 1987, and admitted to hiding more than $354,000 in income from gambling, personal appearances and the sale of memorabilia. Included in that figure was $129,000 he got for selling the bat with which he broke Ty Cobb's record for hits in 1985.

Rose arrived at prison Aug. 8, two days before the court-imposed deadline. Fred Apple, executive assistant to the warden, said the former Cincinnati Reds star "did an adequate job" at the prison.

Rose, who worked in the machine shop, watched on television as his beloved Reds swept Oakland in the World Series.

Rose's stay was routine and prison officials denied he received preferential treatment. The only incident came when a free-lance reporter and his wife from Mississippi, working for the tabloid "National Enquirer," smuggled two cameras into the camp and took pictures of Rose.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Sign-ups for Florida State's intramural basketball league start today and end Jan. 16. The mandatory captains meeting and roster turn in will be Jan. 16 at 4 p.m. at Moore Auditorium.

Hussein reportedly asks for extension

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

A Western diplomatic source in Baghdad said Monday Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is seeking an extension of the United Nations' Jan. 15 deadline to withdraw his forces from Kuwait, an idea the Bush administration flatly rejected.

In Washington, meanwhile, House Speaker Thomas Foley said Congress will begin debate this week on what further action the United States should take on the Persian Gulf crisis, and the White House said it expected Capitol Hill to be "very supportive" of the administration's policy.

Iraqi airmen flew six military helicopters to Saudi Arabia Monday, but it was not immediately known if they were defecting, the Pentagon said.

Four of the helicopters landed at Ra's al Khafji, about 11 miles inside Saudi territory from Kuwait. The other two helicopters set down in the Saudi desert, "apparently while running out of fuel," a Pentagon spokesman said.

"We have no further information at this time," the spokesman said. "I can't speculate whether they defected. Right now, I can't say whose custody they are in."

In Baghdad, the Western European diplomat, who requested anonymity, said Hussein asked influential French legislator Michel Vanuzelle to help arrange a new U.N. Security Council meeting to extend the deadline for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face possible force from U.S.-led multinational forces arrayed against it in the Gulf region.

Vouzelle, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the French National Assembly and a close friend of French President Francois Mitterrand, met with Hussein in Baghdad for four hours Saturday.

"... Saddam Hussein could be ready to talk about withdrawal from Kuwait, and a peaceful settlement of the Gulf crisis, if the deadline set by the Security Council is extended," the diplomat said.

But the diplomat also said Hussein would continue to insist on a link between the Gulf crisis and other Middle East issues, with priority being given to the Palestinian question. The Bush administration has refused to recognize such a link.

In Washington, White House spokesperson Marlin Fitzwater said the Bush administration also rejected any deadline extension. "The U.N. resolution is firm," he said

Committee nearer to replacement for Sliger

Bernard Sliger

The wheels are grinding and the clock is ticking as the March 1 deadline to find a replacement for retiring Florida State University President Bernard Sliger gets closer.

With less than two months to go in the nationwide hunt, the Presidential Search Committee—made up of faculty, alumni and students—is putting in long hours sorting through the 96 nominees and 27 applicants for the post, according to committee Chair Larry Abele. The job will pay about $150,000 a year.

"The pool of nominees is very strong, very high caliber," said Abele, who also chairs the FSU biology department.

Of the 27 applicants, one is a woman. It is not known how many of the applicants are minorities, since they do not usually reveal their race on their resumes. But Abele said he thinks about three applicants are black.

The deadline for nominations was midnight Friday, and applications will be accepted until Jan. 14. The list will be narrowed down to "25 or 30" candidates Jan. 22.

Sliger announced last fall that he would leave the school Aug. 1, after more than 15 years of service. He is credited with bringing FSU into the national spotlight, and many feel his shoes will be hard to fill.

Florida State names new financial aid director

BY AMY ELLERSON
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University's newly appointed financial aid director, Bob McCloud, projects that students will receive nearly $20 million in aid this semester—a 50-percent increase over the amount dispersed in the 1989 fall semester, before he took over as the interim director.

"Working conditions were terrible, morale was terrible, and service to students was terrible," said McCloud. "They just did not have the proper leadership."

The university hired McCloud as the interim director in December 1989, after former director Edward Marsh retired under criticism for an audit showing several problems within the department. Since then, McCloud says, the entire financial aid office has been restructured.

Dean of Undergraduate Studies Elisabeth Muhlenfeld named McCloud the new director in December. The appointment process was delayed for nearly a year. The school did not have enough money last January to offer candidates a competitive salary.

As interim director, McCloud received an annual salary of $60,000. He was given a $4,000 raise when he was appointed permanently to the director position, according to Muhlenfeld.

"It always seems to be appropriate to me to reward a job well done," Muhlenfeld said. "The office

FSU students head for Persian Gulf

BY PHIL JACKSON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

As the semester begins, it's business as usual for most students. But for some there won't be any signing up for classes or buying books—they're going to Saudi Arabia instead.

Sunday morning at 10, the 400th Military Police unit, a Tallahassee Army reserve group, left Tallahassee for Ft. Stewart, Ga. It faces the prospect of war in the Middle East, as the United Nations deadline for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or be forced out looms just a week away.

"Over 250 people will be going to Ft. Stewart. We will stay there for approximately three weeks," said Col. Tim Kerns, commanding officer of the unit, which would oversee prisoners of war. "We will then go to Saudi Arabia and points there about or come home."

The soldiers, including several students who had to drop out of Florida State University when they were called to active duty, had mixed reactions to the prospect of going to Saudi Arabia.

"I am excited about going to see a new culture and a new land, but I wish it could be under better circumstances," said Chris Shipley, a junior biology major who will serve as a medic.

The biggest challenge is "to adjust our lifestyle to accommodate the people we are helping," he said.

Other soldiers also expressed concern about the Saudi Arabian culture.

"They've had their culture since the time of Jesus," said

FAMU journalism students get boost thanks to grant

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Florida A&M University students graduating with degrees in journalism may be more polished and confident thanks to a $1 million grant from the Miami-based Knight Foundation.

The School of Journalism, Media and Graphic Arts received the grant Friday. It will be used to establish a Knight Chair in Journalism at the university. Robert Ruggles, dean of the school, said the money would be targeted at specific students.

"They distinctly said the money was to be used for journalism (students)," Ruggles said Monday. "This money will be used in leading the effort of enhancement. We want to increase the students' confidence in what they can do and tell them not to be shy or apprehensive and tell them to be assertive within the bounds of decency."

Some of the money will be used to sponsor field trips to communication centers, lectures and seminars, while some of it will be spent on hiring a professional journalist to a faculty position.

The university applied for the grant in the fall and was one of three of 34 schools that applied for the money to receive it. Ruggles said he expects the money by the end of the fiscal year this summer.

Virginia Henke, communications director of the Knight Foundation, said this is the first time the philanthropic organization has awarded grants.

"We gave it to (FAMU) because they have one of the finest programs in a historically black college and it also has a very fine journalism program," she said in a telephone interview from Miami.

Ruggles said he hopes the money will help minorities land jobs in newsrooms. According to Ruggles, there is a shortage of minorities working in journalism today.

"We want to make it impossible for an editor to say, 'We can't find a qualified minority for this job,' " he said. "That's what we're in the business to do."

Journalism students said the grant will help produce "go-getting" reporters.

"I think it's good because real journalism students need confidence," said Christina Samuels, editor-in-chief of the school newspaper The Famuan. "I was one of the luckier students because I already had confidence, but everyone could use an extra bit of confidence."

Leslie Greene, a 22-year-old student who will intern at the Tallahassee Democrat agreed.

"The more we have, the better it is for the students," she said.

In the past few years, eight of the nine state university presidents have been replaced. In each case, the replacements were from out of state. Two of the current presidents are black, and none are women.

Applications for the post have come from all over the country, and several FSU professors and administrators have applied for the post. They include Provost Gus Turnbull—second in command to Sliger, Dean of Undergraduate Studies Elisabeth Muhlenfeld, Vice President for University Advancement Jim Pitts, American Studies Director and Professor Leo Sandon and Dean of the School of Theatre Gil Lazier.

Although Democratic state Rep. T.K. Wetherell, an FSU alumnus, was nominated for the post, he had not applied as of Monday afternoon.

has improved in many areas. We're seeing fewer students complaining."

Before McCloud stepped in to revamp the department, Muhlenfeld said, the financial aid office was plagued by poor morale and difficulty in serving students' needs. Within the past year, a "dramatically higher" number of students received financial aid at the beginning of each semester, she added.

Under his leadership, McCloud said, the department has improved staff morale, administered more aid to more students quicker, and educated students and parents on aid application.

"The process students have to go through to get financial aid is a tedious process. We're trying to communicate to students and parents better," McCloud said, adding that one way his office has been able to do this is through offering numerous workshops to students and department staff members.

"There was no organization. Before, the processing was just not getting done," McCloud said. "We've created organization. We're getting back to students quicker."

According to McCloud, approximately 11,000 students received financial aid last semester—30 percent more than the previous fall semester. He said the department dispersed between $40 and $50 million in aid last year.

Now that he is the official director of the financial aid office, McCloud said, he does not plan on making any more changes. He said the emphasis will be on improving the changes made last year.

One bonus to hiring McCloud, Muhlenfeld said, was that the department will not have to adjust to a new leader.

"To my mind, every time there is a new administrator, it involves new organization. It can take energies away from serving students," she said.

Marie Gates, a recent FSU graduate who majored in criminology, "I think we are a bigger shock to them than they are a shock to us."

Margarita, a junior double-majoring in French and Spanish, added, "They treat their women like third-class citizens. I didn't join the army to go overseas where they treat their women as third-class citizens. It's morally wrong."

Margarita, who refused to give her last name, will also serve as a medic.

"I'm religious. I'm so scared," she said. "You have to pray for peace. I really feel bad for the people who have had to stay there for Christmas. There have been a lot of snake bites and insects. It gets cold in the desert at night."

Gates said other aspects of the culture would also be hard to adjust to.

"I'm used to living with a TV and VCR. It's going to be a big change," said Gates, who is trained to be a prison guard.

Al Perez, a junior majoring in international affairs, said there will be "a pause" in his life because of the Gulf crisis.

"You have mixed feelings because you're leaving your place," he said. "Judging from our observations, we will be home soon."

Perez added that public support is important to the troops in Saudi Arabia.

"Don't forget us," he said. "Even if the people don't like who's in charge, don't take it out on the servicemen."

The real question

Once again, tragedy has struck El Salvador.

Last Wednesday, an American helicopter carrying three U.S. airmen over a war zone was shot down by Salvadoran rebels. Two of the three men apparently survived the crash, and were pulled from the wreckage.

The rest of the story is in dispute. The U.S. asserts that the men were then executed with bullets to the head; the guerillas maintain that the men died from wounds sustained during the downing of the helicopter. Different accounts of what happened support each argument.

But whether the men were executed is not the only question that needs to be answered.

Much to the chagrin of the Bush administration, Congress this year reduced its annual military aid package to El Salvador by half, to a still-substantial $40 million. The cuts were prompted by the failure of the Salvadoran government to bring to justice members of the military who are believed to have killed six Jesuit priests in El Salvador more than a year ago.

But the death of three U.S. airmen is already being used by the administration as a convenient excuse to nix the cuts and resume full aid. Indeed, Secretary of State James Baker made such a call Sunday.

The legislation mandating the cuts allows the aid to be restored if the guerillas mount a major offensive, or threaten negotiations currently in process with the Salvadoran government. Because the rebels have recently stepped up their military activities, the Bush administration has already been clamoring for resumed aid.

The death of the airmen will probably ensure that their wish is granted. But Baker, the rest of the Bush administration, and those members of Congress hoping to filter more money to El Salvador's goverment should consider the consequences: renewed aid will mean that the country's bloody civil war, which has been raging for 10 years, will continue.

The U.S. has long supported right-wing elements in the tiny country, and over the past decade has funneled $3 billion to a government linked to death squads. Yet the guerillas remain strong.

As long as the concentration of wealth and power remain in the hands of a ruthless few, they will have no choice. The current government refuses to consider even moderate land reform or minor checks on the military. As long as U.S. aid continues, it doesn't have to. Under those circumstances, atrocities on both sides cannot help but continue.

What happened to the three American servicemen was brutal and reprehensible. But over the past 10 years, 70,000 Salvadorans have been killed in a civil war that has only managed to last so long because of U.S. support for a regime with one of the worst human rights records in the world.

What happened to those 70,000 was brutal and reprehensible, too.

The Bush administration needs to realize that stepping up aid to El Salvador will only ensure that atrocities like last Wednesday's continue. The real question it needs to ask itself in light of El Salvador's latest tragedy is whether the three airmen should have been there in the first place.

The answer is no.

Sophomoric

Editor:

I am the first to defend the people's right to know, but if the report in the Dec. 14 Tallahassee Democrat is accurate, a totally insensitive Flambeau reporter, perhaps on assignment from a totally insensitive Flambeau editor, telephoned someone they thought was a dead girl's mother to ask how she felt about her daughter's death.

This was blatant sensationalism, nothing more. The public has no right to that particular information. A bereaved family does have the right to grieve in private. Incidents like this one cause public indignation over unwarranted intrusion by the press into private lives. Unfortunately, responsible reporters and editors are painted with the same broad brush as the offenders.

Once again, the Flambeau has demonstrated its sophomoric level of journalism. They still need a faculty adviser—or better yet, a keeper.

Jan Dughi

Editor's note: In light of the particular circumstances surrounding the death of the FSU law school student, the Flambeau felt it was necessary to contact the deceased's family for a response. The decision to do so was made only after weighing the family's state of mind with the situation surrounding the death of their daughter.

New perspective

Editor:

This letter is in response to letters concerning the Middle East crisis that appeared in the Dec. 11, 1990 issue of the Florida Flambeau.

To Mostafa: You are right, we should have trusted Iran all along.

To Majorie: Your letter is valid and appropriate. I am sure you ride a bicycle everywhere to ease U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

To Dakine: You are truly pure of heart. Instead of making political statements you show a concern that is, unfortunately, being overlooked.

To Mary: How depressing!

I am sorry I cannot write more. I am very busy this week. No, not with finals. My Army Reserve unit is on alert and is making preparations to mobilize. I have completed a will, power of attorney and made arrangements with the university to be gone from three months to life.

While I agree with some of the sentiments of the letters, the arguments are rather moot to me and my fellow soldiers. For us, each hour on alert is full of tension and anxiety. We are waiting for our orders and, for some, our destiny.

If my unit is activated, all the second guessing will be over. I will gain a new perspective on the crisis, a perspective I have found noticeably absent in the Flambeau. If I go, I will tell all the Flambeau letter writers what the crisis really meant. Unless, of course, I return in one of Mary's somber black bags.

Trump is sexist

Editor:

Nirvanna (sic) Trump just won divorce on grounds of mental cruelty. It would seem the grounds were just as Donald Trump is parading on public display several implied naked exhibitionists, not only in front of his friends and family but to television viewers, including innocent children in average families. We are bombarded nightly by this Hollywood spectacle. The videos of his model mistresses as seductresses are lewd. This is the same as soft porn or "girlie" magazines portraying to the whole world that American womanhood is made up of seducers and not homemakers. He is sexist.

In certain third world societies, women are respected as matriarchs, not as seducers, and there is little incidence of the horrific child abuse we have here at home. Perhaps there is a connection if lack of respect for women transfers to lack of respect for children. We have not gotten to the bottom of the reason for the enormity of violent child abuse in this country yet, but a commercial culture and lack of reverence for women and life in general in the Western culture must surely be at the bottom of it. The Pope told Africans to reject that Western culture.

Donald Trump has gone through women as if they were merchandise and his Trump Towers on New York's East Side displaced low-income renters so that millionaires might have private orgies go undisturbed. Little do the powerful know of the consequences of their follies. Some of them must have made their money on these "girlie" magazines and escapades that commercialized American womanhood, such as Madison Avenue.

Yea, Saddam's got chemical weapons, but guess who helped get 'em

BY JACK MCCARTHY
STAFF WRITER

Hell spawned a new interviewer. David Frost deserves every cheap shot he gets, especially after his cotton-candy, fawning interview with George Bush on PBS last week. After the "interview" was thankfully concluded, I found myself screaming, "I demand a urine test!"

Surely Frost had ingested some brain change medication. How else can one explain his serene, stony non-response when Bush, reeking of insincerity, pretended to be overwhelmed with grief over an Amnesty International report detailing Iraq's violations of human rights in Kuwait? I'm fairly certain it was ecstasy; he definitely had an "everything is beautiful" attitude.

If Frost can get Saddam and Bush off speed and on ecstasy I may yet forgive him for his crimes against journalism.

Now a sober-minded Frost would've reminded Bush that in the past, when Amnesty International and other human rights groups were condemning Iraq for human rights violations—most notably the gassing of Kurdish civilians—he was showering Saddam with goodwill in the form of arms, loans and credits. And more.

The rest of the story

For the definitive, sad story of how the U.S. plied Iraq with weapons during the Reagan-Bush years, see Murray Waas's well-documented investigative piece, "Gulfgate: How the U.S. Secretly Armed Iraq," in the Dec. 18 Village Voice. Waas' description of Bush's role in building Saddam's menacing war potential gives new meaning to the word hypocrisy.

"During the Reagan years Bush was an architect of the U.S. tilt toward Iraq. During his own administration, the flow of money, computers and chemicals increased dramatically. If Saddam Hussein is "Hitler," then Bush is Neville Chamberlain."

Waas' most startling revelation is that the nerve gas that Saddam may use on American troops is only possible because the Bush administration allowed the sale of "precursor chemicals necessary for the manufacture of nerve gas" to Iraq. More outrageous is the fact that Bush sold these weapons to Saddam over the objections of the Defense Department and the CIA.

Any American soldier still in possession of their critical faculties who reads Waas' piece would probably share the sentiment of the wit who said of George Bush's eagerness to send soldiers to die for his sins:

"Following George Bush into the Persian Gulf is like following Neil Bush into a savings and loan."

When doves cry

Next to Saddam on George Bush's hate list must be Pat. I refer to right-wing columnist and professional anti-communist Patrick Buchanan. Buchanan, a hawk's hawk, has written about 100 columns denouncing Bush for wanting to use force to oust Saddam from Kuwait.

COMMENTARY

FOR WHAT IT'S WORTH

Pat's latest sortie on Bush begins with an outrageous quote from a "senior gulf official" which appeared in the Wall Street Journal:

"You think I want to send my son to die for Kuwait? We have our white slaves from America to do that."

Buchanan proceeds with massive air strikes against Bush's policy of putting U.S. troops on the front lines while Arab countries urging us on to war contribute little. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak has been the staunchest advocate for military action against Saddam, and yet the AWOL, U.S.-equipped, Egyptian army sits on the sidelines. Egypt's token military presence is nothing short of scandalous.

Then, Pat writes, "There are our fighting allies of the Gulf Cooperation Council who have a population equal to Iraq's, but have failed to raise one-tenth of Iraq's forces."

Buchanan's befuddlement at the lack of Arab military participation in George of Arabia's quest to oust Saddam from Kuwait is similar in nature to those critics who can't fathom why Europeans and Japanese are less than gung ho about a war with Saddam.

The reason is simple. The U.S. economy is the most dependent on Gulf petro dollars and our economic competitors—the Europeans and Japan—don't necessarily want us controlling the Gulf any more than they want Saddam to. Hence their ambivalence.

> Waas' most startling revelation is that the nerve gas that Saddam may use on American troops is only possible because the Bush administration allowed the sale of "precursor chemicals necessary for the manufacture of nerve gas" to Iraq.

In the final analysis, Pat, the "white slaves," will die for a dependent American capitalism, not for sheiks and not for Japan or Europe. If Pat could get over his aversion to Marx, or any economist who understands how the world works, he'd be less confused, not to mention enlightened.

The fate of Tadiran and Koors

Tallahassee city commissioners will eventually decide whether or not Koors and Tadiran are in South Africa and in violation of the city's anti-apartheid ordinance. While they're at it they should also investigate the companies' respective economic portfolios.

Articles in the February, May & June '90 issues of The Israel Economist say that both companies are teetering on the edge of bankruptcy, and certain to be up for sale.

Controversy over academic freedom at Auburn watched closely at FSU

BY DOUG MARTIN
STAFF WRITER

Many of the freedoms that Americans take for granted, including that of political and artistic expression, have recently come under attack in well-publicized cases such as the 2 Live Crew obscenity trial in Broward County.

In a less glamourous but no less important instance, a nationally renowned scholar, Charles Curran, was stripped of tenure by the Auburn University president because of his religious views. University officials across the nation are following the case, and officials and professors at Florida State University are no exception.

"This is a very important case, not just because of academic freedom violations, but because of the separation of church and state issue as well," said David Gruender, an FSU philosophy professor active with the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), a nationwide faculty union.

"The Curran case has shown that there is no foolproof way to protect academic freedom," said Alan Mabe, president of the FSU Faculty Senate.

Last April, Auburn offered Curran an endowed scholar chair in religion, a tenured full professorship. Curran accepted the offer, but was concerned about the fact that Auburn is on the censure list of the AAUP. The AAUP lists colleges which have not adhered to certain guidelines governing tenure, promotion and academic freedom set by the American Association of Colleges.

Curran said Auburn officials assured him that university procedures were fundamentally in accord with the principles of the AAUP and that the university was committed to getting rid of the censure.

A few days after Auburn offered Curran the position, the issue of his tenure was discussed by the Auburn board of trustees. Some members of the Auburn Faculty Senate allege that pressure was put on the trustees by both the Archbishop of Mobile, Ala., Oscar Lipscombe, and Gov. Guy Hunt—a former Primitive Baptist minister—to rescind Curran's tenure at Auburn.

Soon after the meeting, that is what Auburn President James Martin did. Martin cited Curran's controversial background in the Roman Catholic Church and other reasons which still have not been publicly released.

Curran is considered controversial because he was censured by the Vatican while he was at Catholic University for his views on sexual ethics. Curran was a leader of a 1968 faculty protest at Catholic of a papal ban on oral contraception. Because of that censure, he was barred from teaching theology at Catholic University despite being tenured there more than 20 years.

According to Terrence Tilley, a professor in the FSU religion department and an expert on Catholic issues, Curran's view on oral contraception is not the problem—that view is supported by a majority of Catholic theologians. Rather, Tilley said, Curran is a victim of a power struggle between the Vatican hierarchy and the Catholic theological community over who should control debate on church matters.

Student dies over break

BY KRIS ELVIN
STAFF WRITER

A 21 year old Florida State University student was killed in a jet ski accident near Largo over the winter holidays.

Matthew S. Barbour, of 1830 S. Oak Park Drive in Clearwater, was fatally injured Dec. 27 around 2:15 p.m. when his Kawasaki 300 jet ski was hit by a Kawasaki TS Waverunner driven by 19-year-old Bridget O'Leary. O'Leary and Barbour had been riding in the water off the Belleair Causeway when the accident occurred.

According to Pinellas County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Greg Tita, witnesses said Barbour's jet ski was not moving at the time of the accident, but he was still standing up on the scooter.

"O'Leary hit him almost dead head on," he said.

Tita said the preliminary coroner's report listed the cause of death as blunt trauma to the chest area. Friends of Barbour also said his windpipe was crushed.

Although there have been reports of rumors saying that one or both of the parties in the accident had been drinking, Tita could not confirm that.

"At this point, none of the rumors have been substantiated by the investigation," he said.

Tita said blood was taken from both O'Leary and Barbour and is being tested for the presence of alcohol and illegal drugs. The results won't be in before Friday, he said.

Matt Barbour was a junior at FSU and a criminology major, said his father, Bill Barbour. Matt Barbour was also an officer in the Kappa Alpha Order fraternity and an officer candidate in the Marine Corps. KA President John Yearty said the student was a leader in the organization.

"He was just a go-getter and always enthusiastic about everything that was going on, whether it was having fun or work or whatever he may be doing," Yearty said.

Capt. John Love, Matt's commanding officer in a Marine Corps officer training class, agreed.

"He was of the highest caliber—built of sound moral fiber and unquestionable integrity," he said.

The elder Barbour said his son was popular and many of his friends and fraternity brothers attended his Dec. 31 funeral.

"He probably had more friends than anybody I knew," he said.

As a result of the accident, Bill Barbour said, he is going to ask the members of the KA fraternity to help him lobby for tighter laws regulating jet ski use.

"We want to see if things should be done—if anything can be done—to keep this from happening to anyone else's child."

Officer assaulted

A Tallahassee Police Department officer was injured Sunday evening after he stopped a suspect driving a stolen truck, TPD spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said Monday.

Officer Bill Hurlbut was in the area of 1010 N. Macomb St. around 11 p.m. when he saw a man driving a 1988 Chevrolet pick-up truck which had been reported stolen to the Leon County Sheriff's Office earlier that day. When Hurlbut pulled the truck over, 19-year-old David Lee Arnett got out and walked away, Kiracofe said.

Police said Arnett, who gave his address as 4009 Morgan Road, struggled with Hurlbut when the officer grabbed his arm. During the confrontation, a knife and a .25 caliber, semi-automatic pistol fell from a bag Arnett was carrying.

"After a long struggle, Officer Hurlbut managed to gain control of the suspect and place him under arrest," Kiracofe said.

Arnett was charged with driving with a suspended license, auto theft, resisting arrest with violence, resisting arrest without violence, battery on a law enforcement officer, carrying a concealed weapon, carrying a concealed firearm, possession of a concealed weapon in the commission of a felony, possession of a concealed firearm in the commission of a felony and possession of a firearm and weapon by a convicted felon.

He was taken to the Leon County Jail and is being held without bond.

Hurlbut was treated and released from the Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center Sunday night for minor scratches and bruises.

The issue is who can speak about it and when," said Tilley.

In response to the president's memo, the Auburn Faculty Senate sent two major objections.

We were concerned that the tenure procedure had been compromised and that the trustees had intruded in the tenure process," said Gary Mullen, Auburn's faculty senate president, in a telephone interview.

FSU has a similar promotion and tenure system, but the heads of two faculty unions say a similar request to academic freedom could not happen at FSU.

We have more of a precedent of strong faculty and academic governance," said Harry Goldman, president of the FSU chapter of the United Faculty of Florida, the collective bargaining agent for university faculty.

Neither Goldman nor Eugene Kaelin, head of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors, said they could remember an instance of academic violations at FSU of the kind that are allegedly occurring at Auburn.

Because of close faculty monitoring and a sympathetic administration, Goldman added this type of violation, while technically possible, is unlikely.

The heads of the local unions point out that while FSU President Bernard Sliger was very sympathetic to faculty concerns, they are uncertain about the future because Sliger is leaving.

We don't know what Sliger's replacement will be like," said Goldman.

The AAUP is currently investigating Curran's case and the Auburn Faculty Senate will further discuss the issue this month.

One upon the faculty senate's request, no confidence in the president," said Charles Brown, an Auburn philosophy professor and member of the faculty senate. The word 'effective' and Martin's administration."

Meanwhile, Curran will continue to appeal the denial of tenure. His deadline for appealing to the Auburn Board of Trustees is Monday, Jan. 14.

Curran said he hopes the controversy surrounding his case will be resolved.

Local coffee shop provides lots of stimuli

BY LAUREN V. LUSTIG

Yianni's is what you'd call a hang out.

Once inside, you can tuck yourself away in the corner near the fireplace and read Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass and celebrate natural law. Hide out in a booth behind the refrigerator, sip Chablis and debate deconstructionism with a critical theorist wanna-be. Or sit near the front window, chug Copenhagen decaf and watch the hippies outside blow bubbles for peace.

Yianni's, Tallahassee's latest and most atmospheric coffeehouse, is definitely fertile ground for stimulation—whether it arises from a strong cup of cappuccino, a game of Scrabble or a good old fashioned intellectual bull session.

"The shakers and the movers and the shakers and the movers to be come here," says Yianni, owner of the shop which opened in October.

Although some armchair folks hang here, there are no cushy arms on the red and green chairs strategically spotted around the room. Just regular square tables and a comfortable, quaint ambiance ascending from the wooden floor to the wooden fans on the ceiling.

"I want you to come here and feel like you're in your own living room," says Yianni Palos, a native of Greece.

The place boasts a striking copper bar top with brass railings left over from the days of Goatlips, (a former establishment) and a section semi-cornered off as a playground for local musicians. Every day of the week there's some kind of noise wafting in the background, grooving over the many checker, backgammon and chess games. If naught to be found in the way of live entertainment, there's always the CD cassette player on a shelf over the bar. Yianni said he mostly likes to play jazz and the customers seem to like it best, too.

Yianni, owner of Yianni's coffee shop on Tennessee Street, sips his twentieth cup of the day.

Decked in a teal button-down shirt, blue jeans and penny loafers, Yianni floats to and fro around the bar, talking and joking with customers. His quick witted and friendly spirit spark his brown eyes, and his casual manner adds a certain lightness to the place. In Greece, says Yianni, every

Quadraphonic gone but not forgotten

BY MARTIN ALLEN
STAFF WRITER

DEAD FORMAT SOCIETY PART TWO

Anybody out there who remembers the first in this irregular series of columns on the subject of planned obsolescence might recall a statement I made to the effect that the compact disc would probably be replaced by something else in a few years. Well, I was wrong. It's happened already.

Make no mistake about this, the manufacturers are definitely plugging something else in order to separate you from even more of your hard-earned money. It's not something completely different, but rather an extension of pre-existing technology.

They're calling it "Q" sound, and They promise that it will deliver full spectrum, live concert quality sound. For only an additional dollar or two per disc, of course.

Well, here's a little news flash for you. It was invented more than 20 years ago but it was known by the slightly longer name of quad. Short for quadraphonic. In Latin, quadra means four and phonic is from a Greek root meaning sound. Add them together and you get four part sound.

Quad was available in two formats: LP (that's record album for those of you who've already forgotten), and yes, those pesky 8 tracks. The major disadvantage to the system was that you would have to buy some new equipment. But since when have Americans ever been afraid of that?

Since they invented Quad, that's when. It was a marketing disaster only rivaled by such great blunders as the Edsel. They couldn't seem to give the things away.

One of the major difficulties was explaining to people the technique of mixing. The fact that you had four separate and distinct channels of sound coming out of four speakers might have been too much for people still getting used to color television to handle. Maybe it was the fact that what they were selling wasn't so much something new as merely improved. Maybe everybody was so stoned that they already heard things in more than two channels anyway.

A quad system is distinguished from ordinary stereo systems of the period in two distinct manners. A quad turntable is gigantic. They are, on the average, twice the size and weight of a standard turntable. Remember, this is still in the days of analog technology. No doubt if they were made today, they would be just about the same size as everything else.

A quad tape player can be identified by looking at the heads. You'll find eight stripes where a standard player only has two.

Whatever the reasons why, within a few short years quad was history. It's been left for people like me who live at thrift shops and flea markets to rescue it and keep it from dying out completely.

So what about the Q CD? Well, same old? Probably. After all, this is the 90s. I just have my doubts that it can deliver a full 360 degrees worth of sound out of only two speakers. Maybe in a few more years they'll come out again only this time with three speaker units. Hey, did somebody say something fly past the window?

coffee was a coffee shop. There are no more here in America than there are people who are too busy to have conversation.

As they talk about business they don't have time for the mediocre coffee they're drinking, he said.

Frank Iannuzzi, who owns Yianni's with his wife Anna, is the opposite. He stays on the premises at least nine hours a day, six days a week. He demands that his customers respect each other and the establishment. You're not the host here, you can't say shoot before 7 a.m.

But the coffeehouse hasn't had its share of problems. Yianni and his staff seem to have a good rapport with customers.

Recently one Yianni's customer made some big waves in Tallahassee's political scene. Tony Welch, a prominent Tallahassee lawyer, Democratic activist and a group of his friends have been meeting at Yianni's on Wednesday evenings over the past few months to discuss the Legislature and other issues of concern to the coffeehouse set.

Most of Yianni's customers are students, but there are also professionals, artists and writers. The coffeehouse is a place where all types can meet and mingle. The good food, coffee and atmosphere are the main attractions.

Yianni's, located on Tennessee Street next to Hutton's Deli, is open 9 a.m. to 2 a.m. weekdays and 8 p.m. to 3 a.m. weekends.

Booker's Rattlers, in midst of chaos, lose to Hornets, 100-87

BY MICHAEL HARRIS

If only Willie Booker could get a break.

In fact, the Florida A&M coach should almost be commended for his team's 100-87 loss last night to Delaware State at Gaither Gym. Under the circumstances Booker's dealing with, the loss could have been far more frightening.

Booker's list of headaches: he didn't get the return of academic-troubled Reginald Finney, who is still awaiting the school's okay to play; he lost starting guard Reginald Kennion possibly for the season due to a recurring knee injury; he had three walk-ons and sixth man Rodney Staten not even show up for the game; and forward DeLon Turner, a big offensive force, considered quitting the team after the game.

"We may need to look at going with only 10 players for the rest of the season," Booker said. "Kennion may be lost for the season, and Staten and a few walk-ons didn't show up."

FAMU fell to 3-6 overall and 1-1 in the Mid Eastern Athletic Conference. Deleware State improved to 6-4 and 1-0.

With Kennion, the Rattlers lose 10.4 points a game, but the loss of his defensive ability will be felt the most. Staten, who averaged 17 minutes a game, was also a key on the defensive end.

The lack of a bench kept Booker from being able to make key substitutions when his players got into foul trouble and got tired. Two FAMU players—Kenny Davis and Kelvin Daniles—fouled out and two—Copeland Jackson and Joey McGear—had four fouls. Each of the players were relied on heavily.

Turner, a leading scorer for the Rattlers last year who sat out the fall semester, was frustrated after hitting just 2 of 13 field-goal attempts. Booker had a 30-minute meeting with Turner after the game.

"DeLon Turner was just out of shape. He wants to quit because he wants more," Booker said. "He wants

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

TUESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your strong individualistic tendencies will not go unnoticed. Give more thought to your long-term financial security. March will bring a unique investment offer. Someone you meet in June will remind you of a lost love. Between August and October, new business expansion will boost your earning potential. November is the best time to take a different professional direction. Visit relatives next December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Elvis Presley, rock star David Bowie, singer Shirley Bassey, journalist Charles Osgood.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for quiet meditation. What do you really want? Put your thoughts to paper; some ideas come only once and then are lost forever. A personal relationship is on the mend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be good to yourself today! A massage or nap could work wonders. Devote more time to creative projects. Your imagination gives you a big edge over the competition. Emphasize your special skills.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): [illegible]

CANCER (June 21-July 22): [illegible]

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): [illegible] anything flashy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You find a better way to do your job when you consult someone with more experience. People want to please you; be an open book! A good day to negotiate and sign contracts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Certain business arrangements may suddenly fall through; be careful not to provoke anyone. Romance is more exciting than in the recent past. Partner responds beautifully when you take the initiative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Before entering negotiations, it's a smart idea to review where things stand. Quick thinking will prevent your making a costly mistake. Seek a second opinion before signing a contract.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): [illegible]

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): [illegible]

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): [illegible]

Rattlerettes cruise, then hang on for win over Lady Hornets

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

After leading by as many as 16 points in the second half, the Florida A&M women's basketball team must have figured it could relax. It almost cost them the game.

The Rattlerettes, 6-4, survived a long cold spell and held off Alabama State, 87-81, Monday night in front of 1,219 at Gaither Gym.

FAMU used its superior size to jump to an early lead as 6-foot-2 Polly Innerarity and 6-foot-1 Theodora Allen combined to score the Rattlerettes' first 15 points.

"We knew that we were bigger than them coming in," first-year FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer said. "Our plan was to exploit that until they collapsed on us and then get our outside game going."

The Lady Hornets almost overcame their lack of size with their athleticism and hustle. But the ASU players rarely passed the ball, and they shot just 37 percent from the field. The Lady Hornets shot the ball 90 times, 20 more attempts than FAMU.

The biggest ASU gunner of them all was ASU guard Lisa McMullen. The 5-foot-7 junior, who entered the contest averaging over 30 points per game, made just 8 of 31 field goal attempts to finish with 24 points.

After having their lead cut to 59-54, the Rattlerettes went on a 14-3 run to give them their biggest lead of the game, 73-57. But the game was far from over.

> 'We knew that we were bigger than them coming in. Our plan was to exploit that until they collapsed on us and then get our inside game going.'
> —FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer

The Lady Hornets never quit shooting the ball, especially 3-pointers, and they pulled within six points on numerous occasions.

At the same time, the Rattlerettes were really struggling from the free throw line, making only 22 of 41 from the charity stripe.

"Our free-throw shooting concerns me," Farmer said. "We've been poor in that area, especially down the stretch."

Allen led the way for the Rattlerettes with 25 points and 11 rebounds, both game highs, but her coach believes the freshman is still adjusting.

"Theodora did a real nice job scoring and rebounding, but she is turning the ball over too much down low," Farmer said.

The Rattlerettes now hit the road where they face New South Women's Athletic Conference foe Mercer on Thursday.

FAMU center Theodora Allen scored a game-high 25 points Monday in the Rattlerettes' 87-81 win over Alabama State the ball more, but he needs to wait until he gets in shape."

In his first game back, Turner scored 16 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in 22 minutes. However, he's practiced with the team only since January.

Booker can at least be happy that he has Turner in the line up. Finney, the team's second-leading scorer last year, is still questionable, but Booker said the probability of his return is not much. Booker would not discuss the details of Finney's situation.

As if Booker's troubles aren't great enough, he believes last night's officiating didn't help.

"The officials took us out of the game. It's the worst officiating I've ever been in. It was horrendous. Officials were only calling rough calls on us, and I usually don't complain about officials."

New Governor promises to renew faith in government

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Promising to renew a spirit of community, meet fiscal challenges and renew faith in state government, Lawton Chiles took the oath of office Tuesday and became Florida's 41st governor.

"In my life anything that I've been able to believe I could do, I've been able to do," he said. "I walked the state believing that I could get elected to the United States Senate, and I was. I believed we would limit our construction to $100 and get elected, and we did because I believed it could be."

"In spite of the problems that this state—the state of Florida has—I am full of hope and feel more confident than I ever have in my entire life."

State Supreme Court Justice Leander Shaw swore 60-year-old Chiles in at 12:02 p.m. at the inaugural event dubbed "Florida Jubilee 1991."

Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay, Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford, Comptroller Gerald Lewis, Secretary of State Jim Smith, Attorney General Bob Butterworth, Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher and Education Commissioner Betty Castor also took their oaths of office on the steps of the Old Capitol on Monroe Street.

The hour-and-a-half ceremony was emceed by U.S. Senator Bob Graham, D-Miami, and was attended by thousands—from migrant workers to state legislators. Several people in the crowd held political signs that ranged in topics from the Gulf crisis to increased wages for farmworkers. But they weren't protesting the inauguration, according to sign-carrier Doug Currey.

"We're supporting Lawton and we're supporting our people in the Middle East," 32-year-old Currey said. "We just feel it is not in soldiers' and reservists' best interest or the country's to be fighting at this point."

Chiles walks in

Lawton Chiles had a smile on his face Tuesday when he took the oath of office and became Florida's governor to the sound of a 19-cannon salute. Although several people showed up to protest U.S. involvement in the Middle East, they said they supported Chiles and his plans to cut down waste in state government.

Food festival fulfills Floridians' fancies

From a Marilyn Monroe impersonator to live alligators, Lawton Chiles' inauguration day in Tallahassee Tuesday lived up to its billing of a down-home, "y'all come" celebration.

People from all walks of life showed up to see Chiles and his Cabinet sworn in Tuesday morning, then took in the afternoon street festival and went on to dance the night away at a concert at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center.

The inauguration was one of the most informal ever held in Tallahassee and everyone seemed to appreciate that.

"This should have this every year," said Tallahasseean Vivian Moore. "They should start from every year."

The biggest draws were the booths run by the several blocks of host cities. Miami-Dade offering free grove-ripened and squeezed oranges from Jack Watson's Miami Wave Juice Company at the "Florida Jubilee," and several people said they'd eaten so much they felt like they'd pop.

The Sandbar Restaurant from Anna Maria, Florida—which is owned by one of Chiles' sons—served up 2,000 conch fritters and 100 pounds of shrimp in less than three hours. Another booth, sponsored by a Chiles supporter from Jacksonville, dished out 1,200 barbecued chicken halves and 42 gallons of baked beans.

Representatives from Chiles' hometown, Lakeland, handed out cups of citrus fruit salad, while the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association offered strawberries dipped in chocolate fondue and roasted ears of corn.

Claire France drove 45 miles from Mayo to attend the festivities and show her support for Chiles and Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay.

City Commission set to determine General Dynamics' fate Thursday

The General Dynamics controversy may finally come to an end this week after months of debate.

Tallahassee city commissioners are scheduled to meet Thursday afternoon at City Hall to decide whether to uphold an earlier ruling which found the electronics firm ineligible to do business with the city because of its ties to apartheid South Africa.

Ammerman plans program with help from task force

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

David Ammerman's days of directing Florida State University's summer enrichment programs for minority students are over. But if all goes as planned, Ammerman may initiate a new summer program.

Although the plan is preliminary, the FSU history professor intends to set up a local "intervention program" to aid 14-, 15- and 16-year-olds who have had run-ins with the law. Ammerman intends to get assistance from the Community Task Force on Drugs and Crime and FSU to help put local teenagers in academic programs part of the day and in gyms the other part.

"This program is not a (minority) recruitment or retention program," Ammerman said Monday. "It is more like a camp, like cheerleading."

Ammerman, former director of three minority-aimed academic programs, was fired from his position last semester. He was replaced by Norman Jackson in November.

Ammerman met with university Provost Gus Turnbull Monday to discuss his plans. According to Ammerman, Turnbull supported Ammerman's idea, but made clear it couldn't be a "university program."

"It sounded like a useful activity," Turnbull said Tuesday. "It's a public service and it is within his rights and privileges as a faculty member to do so."

Ammerman said Turnbull suggested that he work with the FSU Center for Professional Development—which helps run events such as Boys State, Girls State and athletic camps—to help him meet his goals.

This program is not a minority recruitment or retention program. It is more like a camp like cheerleading.
—David Ammerman

"What he wants to do sounds like sports camps," Turnbull said.

Ammerman said he plans to discuss the program with CPD directors soon.

Majken Peterzen, executive director of the Commmuity Task Force on Drugs and Crime, described her discussions with Ammerman as a "first date . . . you never know where it can lead," and said Ammerman's goals are consistent with the task force's.

"We need to flush out the program and see what it would be like, but it is clearly something we'd be interested in," Peterzen said. "David's talent with young people can be utilized with the same population of people we focus on."

Unlike his other programs—which targeted minority students throughout the state who were interested in a college education—this program would focus on youngsters in Leon County. Ammerman intends to work with up to two dozen students at a time to improve their classroom performances.

Ammerman said that if the students attend classes and do well, he'd like to reward them by allowing them to "toss a football around with (FSU football player) Amp Lee" or attend music, ceramic and arts and crafts classes.

Ammerman said the students in the program would be picked by the task force, established by the city two years ago.

According to Peterzen, the group sponsors a wide range of intervention programs aimed at assisting youngsters in trouble with the law and gives organizations with similar goals grants from $350,000 to $400,000.

Peterzen said that, ideally, the organizations receiving grant money should raise "matching money" on their own. Ammerman said he has already started fundraising for the program, and has received a $5,000 check from the Miami-based Harry Kramer Memorial Fund.

Bush asks Congress for resolution backing use of force

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—President Bush asked Congress Tuesday to adopt a resolution endorsing the United Nations call for the use of "all necessary means" to compel the unconditional withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait.

In a letter to House and Senate leaders, Bush said that "such an action would underline that the United States stands with the international community and on the side of law and decency."

He said it would also "help dispel any belief that may exist in the minds of Iraq's leaders that the United States lacks the necessary unity to act decisively in response to Iraq's continued aggression in Kuwait."

Furthermore, Bush said such a resolution would "send the clearest message to Saddam Hussein that he must withdraw without condition or delay from Kuwait."

Bush said he would have preferred to have such a resolution adopted before Secretary of State James Baker meets with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Geneva, Switzerland, Wednesday "and it would have been most constructive" if he could have passed it on to the Iraqi government.

But, he added, there is still an opportunity for Congress "to act to strengthen the prospects for peace and safeguard this country's vital interests."

"I, therefore, request that the House of Representitives and the Senate adopt a resolution stating that Congress supports the use of all necessary means to implement U.N. Security Council Resolution 678."

The resolution sets Jan. 15 as the deadline for Iraq to pull its troops out of Kuwait.

The president said that anything short of a full endorsement of the U.N. resolution "would only encourage Iraqi intransigience; anything else would risk detracting from the international coalition arrayed against Iraq's aggression."

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole said, "It's long past time for Congress to get in the game. No doubt about it, Congress should already have joined the president in sending a tough message of unity and resolve to Baghdad, the kind of united front that gives us our best hope for a peaceful resolution in the Gulf."

But Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell told reporters earlier Tuesday that adoption of a resolution mirroring the U.N. resolution would give Bush a "blank check" and said it would be unwise "to say to the president that under any circumstances you can use offensive force."

Mitchell said that only when Bush reaches the decision to go to war against Iraq should he ask Congress for approval, and promised that the request will be "promptly" considered by the Senate and House.

Baker says anti-Iraq coalition is united

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

GENEVA—Secretary of State James Baker, arriving in Geneva for crucial talks with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, sought Tuesday to calm fears of growing differences among members of the alliance against Saddam Hussein.

Baker also said he was "hopeful" about his meeting Wednesday with Aziz, but warned that he would make it clear to him that the alliance would permit nothing short of an unconditional withdrawl from Kuwait by the Jan. 15 U.N. deadline.

After meetings Tuesday with French officials in Paris and German officials in Bonn, as well as a visit Monday to London, Baker asserted that the international coalition opposing Iraq's occupation of Kuwait is solid.

Of particular concern were the positions of France and Germany. Both have indicated that they favor an international conference on the Middle East that would include debate on the Palestinian question.

A French peace plan was presented Friday to European Community foreign ministers in Luxembourg liking the promise of an Iraqi withdrawl from Kuwait to the opening of a Middle East conference.

The United States, while not flatly opposing such a conference, does reject linking it to the Persian Gulf crisis and believes that bringing up the question now would only encourage Iraq.

Get the facts

Editor:

In response to the "self-black centered" letter printed Jan. 7, by Tyson Lancaster:

You mentioned that black people are killing black people more and more these days, but did you know that the highest crime rate against white people is also committed by other white people? In the Hispanic community the situation is likewise.

OK, let's think logically. If black people are so busy committing crimes against themselves, then who is committing crimes against the white race? Answer: other white people.

Yes, education is very important for all people, but if you believe that people are judged by their "gray matter" you are sadly mistaken. In this country, people are judged by the amount of money they earn and their skin color. Documented court records show that black and Hispanic teen-agers are tried as adults in the same cases (or very similar cases) where white teen-agers are tried as juveniles. These records also show that white-collar criminals were given lesser minimal sentences in comparison to blue-collar criminals. This clearly shows that skin color and money are used to judge the people in this society.

So if you insist on quoting statistics, get all the facts.

I hope that there will be peace among all of mankind. But without equal justice there will be no peace.

Lend a helping ear

Editor:

Rape. Suicide. Child Abuse. Everyday problems for everyday people. Where do people turn when life has let them down? When they need a word of encouragement, soothing voice, a listening ear?

They turn to the volunteers at Telephone Counseling and Referral Service. Volunteers have been providing crisis counseling, information and referrals to Tallahassee and the surrounding area for over 20 years. Because we are continuing to grow and expand, we are asking for your help in answering our crisis hotline.

As a volunteer you can provide that caring and concerned voice over the telephone. You can help a single mother with three children find a place to stay, empathize with a lonely widow looking for companionship, encourage a high school student who feels he is failing his classes, and comfort a woman struggling through a painful divorce.

Along with the satisfaction you will feel from helping others in need, you also have the opportunity to learn about the community's resources, increase self-awareness and improve your communication skills. Academic credit is also available through Florida State University.

Training this spring begins Jan. 17 and is held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings for ten weeks. Come challenge yourself to one of the toughest and most rewarding volunteer experiences you may ever have. Call 224-6333 (NEED) for more information.

Going to hell

Editor:

I would like to take the time to put some people in their place. But first, I would like to say that I am a God-fearing Southern Baptist raised in a large family on strict morals. I have lived in the South all my life, and I have noticed drastic changes in the attitudes and morals of some of the members of my society that are going to spell out "DOOM" for the human race if they are not solved.

I hold all the females solely responsible for the decline of sexual morals in this society. A woman's place is in the home and that is where she should stay. It is the man's duty to bring home the bacon and to set the rules for the family. Woman was put on this earth to bear children and to serve her husband. Sex was designed solely for this purpose. Any man who cannot see this view is a cuckold. It makes me sick to see these young ladies walking around all haughty like they do. With some of the attitudes I see in women today, it is no wonder there are so many homosexuals. Fortunately, God is taking out his wrath on this immoral group right this very moment with all this AIDS stuff spreading around. He will protect those who are truly moral from this dreaded disease. Furthermore, the drug problems with all the crack and teenage pregnancy in the black sections of town just goes to show that the black man was better off under the guidance of the white man after all.

With these thoughts in mind, one can plainly see that the legalization of abortion was the fundamental cause of moral decline throughout society. I am sure all of my fellow pro-life advocates will strongly agree with me on this point.

I have also witnessed a steady decline of the religious morals in this country. When Pat Robertson dropped out of the Presidential race because of poor electoral support, I realized then that his once great country of ours is headed straight for an eternity in hell. Pat Robertson could have done great things for this country. I know one thing's for sure, he sure wouldn't take any of that Saddam Hussein's bull malarkey. All of them Moslems are doomed to an eternity in hell! This war is not over oil at all. People have not realized yet that this war is really a modern continuation of the Crusades against the Moslems. And this time the Christian teachings will prevail. After this war, I truly believe that the misled Jews in Israel will finally see the light, and accept Christ as their savior, and the Moslems will become our slaves in repetance for their sins against Christianity and morality.

What this society needs is a good strong Christian leader like Pat Robertson to restore the morals and fundamental beliefs of a God-fearing country and to help lead us away from the temptations of evil. We would all surely benefit.

It's not what you know

Editor:

Frankly, my friend, said the other day, "My son, he told me (that) being book smart don't get good marks (in school)." Now that to me at first note was just ridiculous. "You see," he continued, "he made 1000 on the SAT and his letter grades is Cs and Ds. I asked him how come this happened and he said he don't do teacher stuff. He said son't worry, his friends don't study or do teacher stuff." At this point I am really confused. What is this teacher stuff? Frankly, I continued, "Last mont (month) he was good to his teacher. He complimented her and smiled and acted like a real mamma's boy. At least this is what he said. She liked him a lot and gave him some As. She even stopped saying (that) he cheated on the SAT. I liked my boy too. He made me proud." Well there it was. It is understood that grades are given most times, at least in early grades, on how you do and not how much you might know. Education is not only complicated is downright peculiar at times.

For example, a teacher asked the class, "Class, what is two plus two?" A little black boy jumped up enthusiastically without being called upon, and answered, "Two and two is four teach." The teacher responded, "No, you sit down you bad boy." A little girl with long blond curls, blue eyes and the cutest little chicken bit (sic) nose, stood up, brushed down her pretty dress and responded, "Miss Fay, two plus two is equal to four." The teacher says, "That is correct. You are so cute. Thank you." The little boy jumps up again and says, "Teach that's what I said. I said four." The teacher responds, "Go to the office you little bad boy. You think you are cute don't you. You get an 'F'." Now the grade was not given on the answer to the mathematics question. It was given on the presentment. It was given on the teacher stuff. In fact two grades are necessary in this case: one for the correct answer to the math question and one for the presentment. This process is not done in a vicious manner. It is almost a matter of normalcy. But the little boy does not know this. His self esteem was hurt twice and now he does not know what two plus two equals. In education this process has destroyed two vital domains, the affective (self-esteem) and the cognitive (the reasoning). After this educational treatment the child will never raise their hands nor try to answer a question again.

After telling Frankly (this he said, "You know, you right and little black boys stop being cute quicker than any other child. He stop being cute bout (about) the second grade. It's dem (them) bowl haircuts. They look like Bart Simpson."

Public pressure forces forest service to rethink its policies

BY BRIAN P. BRAY
STAFF WRITER

In response to growing public concern of clear-cutting in Florida's national forests, the U.S. Forest Service has announced that it will begin using less destructive methods to remove timber there.

Environmentalists said the move was a sign that years of pressure are starting changes within the administration that will result in better management of national forest land.

"It's no question that this decision is the result of pressure from the public," said Tom Ankersen, of the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund's office in Tallahassee. "The people don't want the forests to be tree farms anymore."

Clear-cutting is a method of removing trees in which heavy machinery is used to level virtually everything within a selected piece of forest land. The timber that can be used is hauled away and everything else is ground into the soil.

Afterward, the barren land is treated with chemicals and replanted with rows of pine seedlings. Ankersen said the practice depletes soil fertility and is inconsistent with the forest service's responsibility to sustain biodiversity within protected habitats.

The new policy will allow less destructive methods of obtaining timber from the forest—like "seed tree cutting" and "shelter-wood cutting"—to be used more frequently.

"In the past, our policy employed clear-cutting as the most viable method," said Mark Warren, a public affairs officer with the forest service in Tallahassee. "Now we're looking at many different ways of harvesting instead of zeroing in on clear-cutting. This gives our people more options to determine the best method for removal on a particular tract of land."

Seed-tree cutting involves cutting down most of the trees in a certain area, except for a few mature ones. This allows the ones left behind to deposit their seeds and begin a natural regrowth in the area.

Shelter-wood cutting, on the other hand, removes only a certain percentage of the trees, allowing new growth to get started before the remaining trees are taken. This method is preferred by environmentalists.

"We'd like to see selection management—actually going in and marking individual trees for harvest," Ankersen said. "This method is the least disruptive and it has been shown to be cost effective."

These methods may get to see some heavy action in the Apalachicola National Forest because clear-cutting could soon be dealt an even bigger blow there. According to Ralph Costa, a biologist with the Apalachicola National Forest, clear-cutting could be dropped altogether in an effort to save an endangered an enthusiastic adminstration, it looks like."

FSU students Mike McGinn and Chris Missita spent the afternoon sampling the free food. Although the two said they are registered Republicans and weren't "that enthused" with Chiles, they both voted for him rather than face four more years of Bob Martinez.

McGinn said the celebration was fun, and "a good morale booster" for the state.

The festival also featured musicians and a miniature version of Miami's annual Calle Ocho celebration.

Although thousands of people took in the festivities—organizers predicted 40,000 would turn out—Leon County Sheriff's officers on the scene said there were no problems with the crowd.

nor, said he was honored to preside over the event and joked about how his and Chiles' political roles have changed. Eight years ago their roles were reversed—Chiles emceed Graham's inaugural festivities.

"I'm happy to reciprocate the favor," Graham said to a cheering crowd. "This is a time for reunion and renewal of the family of Florida."

Bob Martinez, making his last appearance as governor, said that when he took office four years ago he made a commitment to "not be different, but to make a difference."

"I leave here today proud in the knowledge that I've done precisely that," said Martinez, who was nominated by President Bush to become the nation's drug czar and resigned his post to return to Washington. "This magical state will always be home. We'll be back to watch our grandchildren grow up."

Martinez's replacement, Chiles, is the first Democrat to be elected governor since 1986.

Chiles predicted a $270 million budget deficit from Martinez. But despite the budget crunch and the prospect of more than a $1 billion shortfall next year, Chiles said he won't raise taxes. Instead, Chiles said, government needs to be held more accountable for spending and "managing your tax money."

"I believe this crisis is our opportunity to force the bureaucracy to respond to our effort to decentralize, to cut out many of the bureaucratic layers, to bring about a community based delivery system for services that will be more efficient, more responsive and more accountable," he said. "In short, we got to make this thing work better."

Chiles said he plans on seeking ethics reform this legislative session and intends to create a Department of Elderly Affairs because "the people voted for such a department."

Senate President Gwen Margolis said she is looking forward to working with Chiles and MacKay who combined have 22 years of legislative experience.

"They have the feeling of the people," Margolis said after the inauguration. "They have the ability to move people in a very positive way."

State Representative Al Lawson, who represents part of Leon County, agreed with Chiles and MacKay's experience will be beneficial, and added that he believes Chiles will be the governor for all people.

"I look very positive (Chiles and MacKay) can make more people to the government and not be left out with Martinez especially the minorities," Lawson said. "After two terms of turmoil we now have a Democratic governor."

FSU student attacked

A 20-year-old male Florida State University student was attacked Monday evening after two juveniles approached him panhandling for money, FSU police spokesperson Jack Handley said Tuesday.

The student was walking toward his home in Alumni Village along Lake Bradford Road near the intersection of Hutchinson Street when the suspects asked him for money. The victim said he didn't have any money and one of the juveniles hit him in the throat while the other hit him in the back of the head, Handley said.

A passing motorist witnessed the alleged attack, which took place around 6:45 p.m., and took the victim to his apartment. Shortly afterward, the victim spotted one of the suspects while driving himself to the Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center.

The student called FSU police and they arrested a 15-year-old, charged him with one count of attempted robbery and released him to his parents. The second juvenile may be arrested soon, Handley said.

The victim was treated at TMRMC for bruises on the back of his head and released.

species in the forest.

Costa said Regional Forest Service Officer Jack Alcock will hand down a decision in two weeks about the policy concerning the protection of the red cockaded woodpecker. Costa said this decision could amend forest service guidelines for the Apalachicola forest that would prevent clear cutting within three-quarters of a mile of woodpecker colonies.

"Considering the density of the woodpeckers in the forest, this would pretty much do away with clear cutting," Costa said.

That's exactly what environmentalists want.

"Hopefully, this policy is an indication of change," Ankerson said. "We hope to bring about the demise of all clear cutting."

Organization dishes out free legal advice for FSU students

BY JAMES WILSON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Habeas corpus. Lis pendens. Due process. The legal system is often too complex for any one person to understand. But Florida State University Student Legal Services can help untangle the web of legal procedure

The student government-funded agency has been providing preventive legal service for all FSU students since 1974, and 1,000 students use the service yearly.

"At least one time in four years a student will come across a situation where an attorney might be useful and the fact that they can get one free through our agency is a great help," said Jorge Piedra, director of the program.

He said some of those situations may involve landlord and tenant disputes, domestic incidents, personal injuries, immigration, contracts or criminal offenses such as drunken driving, assault and battery, traffic violations, auto accidents and false identification.

An attorney will consult and advise the student, and if necessary, will make a phone call or write a letter on the student's behalf for a nominal fee which is picked up by Student Legal Services.

There are 14 members of the Tallahassee Bar and Florida Bar Association working with the referral service. Three half-hour sessions with an attorney per year are available free of charge to students with a valid ID, according to Piedra.

"Ninety-five percent of students that come could have their problem taken care of during the first consultation," said attorney James C. Banks, who works with students.

With a little legal advice, an articulate student can represent himself in small claims court, said J. Joseph Hughes, another attorney working with the agency.

Al Marquez, acting chair of Student Legal Services, said the program is one of the most important students' services on campus.

"We're trying to get more students aware of what the legal service has to offer," he said. "It's one service that students need to take advantage of because it is a good service and it's free."

Student Legal Services is in room 220 of the FSU student union. For more information or appointments call 644-1811.

from the city in 1988 to come to Tallahassee and build high-tech combat radios for the Department of Defense. The city owns the buildings where the two companies are located and leases them to each company for $1 per year.

Thursday's hearing will mark the end of a six-month hiatus from General Dynamics business for city officials. Tallahassee Mayor Steve Meisburg postponed the issue in July so outside attorneys could evaluate the ordinance and the city's position on it.

The move recently came under fire when it was revealed that the law firm doing the evaluation—Steel, Hector and Davis—put up money with other local investors to lure General Dynamics to town. The lawyer doing the evaluation has disavowed any conflict of interest.

Results of the evaluation are expected to be released sometime before Thursday's hearing.

But David Mack, whose North Florida Rainbow Coalition will hold a press conference this morning to air a number of complaints on various issues concerning the anti-apartheid ordinance, said the law firm's former business relationship "reeks of conflict."

Mack argued that Meisburg's decision to postpone discussion over General Dynamics was a political ploy to damper the momentum of rising pressure to oust the company.

"He did it for political reasons in an effort to dissipate the movement to get General Dynamics out of here," Mack said Tuesday.

Widmer wouldn't speculate on what the commission's decision would be.

"We're just going to go ahead and state our case . . . and hope they'll make a fair ruling," he said Tuesday.

According Ben Harris, chair of the Anti-Apartheid Review Committee, the 4 p.m. hearing will be open to the public, but no public input will be allowed. Harris also said there is a chance the commission could postpone the issue or take some other action.

Broadway's smash hit A Chorus Line plays at the Civic Center tonight

A Chorus Line steps into town

BY KEITH TRALINS
STAFF WRITER

From the opening line of music, a lone piano thunking out the beginning of "One," to the grand finale with an entire chorus line singing and dancing A Chorus Line is truly a singular sensation. The music, the dancing, the emotion, the truthfulness of the entire show have always been a bright spot in American musical history.

A Chorus Line will show tonight at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center.

A Chorus Line is one of the most honored and respected musicals of our time. Up until last spring, when it closed, it was the longest running Broadway musical. Thousands of different performers had played the parts, and millions have delighted in seeing it over and over.

The musical, which opened in '75, has won many awards—including a Tony Award for best musical and the Pulitzer Prize for drama—and anyone who has seen it live will know why.

From the start, A Chorus Line was a runaway hit. It had a lot of a revival in 1985 when the movie version, which starred Michael Douglas, hit the screen. But the movie does not quite capture the feel of the musical, the way the staged version does.

The storyline is about a group of people who are trying out for a chorus part in a Broadway musical. Each person is a talented individual, who has his or her own story, and all of them want that part. Through the course of the one audition, the people open themselves up and connect with the Director, a mysterious individual who is watching them all—from the audience. But in the end, the inevitable happens. Only eight can be chosen out of a very special and equal group.

The charm of A Chorus Line is found in the special relationship that is created between the audience and the cast. To sit in the audience and watch these people audition gives a great insight into just how hard it is to get a job in the acting world. It creates a feeling that was lost in the movie. In the theater, those people are real and right in front of you.

This particular touring production is a little bit of a homecoming, as one of the featured performers, Mark Stephens, graduated from FSU last spring.

A Chorus Line is a part of the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center's recent offerings of touring groups of Broadway plays and musicals. Love Letters, another Broadway touring show, will be at the Civic Center Jan. 16, and hopefully the smash hit Into The Woods will come to Tallahassee in March. These are real productions that are just as good as, if not better than, their Broadway counterparts.

A Chorus Line* shows tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center. Tickets are $17, $22 and $27. Call 222-0400 for more information.

Although the Junior Museum is expanding, buildings like the one shown here will still be used to teach visitors how Florida settlers lived.

Tallahassee Jr. Museum undergoes expansion

BY JOSH MITCHELL
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Over the past ten years or so, the Tallahassee Junior Museum has changed relatively little—only moderate additions and renovations have been made.

But thanks to a recent grant by The Kresge Foundation, a private, independent foundation created by benefactor Sebastian S. Kresge, and the hugely successful efforts of the museum's own fundraising drive, major new facilities are already in the works.

According to the museum's newsletter Round the Bend: "The noises of construction are sometimes startling in our usually peaceful, relaxing natural setting, but staff and visitors alike are excited about the future the activities are promising."

And so is the museum's new director, Russell S. Daws, who, in October of last year, left the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science to take on the post at the Jr. Museum.

Daws realizes he is stepping on board at a most opportune moment.

"This is the first real building expansion since the museum opened," he said.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of $600,000 will be spent during the project: approximately $575,000 from the museum's fundraising effort and $75,000 granted by the Kresge Foundation.

The $575,000 commitment from the museum is a result of the "challenge" policy of the Kresge Foundation. In order to receive the Kresge donation, the beneficiary must raise the remainder of the projected balance on its own, as sort of an incentive to ensure that the project will be completed. Construction must also be underway at the time the grant is applied for.

"The Kresge grant requires us to raise money and get into a stage where we can't get out of it," said Daws.

So far, the museum has garnered $478,000 of its required amount of $575,000, and construction is underway. The deadline imposed by the Kresge Foundation is January 1, 1992, and appears likely to be met.

The building of at least four new structures is anticipated. Of these, the Visitor's Center is nearing completion. It will house space for retail sales, a public meeting room and restrooms.

Also planned is a Discovery Center for kids, which will provide "hands on" participation with computer simulation games, backpack discovery kits, microscopes and viewing areas for videos and slides.

A concession area restaurant is another facility being planned.

Several existing buildings are to be renovated including a natural science building that will house sea life and other exhibits, such as bird watching.

To keep the central office going, an administration building, new bathroom facilities and maintenance facilities will be constructed in addition to the other new projects.

Even though the Jr. Museum's future is looking incredibly bright, there's no reason to wait to make a visit. The current exhibits are still worth the money, and make for an interesting afternoon.

The alligator pit, black bear, bald eagle and reptile (especially the snakes) displays are both intriguing and educational. Also, three endangered Florida panthers are temporarily housed at the museum. And if you like the bigger cats, "Sita" the Bengal tiger will provide a rather toothy smile for the camera.

To help reach the final monetary goal to complete the ambitious but very worthwhile project, the museum is still graciously accepting donations as part of the fundraising campaign.

Contributions can be sent to: Tallahassee Junior Museum, 3945 Museum Dr., Tallahassee, 32310. Be sure to make the notation "for capital campaign" on the check. Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 12:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. It is closed on Monday. Admission is $4 for adults and $2 for children. Memberships are available. Rice's latest work bites compared to her previous tales of the Vampires

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

The Witching Hour
By Anne Rice
Knopf, 965 pps., $22.95

Even passionate readers of realistic fiction need an occasional break from the pseudo-life that pours from the pages of today's contemporary literature.

And every once and awhile an intelligent writer who chooses to write fantastical stories about the romantic (or imaginary) side of life comes along. Anne Rice, who is probably best known for her bestselling series The Vampire Chronicles, is one of those writers. She is an imaginative writer who has a gift for creating beautiful images with the written word. Her novels are well-researched and writtten with loving care.

The only problem—for the realist—is that they deal with vampires and spirits and mummies and all sorts of creatures that have passed down through the mythology of civilization.

Rice's latest book, The Witching Hour, is the beginning of another series—this one dealing with the Mayfair family which has been haunted by a powerful spirit since the 1600s.

The spirit, Lasher, makes himself visible to the 'strongest' of the Mayfair women, giving that woman the power of healing and the power to kill, plus other countless telekinetic wonders.

The novel shows Rice's ability to create the perfect mood and feeling—usually dense and Gothic. The feel to her work is the most impressive thing about her novels, sometimes causing the story to move into the background.

The Witching Hour mainly takes place in a decaying New Orleans mansion surrounded by a wild, tangled garden which lends an ominous, haunting feel to the things that take place.

There really doesn't seem to be any theme in the novel except on the superficial level. It's more of an exercise for Rice, trying to prove to herself that she can write a novel that's 965 pages (and weighs over three pounds) and still keep the reader's attention. The story is marvelously written, changing from a modern setting which follows the latest of the Mayfair Witches, Rowan, and her lover Michael, to a thick and ponderous account of the entire history of the Witches kept by the ever-watchful eye of the Talamasca (which made its first appearance in the third vampire novel Queen of the Damned).

Both sections are extremely well-written. When a chapter ends, you're mad because you want to find out what's going on. This is a continuous chain moving from chapter to chapter building toward the 'big finale.'

What it all boils down to is this: even though she is a romance writer in a serious novelist's guise, Rice writes some incredibly good stuff. But The Witching Hour just isn't as good as it could've been. In the Vampire Chronicles she concentrates on a singular goal moving rapidly and vividly toward it. But here we're subverted far too many times.

The ending rings hollow and certain stories are retold far too many times. It becomes tedious.

She's definitely written better novels. In fact, all three of the Vampire novels are better than this one.

Rice is still a guilty pleasure worth seeking out with each new novel, but she's going to have to do a little better than this if she wants to keep the cult following that she's developed.

More grief for Def Leppard

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

LONDON—Steve Clark, guitarist for the heavy metal rock group Def Leppard, has died in his sleep at his London townhouse, police reported Tuesday.

Authorities said they were investigating the cause of Clark's death, but added there were no suspicious circumstances.

In New York City, Cliff Burnstein, one of Clark's managers, said he had just gotten word of the 30-year-old musician's death.

"The cause of his death is still unknown," Burnstein said. "They're doing a post mortem now."

He said the group had been recording in Dublin, Ireland, and was taking a break in London, Burnstein said.

Clark was one of the founding members of the band, formed in 1978.

Conjunction of Opposites

A solo exhibition of sculptures by Deborah La Grasse

BY JANET MAUNEY
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Amalgam, amulet, reliquary, ritual. These are the words that Deborah La Grasse uses while talking about her work. Upon entering the Florida A&M University School of Architecture Gallery, a bed form entitled "Shroud" horizontally dominates the space. From a cast iron headboard, a skeletal frame extends to a wheel. Fabric, cast in iron, drapes across the frame in a figure shape that ends up resembling a lung. La Grasse says a bed is normally rigid, but the wheel represents passage. There is that soft fabric made hard by casting and a feeling of rest and movement.

La Grasse has taken an ethical position in sculpture—every piece is an exploration of materials as well as her own consciousness. On a deliberate, intellectual plane, she works with opposites—hard metal/soft body parts, positive and negative spaces, male/female, life and death. It may sound complicated, but La Grasse moves freely within the confines of this preception. Historically, she comes from the school of "readymades," recycling found objects and using them with fabricated cast metal, unfolding a magical world of layered meanings and richly textured surfaces.

La Grasse experienced loss through death very early. Her sister died when she was only twenty and last summer, a young friend drowned in one of Tallahassee's sinkholes. "Rising Reliquary" is a momento for her friend. This piece is almost hidden around a corner in the back of the gallery. A beautiful shrine, it has the primitive feel of an Indian burial ground. A small box is held upright by sticks and poles, all cast in bronze. It is a special place for relics to be kept.

Although La Grasse says she didn't intend any similarity, "Africa," also shown around the corner in the back, has the same primitive feel as "Reliquary." The shape of the African continent sits atop poles cast in iron and fitted on a base of wheels. Instability or passage, and there are a few holes in the continent. Again, that African shape could be a lung. In addition, there is a wall piece entitled "Iron Lung."

> La Grasse has taken an ethical position in sculpture—every piece is an exploration of materials as well as her own consciousness.

There is no mistaking the lungs in "Iron Lung," but La Grasse says that is the only intentional lung. It is complete with breasts and blood vessels, cast in bronze and iron which are not supposed to gel. While casting in iron, the mould burst and rather than let the piece go, La Grasse poured bronze in on top of the iron. It worked and the two metals can be seen upon examination. There are several other small wall pieces—"Iron Heart," "Amoret," and "The Divining Rod," all intended as amulets—charms to protect the owner from evil.

But what about the lungs? La Grasse suffered cadmium poisoning several years ago. It took three years to get it out of her system. Meanwhile, as an asthmatic, she is especially concious of how awful it is not be able to breath. It must remain in her subconscious for standing tall and beautiful in the middle of the gallery is "X-Screen," two fragile-looking lungs laced together like a corset and hanging suspended from a base. These forms have the ghostly

American Video accuses Nintendo of conspiracy to monopolize video games

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

SAN FRANCISCO—American Video Entertainment Inc. Tuesday sued video game giant Nintendo Co. Ltd. in a $105 million antitrust suit charging Nintendo used monopolistic power to lock American out of the lucrative video game market.

American Video, the San Jose, Calif.-based subsidiary of Macronix Inc., said Nintendo has used its 80 control of the home video entertainment market to block competitors from marketing Nintendo-compatible cartridges.

The suit accuses Nintendo of conspiracy dating back to the early 1980s to restrain trade and monopolize the manufacture and distribution of consoles and catridges used in video games.

Nintendo called the claims "baseless" and vowed to vigorously defend against the lawsuit.

The case is similar to a 1988 antitrust suit brought against by the Atari company challenging Nintendo's limits on licensing of Atari-developed games for the Nintendo system. That dispute remains in federal court. It may be resolved by late 1991 or 1992, according to a Nintendo spokesman.

The latest lawsuit charged Nintendo and its U.S. subsidary, Nintendo of America Inc. of Redmond, Wash., created and began quietly shipping lockout systems specifically designed so American Video's new products would no longer be compatible in the 28 million Nintendo game machines used in U.S. homes.

Former San Francisco mayor Joseph L. Alioto, an expert in antitrust law, filed suit on behalf of American Video.

The antitrust battle centers over the wildly popular video games that have swept the nation in recent years.

Different games, such as Nintendo's popular Super Mario Brothers series, are contained on computerized video game cartridges and displayed through a television screen by insertion into a game console. Nintendo dominates 80 percent of the American market in the games with 28 million of the consoles installed in America, according to the lawsuit.

Nintendo had $2.7 billion in U.S. sales in 1989, according to Richard Lindner, company spokesman.

Alioto contends Nintendo began secretly shipping its modified lockout systems specifically to make American Video's games useless in Nintendo consoles.

The game maker has projected $4.1 billion in sales for the current year, Lindner said.

Alioto contends Nintendo began secretly shipping its modified lockout system specifically to make American Video's games useless in Nintendo consoles.

"Nintendo refrained from publicizing its redesign but privately urged its major customers to refuse to deal with plaintiff because its cartridges no longer would operate with the NES game machines," the suit states.

Howard Lincoln, Nintendo senior vice president, said he would have no comment on the details of the lawsuit because the firm has not seen a copy.

He did say, "Based on the news reports we have heard we do feel the charges are baseless and Nintendo will vigorously defend itself."

"American Video planned initial entry into the business as a Nintendo compatible cartridge publisher in the thrid quarter of 1991, according to the lawsuit.

It planned to produce a hand-held color unit to compet with Nintendo's black and white unit.

American Video produces five Nintendo-compatible games, Tiles of Fate, Double Strike, Pyramid, Krazy Kreatures, F-15 City War and Puzzle.

The suit contends American is likely to suffer $35 million in actualy damages.

Under terms of antitrust law American is allowed to seek triple damages and is claiming $105 million, as a result.

quality of an X-ray and can be slowly rocked, underscoring the instability of life.

Lest this all sounds too heavy for the average viewer, be assured it isn't. The work is very playful. Once again, the conjunction of opposites. There are two wall pieces entitled "Cruciform" and "Cruciform II," male and female counterparts. These are figurative shapes with the look of old armor that has developed a few holes in the aging process. The male figure is built around a machine gun juxtaposed beside a bow. Sitting atop an airplane face is a gunbelt halo. "Cruciform II" is crowned by a halo of bullets. Breasts, one concave, one convex, have fallen to her thighs. She also sports a gun, a pistol that was cast from a water pistol.

La Grasse wants to leave a little mystery in her work. The layering of opposites, the mixtures of presences and absences is tightly held together by her well-grounded sense of composition and her craftsmanship with metals. The different parts work as a whole. Texturing and the use of paint add patina to the finished product.

La Grasse herself is a combination of opposites. A native of Gainesville, Florida, her great grandmother was a Seminole Indian, but the name La Grasse is Sicilian. Combined with this is a Swedish and Scotch/English blood. Her early college years were spent at the Sorbonne in Paris, studying French language and culture. From there, she attended the University of Florida, received a B.A. in Painting, followed by an M.F.A. in Sculpture from Southern Illinois University in 1983.

She came to Tallahassee as an instructor in Florida State University's art department as well as being a lab machine shop supervisor. From 1985-1988, she was an assistant professor and head of sculpture at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston, IL. She has been a visiting artist, conducting metal casting workshops at colleges as far away as Seattle, Washington, Beaumont, Texas and Grandforks, North Dakota.

It was only after her marriage to Charles Hook, also a sculptor, and the birth of a daughter that La Grasse gave up teaching and for the first time is concentrating on the development of her own work. It is a welcomed time for her and every piece of this exhibit was done in 1990, even with a small child to care for.

The exhibit opens Wednesday, January 9, and will continue until Jan. 25. A reception for the artist will be on Friday, Jan. 11, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. The FAMU School of Architecture gallery is located at 1936 South MLK Blvd.

Hurricanes' flagrant behavior was nothing but a "team thing"

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

COMMENTARY

While the University of Miami's football team was laying claim to the title of "team of the '80s," they also gained a reputation as being the bad boys of the collegiate gridiron.

At no time in the last 10 years has that reputation been more deserved than during the Hurricanes' Cotton Bowl destruction of the University of Texas.

In that game, Miami racked up 16 penalties for a Cotton Bowl record 202 yards. Nine of those penalties were of the misconduct variety—late hits, taunting, excessive celebrating . . . you get the picture.

In the Jan. 7 edition of the Tallahassee Democrat, Gerald Ensley wrote a column in which he suggested that the Hurricane's volatile behavior—since a bulk of the penalties were committed by black players—could be written off as a "black thing."

Ensley intimated that the team's taunting and dancing was simply a reflection of black culture; that "it's not a matter of bad sportsmanship. It's just a different type of expression."

I don't think so. It's a different type expression, but it's certainly not exclusive to blacks.

Does anyone remember Mark Gastineau, the long haired, big-mouthed, megalomaniac former defensive end of the New York Jets? He used to celebrate like the latest lottery winner whenever he sacked an opposing quarterback.

It was his displays which prompted the National Football League to impose it's excessive celebrating rule.

Gastineau is white.

Here's another name you may remember—Brian Bosworth. If you'll recall, Bosworth was a linebacker for the University of Oklahoma who thought he was pretty big stuff.

Bosworth was known for his taunting of opposing teams, both on and off the field. After this year's Cotton Bowl, Miami wide receiver Lamar Thomas said he wanted to throw the ball at the Texas mascot, a longhorn bull. Bosworth implied he wanted to do much worse things than that to poor Bevo.

Bosworth is white.

The list of players that have a penchant for trying to embarass their opponents with their actions or words is a long one, filled with blacks and whites.

There's nothing wrong with players celebrating after scoring, or making a great play—it's part of the game. Some of the rules that the NCAA and the NFL enforce to discourage those celebrations are ludicrous and archaic; for instance, no planned celebrations are allowed.

It's the late hitting, finger pointing and trash talking that's the problem—and it has nothing to do with color.

Miami Coach Dennis Erickson talked to his team at the end of the Cotton Bowl's first quarter and at halftime. He specifically told them to stop the stupid penalties, the taunting, the late hitting.

"So what," said the Hurricane players. They kept on giving cheap shots, and kept on with their cheap talk.

It's unfortunate that the penalties and the uproar that followed will overshadow what was an awesome display of football by the Hurricanes. They absolutely destroyed a Texas team which lost only to co-national champion Colorado during the regular season.

The Miami display was not, as Ensley said, a black rebellion against a white man's idea of sportsmanship. Ensley seems to be reaching too far to explain something that is rather simple—it was a team with no respect for its coach, doing whatever it wanted.

And that is not a "black thing."

Eagles' players defend Ryan after the coach is dismissed

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

PHILADELPHIA—Buddy Ryan's players came to his defense Tuesday after the coach was sacked by owner Norman Braman.

"It's kind of hard to do something like this to Buddy," defensive tackle Jerome Brown said. "I'd sell my body for him. He stands behind you."

Braman, saying the Eagles need a new coach to reach the "next plateau," announced Ryan will not be retained when his 5-year contract expires at the end of this month.

The Eagles hve been to the NFL playoffs the last three years, but have failed to win a postseason game.

"You usually reward people for doing a good job," tight end Keith Jackson said. "If I can get out of here, that's my first option. If not, I'm just going to cause a lot of trouble so I can get out of here."

Linebacker Seth Joyner said the Eagles might face a long rebuilding process.

"I can see it completely falling apart," he said. "WE will have to start all over again. A lot of guys will want to leave and if they're not allowed to leave, they'll do whatever they can to leave. Anytime you have that kind of dissension and those kinds of problems, it's hard to be successful."

Defensive end Reggie White agreed.

"There will be a lot of rebuilding done unless they get somebody who is already here," he said

There was no immediate word on the fate of Ryan's staff but they expected to lose their jobs.

"When you're in this business, you know you can be hired and fired," special teams coach Al Roberts said. "I just didn't expect it now. We've had some success. We found a program in a state of turmoil. We've improved the program and left it better than we found it."

Roberts said the players would learn to accept the decision.

"You people are volatile and make emotional statements," he said. "They all like Buddy Ryan. But when a new coach comes in, they change their minds. They are young and flexible."

Joyner, however, said it might not be that easy.

"Look at the players here," he said. "They're all based on a system and the type of offense and defense played by Buddy Ryan. If you take these players and try to put them in a different offensive and defensive scheme, you're looking at a long period of time to put it together."

"To go through a rebuilding process after all we've done in the last five years, it's ridiculous. You can't ask that of people."

Strength coach Ronnie Jones said he was sorry to see Ryan leave for two reasons.

"No. 1, leaving these players because we're a close football team," he said. "And No. 2, leaving before the job was completed. If we had stayed, we would have completed the job."

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 9, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You are very impressionable now and must guard against being led in the wrong direction. The financial picture looks especially encouraging! Once you feel confident about something, you are an excellent spokesman for it. A loved one inspires you to attempt "the impossible" in October. In November, focus on creating a better world for those you hold dear. Let a romance develop at its own sweet pace.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Crystal Gayle, President Richard Nixon, actress Susannah York, folksinger Joan Baez.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your loved ones should be cooperative and easy to get along with this morning. Be certain to make good use of your energy and special talents. A midwinter vacation will require careful planning.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It pays to delve beneath the surface. Define your terms. People work better when they know your expectations. Someone close to you needs reassurance. Avoid lending any money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Seek a revision to a legal document. If loved ones do not curb their impulsive spending you could lose out. Use your keen powers of persuasion. Travel is best postponed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Disregard the gloomy rumors you hear. The financial picture will improve. Be more tactful with your co-workers. A romantic involvement will be hard to conceal. Protect your reputation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take pride in running your own show. Doing an outstanding job will boost your earning power. Talking with influential people helps advance your career. Use tact with authority figure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not try to force issues. Your body and mind are in sync today, giving you that contented feeling. Seek the company of stimulating people this evening. A lively talk will inspire you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Dumping old doubts will improve your work efficiency. The questions you have in mind can be answered. Concentrate deeply. A stranger sends you fascinating signals!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make a new start today. Put more emphasis on your work obligations. Get busy doing what needs to be done. The fruits of your labors will be plentiful. A raise or promotion is likely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Higher-ups are touchy. Low-keyed patience will prevent your falling from grace. A question you have been pondering could be answered late today. Put work before play.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The extra effort you make today will win you new admirers. Thanks to a friend, you have access to special people or information. Use this opportunity wisely. You can do a lot of good now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A close friend or relative plays a major role in wonderful new developments. Profits rise. A cherished hope could come true. Seek the spotlight if you attend a social event this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Even if you feel like a free spirit, take care of your duties. Shirking your share of the work will land you in hot water. Late afternoon is the best time to make purchases.

Baseball

Alan Wiggins, the second baseman on the San Diego Padres' 1984 pennant winning team who had a long history of drug abuse, died Sunday night in Los Angeles at 32. Wiggins, who also played for Baltimore, died of pneumonia, tuberculosis and other medical complications. . . Jim Palmer, 45, the Baltimore Orioles Hall of Famer pitcher says he has made "tremendous strides" during three weeks of supervised throwing toward a possible comeback seven seasons after he retired. Orioles GM Roland Hemond said the club would have "an open mind" about Palmer pitching again for Baltimore, though he is free to sign with any team.

Basketball

Rockets center Akeem Olajuwon is awaiting a second opinion to determine if he will need surgery to repair a fractured bone near his eye. He was elbowed last week by Chicago's Bill Cartwright. . . The Knicks' Patrick Ewing leades all centers in voting for the Easter Conference team for the Feb. 10 All-Star Game at Charlotte. Bulls guard Michael Jordan tops all vote-getters in the conference while the 76ers' Charles Barkley leads the forwards. . . Lawrence Funderburke, the star Ohio prep player who shunned Ohio State two years ago to attend Indiana, may yet become a Buckeye. If he enrolls this quarter, he would be eligible to play as a sophomore when the winter quarter begins next January.

College

The NCAA, meeting in Nashville, Tenn., agreed to abolish a set date on which bowl officials can select their teams. The bowls, however, agreed among themselves that some date must be set and that they would impose their own. They tentatively agreed on the third Sunday in November.

Hockey

The Ottawa Senators and Tampa Bay Lightning, granted NHL franchises last month, will sign their membership agreements in New York Monday and deliver a $5 million down payment. . . Cleveland, without pro hockey since the Barons ended play after the 1977-78 season, has been awarded a franchise for the proposed North American Hockey League. The league could include eight teams when play begins next fall. Six prospective owners in Indianapolis, Atlanta, Houston and Providence, R.I., come through. Other possible sites are St. Paul, Minn., and Cincinnati.

Honors

UPI named Art Shell of the Raiders its AFC Coach of the Year and Jimmy Johnson of the Cowboys its NFC Coach of the Year. . . Charles Barkley of the 76ers was named NBA Player of the Month for December. He averaged 33.6 points and 10.7 rebounds in 13 games. . . College Basketball Players of the Week: Big Ten—Indiana forward Eric Anderson. Illinois forward Sarah Sharp; Missouri Valley Conference—Creighton center Chad Gallagher. . . Lothar Mattaeus, captain of the World Cup champion West Germany, was named World Soccer Player of the Year. . . John Smith, arguably the best American wrestler of all time, and Lynn Jennings, the best women's distance runner in the United States, are the U.S. Olympic Committee's Sportsman and Sportswoman of the Year.

Politics

South and North Korean officials will meet next week at the truce village of Panmunjom to discuss sports exchanges and unified Korean teams at major competitions. The sides previously met Nov. 29.

Skiing

Canada's Alain Villiard has flown home with an injured shin and will miss Sunday's World Cup slalom at Kitzbuehel, Austria.

Soccer

The U.S. national team opens its 1991 schedule against Switzerland Feb. 1 in the Miami Cup. Colombia and German club Bayern Munich also are entered for the Orange Bowl tournament. . . Liverpool blanked second division Blackburn 3-0 in the third-round return match of the English FA Cup. Liverpool was lucky to escape with a 1-1 draw four days earlier.

Swimming

Tamas Darnyi of Hungary sliced more than two seconds off his 400-meter individual medley world record, clocking 4 minutes 12.36 seconds to retain his crown at the World Swimming Championships in Perth, Australia.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Sign-ups for Florida State's intramural basketball league continues until Jan. 16. The mandatory captains meeting and roster turn-in will be Jan. 16 at 4 p.m. at Moore Auditorium.

FSU intramurals will stage a foul-shooting tournament today and Thursday. Sign-ups for the event end Thursday. For more information, call 644-2430.

FSU intramurals is hiring officials for the upcoming basketball league. An introductory meeting for anyone interested will be held today at 4 p.m. at 206 Tully. Stop by the intramural office for more information.

Tallahassee's wrestling club practices on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 6:30-8:30 p.m. at Emory Morris Taekwondo USA, 2818 Capital Circle N.E. For more information, contact Taekwondo USA at 385-7533 or Sonny Momen at 575-2126.

The Sport Clubs Council meets today at 4 p.m. at 212 Tully. Each club must have a representative in attendance.

Baker and Aziz fail to reach agreement in Geneva

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

GENEVA—Secretary of State James Baker said Wednesday that his six-and-a-half hours of talks with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz failed to bring a peaceful solution to the Persian Gulf crisis.

At a news conference, Baker described his talks with Aziz as "serious and extended," and emphasized that he had come to Geneva "not to negotiate ... backward" from the U.N. resolution authorizing force if Iraq does not withdraw from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

The secretary of state said he came "to communicate, and communicate means listening as well as talking, and we did that, both of us."

"The message that I conveyed from President Bush and our coalition partners was that Iraq must either comply with the will of the international community and withdraw peacefully from Kuwait or be expelled by force," Baker said.

"Regrettably, ladies and gentlemen, I hear nothing today that—in over six hours I hear nothing that suggested to me any Iraqi flexibility whatsoever on complying with the United Nations Security Council resolutions."

Baker also said Aziz refused to accept a personal letter from Bush to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

"Now the choice lies with the Iraqi leadership," Baker said. "The choice ... is theirs to make."

Aziz noted "grave differences" between his country and the United States and said Iraq was willing to work for a peaceful settlement to the 5-month-old crisis if Washington wanted such an agreement.

But he said Iraq would not soften its position—chiefly that its invasion was just and any diplomatic solution must address the Palestinian question—and promised an attack on Israel if U.S.-led forces attack Kuwait.

Baker said, "There have been too many Iraqi miscalculations. So let us hope that Iraq does not miscalculate again. The Iraqi leadership must have no doubt that the 28 nations, which have deployed forces to the Gulf in support of the United Nations, have both the power and the will to evict Iraq from Kuwait.

"It is [Iraq's] choice ... to continue its brutal occupation of Kuwait. Iraq will be choosing a military confrontation, which it cannot win and which will have devastating consequences for Iraq," Baker said.

"I made these points with Minister Aziz and I reiterate that to [Iraqi President Saddam Hussein]," the secretary said, and I did so with the sole purpose of searching for the peaceful, diplomatic solution ...

Asked what action the United States was prepared to take, Baker said, "I don't know what the next steps are. ... I do know that

Bush disappointed with talks, but 'there's still hope'

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—A disappointed President Bush said Wednesday that Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz showed "no flexibility" at the six-hour Geneva meeting with Secretary of State James Baker and rejected his letter to Saddam Hussein.

Bush said that Baker, who telephone him after the marathon meeting, reported that the Iraqis demonstrated "no propensity to comply" with the U.N. resolutions to end their occupation of Kuwait. But Bush added, "I have not given up hope at all."

He said he is still hopeful that Hussein has "seen a firm position on the part of the United States," as well as others. "But I can't tell you that this Baker meeting moved the process forward an inch," he said.

Bush made the remarks at the conclusion of a meeting of bipartisan congressional supporters of his request for a resolution endorsing the use of force to expel Iraq from Kuwait, which it invaded Aug. 2. Bush said he had taken the "last extra step for peace in terms of a bilateral relation," meeting he was ruling out further U.S.-Iraqi meetings.

He said the Iraqis offered no alternative proposals or even a phased withdrawal from Kuwait. The president gave a flat "no" when asked if he was encouraged by what he heard.

"I think Iraq has demonstrated no flexibility whatsoever, and I think the meeting we're having here today now takes on even greater importance because I would like to see the Congress

Public opinion is split over Democrat, sheriff controversy

BY KRIS ELVIN
STAFF WRITER

Sheriff Eddie Boone

A recent survey shows that the public isn't quite sure how it feels about the ongoing controversy between the Tallahassee Democrat and the Leon County Sheriff's Office.

Kerr & Downs Research, a Tallahassee-based survey company, conducted a poll between Nov. 2 and Nov. 20 asking residents of Leon County their views on the conflict between the newspaper and the sheriff's office.

The controversy stems from a series of conflicts between the Democrat and the sheriff's office. In 1988, a Democrat reporter was arrested after she carried a note from a prisoner out of the county jail. Then, the sheriff's office secretly recorded a telephone conversation with another reporter. In the meantime, the paper has run several critical articles about the sheriff's office.

In a Jan. 4 press release, company Chair Phillip Downs said that out of 702 adults who responded, 31.7 percent felt the Democrat's coverage was fair. Another 31.5 percent said the coverage was not fair, and 36.8 percent said they were uncertain. Only 53.1 percent said they had read any of the paper's articles.

There is a margin of error of plus or minus 3.7 percent.

Several of those polled had strong opinions.

"Democrat reporters should be shot. They need to learn to report fairly," was the response of one resident.

But the fact that public opinion is almost evenly divided pleased Leon County Sheriff Eddie Boone.

"It was pretty enlightening to me," Boone said Wednesday. "I thought it was positive and encouraging to me."

He said he was also glad that nearly half the people who responded said they did not read any of the Democrat articles about the sheriff's office.

"I think its encouraging that the Tallahassee Democrat is not the sole source of knowledge in Tallahassee," he said. "I think it reveals that the Democrat is lacking in credibility in the community, not the sheriff's office."

Tallahassee Democrat Publisher Carrol Dadisman said he hoped the community believed the news stories were unbiased.

"Obviously we'd like everybody to think we're fair, but in view of criticism we've had from some quarters, I am somewhat heartened that the same number of people thought we were fair as thought we were unfair," he said.

Dadisman also said he thought Boone had used the content of the articles to create a controversy when there is not one.

"The sheriff has tried to characterize this as a vendetta; it is not that," he said. "But obviously he has tried to persuade some people that it is."

He said it was good for the survey to include questions about the paper's credibility.

"I think it was a fair question to ask about the fairness of our coverage," he said. "I have no quarrel with the framing of the question. I think that that's fair game."

But Dadisman said the survey should be extended.

"We don't mind our performance being questioned in a survey, but we think it would be appropriate to see the sheriff's office's performance questioned in a survey, too," he said.

Boone said the fairness question about the Democrat's coverage was a paramount issue in the controversy because the sheriff's office is not able to influence public opinion.

"We don't own a newspaper."

Polly Straughen, a research analyst for Kerr & Downs, said the controversy was the reason the company decided to do the survey.

"It's something that's been out in front of the public for quite awhile, and it continues to be of interest," she said. "And yet there had not been anything done on how the people of Tallahassee felt about the issue."

One of the unique features of the survey, Straughen said, was the fact that both Dadisman and Boone received a copy of every comment made by the respondents.

"It's very unusual to have people's verbatim comments to go directly to the person or business that is being covered in the survey," she said. "I think it's a very effective way to use survey research."

Straughen said the company does not plan to do a follow-up survey unless the issue remains in the public eye.

Stand for peace

Editor:

My conscience compels me to express my opinion on several matters concerning the United States' military presence in the Persian Gulf. I am 21 years old and a pacifist. I am increasingly aware of the prospect of imminent war and am concerned about the possibility of a military draft.

I cannot accept any political decision or option that involves the murder of human beings. I feel that there is always some alternative to war (such as peace), and that if peace is the stated political objective, it cannot be attained by military action, violent or no. War is simply wrong, and even though it has been used as a political tool for millenia, it is as wrong as it has ever been. I feel that war is wrong for two main reasons. One, it is unjust, that is, those who decide to make war are not those who must fight. And two, nothing is worth killing or dying for; another option can always be found.

Regarding this particular action in the Persian Gulf, I feel that it is economically motivated, the worst motive above all. Young people will go and die (a strong, well-worn phrase, but, nevertheless, indisputable) for other, older people's money. Our president is very rich and powerful and will continue to be so, regardless. He does not need to care about life, and I believe that he does not. If he cares about halting naked aggression," then it is for the first time that he cares, for his support of the contras refutes any such claim. As for a "New World Order," how much more blatant could one become in the use of propaganda and war rhetoric? A more barren phrase I have never heard. Besides, would a "New World Order" with the former CIA director as its father by any more peaceful or free then the present "order?"

I urge you to now defy the defense industry, George Bush, and the rampaging mob of media hawks and to make a stand for nonviolence, in this and in all future conflicts. People and life are more important than whatever rhetoric the Bush administration is pushing now. Please give peace a chance.

Gregor R. Harvey

Another memorial

Editor:

There are at least 57,000+ excellent reasons why Bush Quayle shouldn't be allowed to start a war with Iraq. There's no reason to list them here; they're already on a wall in Washington. If we have a war in the Gulf, we're going to need another memorial. The Veterans Information Project proposes it be a sandstone "oil barrel" with the names of the U.S. dead in a two-meter band around the base. (The non-U.S. casulties will be ignored as were the 6,000,000 Southeast-Asians.)

With names 1.5 centimeters high, Pentagon estimates of 25,000 dead would require the barrel to be 16 meters in diameter and 24 meters high. If the French estimate of 100,000 is correct, the barrel would need to be 66 meters in diameter and 110 meters high. Most if not all the cost could be offset by sales to oil and armament corporations for display of corporate logos.

On the other hand, we could not fight a war for oil. We wouldn't need a memorial then. George "How are my polls?" Bush may not attack if he knows the American people don't support his BLOOD FOR OIL war, which is why I'll be at my memorial, the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial in Tallahassee, every Wednesday from 1600 to 1800 hours and why I'll join the peace vigil, at the same place on Saturday Jan. 12 from 1200 to 1800 hours.

Blacks and Republicans? Politics makes strange bedfellows

BY MANNING MARABLE
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

So if Congressional district lines are redrawn to include greater numbers of Black and Hispanic candidates, other districts will become "whiter" and "more affluent," a profile favoring Republicans.

Last month's controversy over the Bush administration's temporary decision to deny federal funds to colleges awarding scholarships to minority students on the basis of race had an interesting secondary dimension. The bureaucrat announcing this new racist policy was an African American, Michael L. Williams, the assistant secretary for civil rights in the Department of Education.

Williams justified the elimination of educational opportunity to thousands of Latino and Black students by declaring that the policy paralleled other Bush administration positions on affirmative action and racial quotas. After Bush was forced to retreat, the hapless Williams was again pushed before television cameras, to declare that the new policy would be replaced by yet another more moderate approach, which still rejected the use of racial quotas.

The white power system in this country has always used Blacks to articulate discriminatory policies, to justify race and class exploitation. White America's "favorite Negro" a century ago was Booker T. Washington, the educator who defended the political disenfranchisement of Blacks and the expansion of racial segregation throughout society. A decade ago, Hoover Institution economist Thomas Sowell became prominent as the Black apologist for Reaganism.

The easiest way for Blacks to become millionaires in this country is to publicly defend reactionary and racist policies. Williams is being used by a cynical system which perpetuates oppression on his own racial group.

But there's also evidence indicating that the connection between Blacks and conservative Republicans is rooted in a curious convergence of interests.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 and subsequent Supreme Court decisions regarding minorities' voting rights have forced state legislatures to create districts in which Blacks and Latinos comprise significant percentages. Today, about 80 white Democrats represent Congressional districts which are 30 percent Black.

Blacks and Mexican-Americans represent the most dependable and reliable voting blocs which white Democrats have, especially in urban districts. So if Congressional district lines are redrawn to include greater numbers of nonwhites, to assist in the election of greater numbers of Black and Hispanic candidates, other districts will become "whiter" and "more affluent," a profile favoring Republicans.

This fact has not escaped conservative Republicans, who now display a strong interest in minority electoral participation.

In a half million dollar project, Benjamin L. Ginsberg, the chief counsel of the Republican National Committee, is collaborating with civil rights organizations to help them with technical assistance in proposing minority districts. Other Republican groups are offering Mexican-Americans and Blacks free computer time, legal assistance and tactical support.

Some statewide elections last year also indicate another kind of pragmatic cooperation between Blacks and Republicans.

In Illinois, Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Edgar received public endorsements from several Chicago Black leaders, largely due to the fact that his Democratic opponent had opposed the late mayor Harold Washington in his 1987 re-election campaign. About one-fifth of the Black vote went to Edgar statewide, which provided the Republican with an unexpected margin of victory.

Black Americans understand that the Republican party is clearly hostile to our interests. But politics makes strange bedfellows, and the refusal of white Democrats to take seriously the message of the Jesse Jackson challenge fragments the degree of partisanship and loyalty Blacks have toward their party.

Unless white Democrats really begin to champion Blacks' interests, Blacks in growing numbers will collaborate with Republicans at state and national levels.

that time is running on, as I said a day or so ago.

"After five months and 12 United Nations Security Council resolutions ... it seems to me that it is almost evident that the time for talk is running out," the secretary of state said. "It is time for Iraq to act and act quickly by getting out of Kuwait."

But he added that if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein does not withdraw his forces from Kuwait, Iraq will be choosing a military confrontation. It is still a confrontation that Iraq can avoid."

"We think this deadline is real and our coalition partners think the deadline is real," Baker said.

As far as next steps are concerned," the secretary said, "it seems to me because we are talking about a coalition ... perhaps there would be some room for us to seek the use of the offices of the secretary general of the United Nations."

Baker has said previously he would welcome another attempt at meeting with Aziz in the event of failure during the Geneva talks.

The two diplomats began meeting at the Hotel Intercontinental at 11 a.m. local (5 a.m. EST) and concluded their talks just before 7 p.m. with two breaks totaling about 90 minutes.

During the lunch recess, Baker called Bush at the White House to give "his description of events," presidential spokesperson Marlin Fitzwater said.

Baker and Aziz made it clear when they arrived in Geneva on Tuesday that neither government was prepared to budge from its stance.

Aziz indicated that he was determined to seek to link the Persian Gulf crisis with an overall Middle East peace initiative and that the Bush administration's stand would not "bring about any positive results."

Baker had vowed to make it clear to Iraq that the international coalition aligned against it would accept nothing short of an unconditional Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

The secretary of state met with British leaders in London Monday and visited other European officials in France, Germany and Italy on Tuesday. After Geneva, Baker was to fly to Turkey, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Egypt and possibly Syria, returning to Washington Sunday via Lumont and Ontario, Canada.

send a strong signal that they want to see these United Nations resolutions fully supported."

Asked if it meant that war was inevitable in view of Iraqi intransigence, Bush replied, "I'm not giving up on peace at all. We took the extra step in terms of the United States meeting with Iraq after many, many dates proposed by us were turned down.

"It has been a frustration because ... the Iraqis have demonstrated no propensity to comply with the resolutions, none at all, and that is unsatisfactory to the United States and it will be totally unsatisfactory also to our coalition partners.

But let us hope," he said, "that strong statements from around the world will help cure Hussein understand that peace is the answer and ... though I hate taking the last extra step for peace in terms of a bilateral negotiation, I would remind everybody that this sent [illegible] against the United States.

"This is Iraq vs. the entire United Nations. And that is the point that is being missed by many people both by people around the world.

Hopefully, he [illegible] Aziz will report back to his president that the United States will do its part in complying with all the resolutions of the United Nations," Bush said.

Bush told the lawmakers the resolution would give the president the best way now given the intransigence of Iraq "to have a shot at peace."

Bush said Aziz rejected the letter and even refused to take it to Hussein. The personal letter from Bush reported [illegible] on eight times the U.N. position that Iraq must abide by the U.N. resolutions demanding withdrawal of its forces by a Jan. 15 deadline.

Peace rally set for Saturday

BY LAUREN V. LUSTIG
ARTS EDITOR

"No blank check!" "Support our troops bring them home now!" "Adopt an energy policy, don't fight for oil."

With these three themes in mind, several area organizations and activists announced at a press conference Wednesday morning that they are sponsoring a peace rally in front of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The sponsors also gave statements denouncing President George Bush's aggressive policy in the Persian Gulf.

"I have to personally speak out against the policy. It's wrong, backward and reactionary," said Rev. R.B. Holmes of Bethel Missionary Baptist Church. "When will this country learn that violence does not solve problems?"

Holmes went on to say that although there really is no acceptable date to start a war, Jan. 15 is an especially poor choice because it's Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

Other sponsors gave different reasons why the United States should not go to war with Iraq.

The Tallahassee Chapter of the National Organization for Women, for instance, focused on the subjugation of women in the countries that the United States is defending.

In a press statement, the Tallahassee chapter of NOW cited the status of women in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. They noted that in both countries, abortion is illegal and women are the property of their husbands.

"These are the kinds of countries that the president wants our soldiers to be allied with or, more likely, be killed for," said a NOW representative. "Do we need to say more?"

Steve Fendell, a co-organizer of Saturday's events, spoke out against war because of its long-term effects.

"Some of the vets that come to our gatherings have the biggest psychological, alcohol and drug problems," Fendell said. "We don't want to see that happen to anyone else."

Saturday's rally for peace kicks off at 11:30 with some acoustic music by Jimmy Lohman. The welcoming announcements will start at 12:15 and be followed by a prayer for peace led by Bob Allenson, a member of a local Quaker group.

At 12:35, Roger Peacey of the Tallahassee Peace Coalition will present petitions calling for a peaceful solution to the crisis in the Middle East to U.S. Rep. Pete Peterson, a Democrat who represents the Tallahassee area.

At 1, County Commissioner and local National Association for the Advancement of Colored People President Anita Davis will say a few words. Her speech will be followed by one from Russell de Grove, another rally co-organizer. After that, the peace choir consisting of Jan Alovus, Pat Seery, David Buckman and Rebecca Doan will take the stage.

Other speakers at the rally will include Ed Deaton of Veterans for Peace and Lois Powell of the United Church of Tallahassee.

The day will end with music by the Stumpbreakers and Tim Fitch and 14 Cents.

If you can't make it to the rally and would like to get involved in some other way:

• Every Wednesday between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m., there will continue to be a vigil for peace at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial at the intersection of Monroe Street and Apalachee Parkway.

• The TPC has initiated a petition drive calling for a peaceful resolution of the Persian Gulf crisis. The signed petitions will be given to Peterson by Jan. 15. Call the TPC office at 222-5945 to obtain petitions for circulation around workplaces, congregations, friends and families.

• There will be 12 hours of silence and reflection on the Middle East situation Saturday, Jan. 12, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Unitarian Church, 2810 N. Meridian Road. This is a non-partisan event; all are invited.

• On Tuesday, Jan. 15, at the Bethel Missionary Baptist Church, there will be a "Let's give peace a chance prayer service" for people who have relatives in the Middle East. For more info call 222-8440.

Parking lot scam

After reports of two "pigeon drop" incidents in Tallahassee over the past two days, officers are wondering whether both were carried out by the same people, said Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Phil Kiracofe.

In each incident, a woman in a store parking lot was approached by another woman claiming to have found a large sum of money and offering to share it.

The first incident occurred Tuesday at 11 a.m. in the Wal-Mart parking lot on Village Square Boulevard. Kiracofe said the suspect told a 59-year-old woman that she found $85,000 in a brown envelope along with a note written by Yassar Arafat asking the finder to use the money to start a coup.

The suspect asked the woman to put $4,000 of her own money in in a safety deposit box along with the $85,000, Kiracofe said. The woman refused to cooperate and called the police.

The second incident occurred around noon Wednesday in the K-Mart parking lot at 3521 Thomasville Road. A shopper was approached by a 25-year-old woman who allegedly claimed to have found money. Kiracofe said the shopper grew suspicious after talking on the phone to a person claiming to be the suspect's boss. The victim called TPD and reported the incident.

Kiracofe said there are no leads in either case.

Police officer battered

TPD Officer Willie Mitchell was struck in the chest Tuesday morning after stopping a driver who had run a stop sign and changed lanes illegally, Kiracofe said.

Calvin Winter, of 1601 Highland Drive, refused to sign citations and told Mitchell that he would "see (his) black a— in court," Kiracofe said.

When Mitchell attempted to handcuff him, Winter, 61, allegedly struck him and struggled to escape until back-up officers were able to help subdue him.

Winter was charged with resisting an officer with violence, running a stop sign and improper passing. He was taken to the Leon County Jail and released on $2,000 bond.

Two armed robberies

Two similar robberies occurred in Tallahassee within minutes of each other Tuesday night, said Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson.

There are no leads in either cases.

The first robbery took place around 9:40 p.m. at the Suwannee Swifty convenience store at 3618 Apalachee Parkway.

Simpson said two men entered the store together and one walked to the cooler while the other approached the counter and put down a bag of potato chips. When the clerk opened the register to ring up the sale, one man allegedly pulled out a handgun and removed the money. Both men then ran from the store.

The second robbery occurred at the Express Lane convenience store on Highway 20 West. About 9:45 p.m. a man wearing a ski mask entered the store, held a knife to the female clerk's face and demanded the money from the register, Simpson said. The suspect then allegedly walked behind the counter, opened the register and took the cash.

Simpson said that before the robbers left, one of them grabbed a pack of cigarettes.

Davis contributed money with other local investors to a fund aimed at luring General Dynamics to town.

General Dynamics and its partner firm Tadiran received a $4-million subsidy from the city in 1988 to come to Tallahassee and build high-tech combat radios for the Department of Defense. The city owns the buildings where the two companies are located and leases them for $1 per year.

Last summer, the company was declared in violation of Tallahassee's anti-apartheid ordinance by the city's purchasing administrator. The decision was upheld by a review committee following an appeal from General Dynamics' local Plant Manager Bill Widmer.

In Wednesday's memo, English wrote that Steel, Hector and Davis—considered one of the most respected law firms in the state—had not "formulated final conclusions" from its evaluation of the ordinance and that work on the evaluation would continue with the Atlanta firm.

But Steve Uhlfelder, an attorney with Steel, Hector and Davis, said city officials received the findings of the firm's study.

"We turned over an opinion to them," Uhlfelder said late Tuesday afternoon.

Uhlfelder would not say what the findings were.

At Wednesday evening's regularly scheduled commission meeting, English acknowledged possession of a copy of Steel, Hector and Davis' opinion. But he refused to reveal the contents, or comment on the legal opinion.

"I haven't had time to review it," he said.

ARTS

Obscenity clause deemed unconstitutional

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES—A federal judge declared Wednesday that an anti-obscenity clause that had been imposed on artists receiving grants from the National Endowment for the Arts was unconstitutional.

The ruling by U.S. District Court Judge John G. Davies was the first to declare unlawful the controversial NEA anti-obscenity restriction on artists receiving government grants, lawyers said.

The decision came in a lawsuit brought against the NEA by the Bella Lewitzky Dance Foundation of Los Angeles and the Newport Harbor Art Museum in Orange County.

The NEA's anti-obscenity rule is no longer in force. It was scrapped in the waning hours of the 1990 congressional session.

Both the dance company and the museum had been deemed eligible for NEA grants last year, but their funding was jeopardized when they refused to sign forms promising to comply with the NEA's anti-obscenity clause.

In his 28-page ruling, Davies called the obscenity restriction an "obstacle in the path of the exercise of fundamental speech rights that the Constitution will not tolerate."

The judge found the restriction "unconstitutionally vague because it leaves the determination of the obscenity in the hands of the NEA."

The NEA, which last year had a budget of $171.5 million, provides government grants to artists and arts institutions nationwide. It became the target of controversy in April 1989 after supporting two photo exhibits in Cincinnati that spawned an unsuccessful obscenity prosecution.

Attorneys for Lewitzky and the Newport Harbor Art Museum welcomed the judge's ruling.

"To my knowledge, this is the first decision on the constitutionality of the anti-obscenity restriction," said attorney James V. Selna, who represented the museum.

> 'To my knowledge, this is the first decision on the constitutionality of the anti-obscenity restriction.'
> —James V. Selna museum attorney

"The obscenity clause really boiled down to being a loyalty oath classic of the McCarthy era in the 1950s, and didn't add to legitimate obscenity enforcement," Selna said.

Both plaintiffs were approved for NEA funds, but refused to vow the grants would not be used for material depicting "sadomasochism, homoeroticicsm, the sexual exploitation of children, or individuals engaged in sex acts and which, when taken as a whole, do not have serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value," as the clause required.

Lewitzky, whose well-respected dance troupe has received NEA grants since 1972, obtained $15,000 out of $72,000 in funds approved by the NEA in 1990. The dance troupe set the funds aside, however, until the legal dispute could be resolved.

The NEA approved a $100,000 grant for four projects at the Newport Harbor Beach Museum, which has yet to receive any of the funds because of its challenge to the anti-obscenity clause.

Josh Dare, a spokesman for the NEA, welcomed the ruling but said it would have little impact on the NEA and its grant policy given the elimination of the obscenity clause.

The restriction was in effect only for 1990 funding and barred NEA grants for allegedly obscene or pornographic material.

The NEA itself had testified before Congress that the pledge was unconstitutional.

Struggling FSU hopes to find consistency vs. 'Cats

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

Consistently inconsistent.

That about sums up the Florida State basketball team's 5-5 start, including 0-2 in the Metro Conference.

If the Seminoles hope to compete with Metro foes like Cincinnati, which they face tonight at 7 p.m. at the Civic Center, some kind of continuity must be found.

"The biggest reason for our early season struggle has been inconsistency," FSU Coach Pat Kennedy said. "We have guys who score 20 points one night and then come back with three or four points the next."

The Seminoles' shooting has been the biggest problem so far. FSU is hitting only 43 percent of its field goal attempts—and the perimeter shooting has been the least successful.

Sophomore guard Chuck Graham, who was expected to be an outside threat, is making just 37 percent of his shots. Senior Aubry Boyd is making only 40 percent of his field goal attempts, but he does lead the team with 15 3-pointers.

"We're still trying to find the right combination at the guard position," Kennedy said. "We need somebody to step forward and start hitting the outside shot with consistency."

Kennedy said he will start junior Derrick Myers and Graham at the guard positions tonight and bring Boyd off the bench.

The inside game has been FSU's strength so far, led by sophomore Doug Edwards and senior Michael Polite.

Edwards is leading the team with 16 points per game and a 50-percent field-goal percentage. The 6-foot-9 forward is coming off his best game of the year in which he scored 24 points and pulled down 18 rebounds against Southern Mississippi.

Seminoles' bowl earnings go partly to Strozier Library

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

A $200,000 contribution from the school's Blockbuster Bowl appearance will help Florida State University's Strozier Library recover nearly 30 percent of the money it lost because of recent state budget cuts.

Charles Miller, who oversees the university libraries, said the amount equals the cuts that hit the library's book purchasing allowance.

"We've received some money from bowls over the last few years," Miller said. "But this is a particularly good moment because our need has increased with the cuts."

The money comes from part of the $1.6 million-plus the athletic department received from the football team's win in the Blockbuster Bowl. In the past 10 years, more than $3 million from the FSU football team's bowl earnings has been contributed to the school for academic use.

Miller said he is "delighted the Seminoles do so well and can contribute in this way." He said the cuts did not affect library subscriptions to periodicals, so the contribution will go directly to the purchase of new books.

University Provost Gus Turnbull said the library is one of the most critical activities of an institution and called it "vital to the academic health of the university."

Although the Blockbuster Bowl, in its inaugural year, was not as lucrative as FSU's prior bowl appearances, Turnbull said the monetary contribution to Strozier is greater than in the past.

The Blockbuster Bowl guaranteed the athletic department $1.6 million, but it could receive more based on the gate receipts and various other revenues.

Officials in the athletic department's business office said the remaining bowl revenue would go directly into the athletic department's budget to support the operations of the department.

The budget ranges around $10 million, and according to the department's business office, the bowls, other television appearances and ticket sales support that budget. The only funds the department receives from the state are to support women's athletics. The school's athletic programs also receive substantial contributions from the Seminole Boosters, an athletic promotion organization.

According to Martin Roeder, acting vice president for finance and administration, the FSU athletic department was operating "in the red" prior to the Seminole football team's 'string' of recent bowl appearances.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Family ties will become even more important. You are willing to stay in the background if doing so will boost profits. Keep your own counsel. A former romantic partner resurfaces in June. Taking a trip abroad this summer will provide wonderful insights. An authority figure gives your career a welcome boost next September. Buying a new home could become your top priority in late fall. Try to move in before Christmas.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Johnnie Ray, baseball's Willie McCovey, rock stars Rod Stewart and Pat Benatar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Only you can answer an important question. Sift through all available facts and figures to make the right decision. A shopping trip yields fine bargains. Keep credit card use to a minimum.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home your professional obligations today, but do not neglect family life. Extra financial rewards come your way; be generous. Make certain your loved ones receive their share of the bounty.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Correspondence regarding your finances can help you lock up profits today. Get out and conduct your own asset-finding tour. A former employer can provide valuable information.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Curb an impulse to play hookey from your responsibilities today. You could miss out on a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity if you neglect business now. Purchase something nice for your home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not rush the panic button if a plan goes awry. Remain cool and collected. A candid chat with your mate or partner will help you sort things out. Welcome suggestions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be extra careful about whom you confide in today. Your mate is your best ally. Get all financial and employment agreements in writing. Focus on projects you can complete on your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your work load may be more taxing than usual. Do not despair — current challenges are the stepping stones to greater financial rewards in the near future. Attend to an older person's needs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your intuition is right on target today. Let your feelings be your guide. Finishing a tough job brings great satisfaction. Give a prima donna a wide berth. You have your own role to play.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An uneasy truce with a family member needs reinforcement. Money could be at the root of your differences. Take steps to establish or maintain a good credit rating.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hopes raised early in the day could be dashed later on unless you proceed with caution. Distracting associates/friends try to lure you from your goal. Save the socializing for evening hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Concentrate on completing routine tasks today. Smooth things over with loved one while your rapport is at a peak. A social event will be a test of your organizational skills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis today is on tying up loose ends. Others will understand if you maintain the status quo. Complete projects already under way. A potential children's lawsuit could become a reality.

This year's bowl produced considerably less revenue than did last year's Fiesta Bowl, which awarded a purse of more than $2 million to FSU.

"If we had a bad year, we will have needed to establish enough of a reserve to cover us," Roeder said.

According to Roeder, the donation to Strozier is a result of FSU President Bernard Sliger's request to the athletic fund governing board to contribute to specific academic areas such as the library. The board determines how much money will go toward academics.

The Blockbuster Bowl also donated $100,000 to FSU for academic use, and Provost Turnbull said that if there were no more budget cuts, some money might be returned to Strozier.

"Any time we get money it helps," Turnbull said. "And the athletic enterprise can certainly help through its donations."

Bearcats

Although Polite's numbers have dropped recently, he still leads the Seminoles with 8.6 rebounds per game and ranks second in scoring with 14.9 points a contest.

Cincinnati, 8-4 and 1-0 in the Metro, reminds Kennedy of the team he had at FSU two years ago that featured George McCloud and Tony Dawson.

"Cincinnati is a very athletic and experienced bunch," Kennedy said. "They also have two very good players in Louis Banks and Levertis Robinson."

Banks, a 6-foot-5 guard, leads the Bearcats with 16.8 points per game and chips in 5.3 rebounds a contest. His all-around play has drawn praise from Cincinnati Coach Bob Huggins.

"Louis is as good as any player that we will face this year," Huggins said. "He's just a tremendous team player."

The 6-foot-5 Robinson has numbers that compare with those of Banks. Robinson is averaging 16.1 points and 5.7 rebounds per contest.

The biggest reason for Cincinnati's success may be the arrival of Herbert Jones—one of last year's most highly-recruited junior college players.

Despite his lack of size, the 6-foot-4 Jones leads the team with 8.5 rebounds per game to go along with his 16.2 point per game.

The Bearcats are not exceptional shooters; it's their rebounding that concerns Kennedy.

"Cincinnati's strength is the second shot," Kennedy said. "They are tremendous at crashing the offensive glass."

Kennedy knows that keeping Cincinnati from getting those second shots will be a key to FSU's success.

"To beat Cincinnati, you have to be able to box out and get the defensive rebound," Kennedy said. "And I think we can do that."

Congress divided on Mideast war issue

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—Congress, opening a grim and fateful debate on the Persian Gulf crisis, unites Thursday in demanding Saddam Hussein quit Kuwait, but split sharply on the "momentous" issue of authorizing President Bush to start a war against Iraq.

In a somber mood, the Senate and House began the debate, split mainly along party lines, in advance of the most historic decision since the Vietnam War, with many calling their votes the most important and significant of their political careers.

House Speaker Thomas Foley said he told the Democratic caucus "that this was an issue of conscience in which every Democrat should respect the views of every other member."

"It's not a party matter," Foley said, calling the decision a "momentous vote ... an issue of conscience."

Despite appeals from Bush that Congress show a "solid front" in the showdown with Hussein, the Senate and House appeared headed for a splintered vote on a resolution dealing with the Persian Gulf crisis.

Foley and Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell tentatively set votes for a rare Saturday session, just three days before a resolution by the United Nations authorizes a military attack to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

Republicans rallied around a resolution proposed by Bush, that mirrors the U.N. document and would allow Bush to start an attack after Jan. 15, required only to let congressional leaders know that all other efforts have failed.

Democrats backed a competing plan calling for a continued squeeze through international sanctions and diplomatic efforts, and requiring Bush to seek a declaration of war from Congress before he initiates unprovoked military action.

Bush has repeatedly said that he has not

African-Americans say no to fighting for United States

BY BERNARD GRAHAM
STAFF WRITER

David Freeland says African Americans shouldn't fight for the United States if war breaks out in the Middle East.

"I've never known this country to fight for me, so why should I fight for this country?" said Freeland, a local African American.

"I would only stand and fight ... if Hussein's troops were on my front lawn. I'd pull out my gun to blow him away to protect my family."

His view echoes that of many African Americans in Tallahassee towards the possibility of war. Having been overlooked for years in the United States, they say there is no reason to fight on the country's behalf.

We've got more to lose and less to gain," said Dyral Mack, co-director of the South Florida Rainbow Coalition. "The [poor] homes are going to get [a] third [of the] African American men and women."

Mack added that African Americans have never been treated with respect despite serving in other wars. And if there is a war after Jan. 15, he said the end result will be the same.

"It's tragic that they can go over there and fight for this country, but when they get back here they'll be treated as second-class citizens," he said.

Mack also pointed to the fact that there is a disproportionate number of African Americans among the U.S. troops stationed in the Middle East. While blacks make up 12 percent of the population, they make up 24 percent of enlisted U.S. forces according to Air Force Capt. Sam Gizzie, a Pentagon spokesperson.

There's not enough economic opportunity for African-Americans in the civilian world so they have to look toward the service," he said. "They're joining for economic reasons."

There's also a high disproportionate number of African-Americans in the military that would end up dying in a higher disproportionate number for a country that never wants to recognize us for the contributions we made in the wars we fought in.

City exempts GD from anti-apartheid ordinance

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST. NEWS EDITOR

General Dynamics—the defense contractor found in violation of Tallahassee's anti-apartheid ordinance—will be allowed to stay in town as long as the corporation meets federal anti-apartheid laws in five years' time.

After approximately 45 minutes of deliberation in a special hearing Thursday afternoon, Tallahassee city commissioners voted 4-1 to grant the electronics firm an exemption from the strict standards of the city's anti-apartheid ordinance—one of the nation's toughest.

"There's a need to refine [the] ordinance to reflect what's going on in the world," said Commissioner Jack McLean, who cited reforms in apartheid South Africa as one reason for needed flexibility in the city's law.

U.S. anti-apartheid rules include a ban on transfer of U.S. military technology to South Africa by foreign firms receiving U.S. technology.

Mayor Steve Meisburg, along with Mayor Pro Tem Debbie Lightsey and Commissioners Jack McLean and Bob Hightower voted to grant the company an exemption from the ordinance.

Commissioner Dorothy Inman Crews was the only one who voted against granting the exemption.

FSU employee arrested

An associate director at Florida State University's Center for Professional Development, was arrested Thursday morning and charged with nine counts of indecent exposure and three counts of lewd and lascivious behavior, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson said Thursday.

According to Simpson, a man had been driving up to young girls in the Killearn Lakes area, lowering his pants, and fondling himself in front of the girls. Sheriff's office detectives had been working on the case since September, but on Sunday, the father of one of the victims saw the man's license plate and reported it to the authorities.

The sheriff's office traced the tag to 41-year-old Steven Chapman of 201 Ridgeland Road. Chapman was arrested at his office around 11 a.m. Thursday. After being interviewed at the sheriff's office, Chapman was charged with the crimes, Simpson said.

"It is our understanding that the university will place him on leave pending the investigation," said Mary Pankowski, director of the Center for Professional Development.

Pankowski stressed that Chapman has not been convicted.

"He has been accused. He has not been convicted," Pankowski said. "That is why he has been placed on leave."

Chapman will be formally charged today at noon. The amount of bond, if any, will be set at that time.

Students get up, stand up and march for their rights on Monday

BY SPENCER FLEURY
STAFF WRITER

Students at Florida A&M University plan to make their feelings on various issues known to local elected officials Monday with a protest march from the FAMU campus to the state Capitol.

"What we're doing is like an awareness event," said FAMU student and protest organizer Kirk McCall. "We're trying to bring about an awareness on certain legislation."

McCall mentioned President George Bush's veto of the Civil Rights Act of 1990, minority involvement in Saudi Arabia and the current controversy concerning the constitutionality of minority-targeted scholarships as some of the issues that will be addressed.

"We consider it very, very necessary for minorities to have these (minority scholarships)," said Curtis Johnson, president of the FAMU Student Senate. "Without them there is little chance for minorities to attend college."

Johnson, who is also involved in the protest, mostly said state government is only the first target.

"This started on a state level, but there's a national sector that needs to be aware that we are concerned," he said.

According to McCall, both state and national levels of government will be made aware of the concerns of these students through a letter writing campaign.

McCall said they are also concerned about the minorities that are stationed in the Middle East.

"We are trying to call attention to the minorities serving in Saudi Arabia," he said. "If they're willing to go the extra mile to put their lives on the line, why don't they get the respect they deserve?"

Johnson said it's inappropriate that the U.N. deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait falls on Jan. 15, the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"Dr. King stood for so much in the way of equality and justice," Johnson said. "His birthday will be marked by the annihilation of large numbers of African-Americans. A lot of people in this movement consider it a direct insult to Dr. King."

Local officials have been invited "to give a greeting to the students," McCall said. He encourages students from both FAMU and Florida State University to attend.

The protest march will begin at 11:30 Monday at the corner of Wannish Way and Gamble Street at the SGA trailer on the FAMU campus. Events at the Capitol start at 12:30.

made a decision on any offensive military action against Iraq, but the U.N. resolution gives him that authority anytime after Jan. 15. Bush has declared he does not need any authorization from Congress.

The Senate and House will also vote on a resolution that declares Congress finds that the Constitution "vests all power to declare war in the Congress of the United States. Any action taken against Iraq must be explicitly approved by the Congress of the United States before such action may be initiated."

Dole, in brief Senate remarks, suggested one compromise – authorizing Bush to go to war but allow expedited action by Congress to rescind the authority if Democratic leaders feel there has been "a misuse of power."

The Senate GOP leader also hinted that some Republicans, presumably the conservatives, might launch a filibuster to prevent any action if they see Congress is "sending the wrong signal" to Iraq.

Lawmakers from both parties stressed they are totally committed to the withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait and that their only differences are based on the best way to achieve that goal.

"In its simplest form, the question is whether Congress will give the president an unlimited blank check to initiate war against Iraq, at some unspecified time in the future, under circumstances which are not now known and cannot be foreseen, or whether, while not ruling out the use of force if all other means fail we will urge continuation of the policy of concerted international economic and diplomatic pressure," Mitchell said.

"The question is should war truly be a last resort when all other means fail," he asked. "Or should we start with war, before other means have been fully and fairly exhausted."

Arguing that sanctions are working and will become even more effective, Mitchell said, "The grave decision for war is being made prematurely."

No war

Regrettably, I heard nothing today that suggested to me any Iraqi flexibility. The choice is Iraq's. If it should choose to continue its brutal occupation of Kuwait, Iraq will be choosing a military confrontation which it cannot win.

Secretary of State James Baker

Those somber words, spoken by Baker after his six-and-a-half hour meeting with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz Wednesday, fell hard on those anxiously awaiting the results of the talks in Geneva.

They implied that at this point in the Gulf crisis, war is the only alternative. Indeed, with the United Nations "deadline" for the use of force looming just four days away, many have come to accept that war is the only option left to force Iraq from Kuwait.

But it's not, we believe—although you wouldn't know that from the courses of action President George Bush and Congress have taken throughout the crisis.

The momentum the president has methodically sought to accelerate since the first troops were ordered to Saudi Arabia continues unabated. Following Wednesday's talks, it was announced that American diplomats in Baghdad have been told to leave by Saturday, that call-ups of reserves were extended, and that wartime procurement procedures are in effect.

It sure looks like preparations for war.

But again we ask, why the need to rush things? Contrary to popular perception, there is no deadline for war. The Jan. 15 date set up by the U.N. resolution allows that force can be used after that time. But it doesn't mean that the U.S.-led forces have to begin expelling Iraq from Kuwait then.

There are still other options. Bush hinted at one Wednesday when he suggested that U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar may be able to persuade Hussein to withdraw. The European community and Arab nations also continue to seek some kind of diplomatic breakthrough.

But even if these third-party attempts at mediation fail, there are still the sanctions to turn to. They are taking their toll. But they can't work without time, perhaps as much as a year. Why not give them a chance? Patience may lead to some complications, but surely, knowing the unpredictable consequences of war, it's worth it.

Bush feels that he has the approval of the American people when he says the U.S. is willing to expel Iraq from Kuwait by force. He doesn't. And it's not his decision to make anyway.

At this time, Congress seems unsure about what course of action to take. Many have bought the administration line that the Geneva talks were the last chance for peace. Feeling the momentum, and sensing that it is too late, many appear inclined to scrap their constitutional duty to declare war and vote in favor of a resolution backing Bush's call for force.

That would literally be a tragedy on a global scale.

If you haven't already, get in touch with your elected U.S. Congress members and tell them how you feel:

- U.S. Sen. Connie Mack: 202-224-5274
- U.S. Sen. Bob Graham: 202-224-3041
- U.S. Rep. Pete Peterson: 202-225-5235

In addition to calling your representatives, go to the peace rally that's planned for Saturday morning at 11:30 in front of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial across from the Capitol.

Congress, and everyone else involved, should do all they can to stop this war from happening.

Response to Hicks

Editor:

Mr. Hicks, you are a disgrace to Christians. You know nothing about Christianity, much less about Islam or Judaism. How dare you imply that Moslems should be slaves!?! You know nothing about Islam; all you know is what you see on your television. Islam regards Jesus more highly than even Christianity, and a Moselm shows a very high respect for Jesus. I would not expect anyone of your mentality to know this. The Bible does not condone slavery. In fact, if there were to be slaves, I think that only people like your "Holy Self" should be slaves.

Rachel M. Rumberger

Editor:

The moral decline in this society is not due solely to women. I'm sorry Mr. Hicks, but men are going to have to take some of the blame. Men have fallen down on their primary responsibility to their families, which has caused the breakup of the family, and has forced women to go into the workplace to support themselves. What would you have the women on this campus do? Go home and wait for a man to come along. They would probably be waiting a long time. I think women should be commended on taking responsibility for themselves by trying to be self-supportive.

Rebecca Williams

Editor:

Now that we have had a "hoot" over Buddy Hicks' letter, "Going to hell," I would like to voice sharp disagreement with his every point. I, too, am a Southern Baptist born and raised in the South on strict morals. I have also observed a general decline in society's morals and attitudes.

However, Mr. Hicks' angry contentions that working women are to blame, that God is punishing homosexuals through the AIDS epidemic, that "the black man was better off under the guidance of "continuation of the Crusades," are completely un-Christian, and are ridiculous to the point of not meriting individual rebuttal. Although I am personally opposed to abortion as a means of birth control, this issue alone cannot explain society's ills, either.

Despite being a professing Christian, Mr. Hicks has missed Jesus' message entirely, in my opinion. I believe His teachings do hold the answers for all of society's problems, but since society is a reflection of its individual members, any change must come at the individual level. Jesus focused on the individual, working for change in the inner man through love and faith in Him. No external human leader (Saint Pat Robertson, included) can make these changes.

I would urge all who identify themselves by the name of Christ, including Mr. Hicks, to start from within and use Christ-like love to spread the Good News, instead of pointing fingers. It's bound to be a lot more effective in solving society's problems, and it might just reduce his blood pressure, too.

Carl Vinson, Jr.

Not funny radicals

Editor:

The letter published in the Jan. 9 Flambeau under the pen name of Buddy Hicks was truely in bad taste. The moderate amount of humor it provided with its transparent feigning of a grossly stereotypical religious right-wing bigot was far outweighed by the nonconstructive reactionary emotions it attempted to stir up. As someone who would be considered by most to have moderate liberal leanings, I am hurt and offended that those of a more radical liberal persuasion feel they must resort to this sort of activity to make conservatives look bad. Letters like the one from "Buddy Hicks" only help to polarize the situation more than it already is. What we need more of now is moderate conservatives and liberals to work together to solve our problems and less radical extremists working to advance ideological agendas.

On your side

Editor:

We are not the students who went to the Capitol and said, "Please raise our tuition." We are the students who talked with legislators about what was the lowest possible realistic alternative to a 15 percent across-the-board hike. What takes "cajones" is going in ready to bargain instead of crying when the legislature ignores the infantile dream of a zero percent tuition hike.

We are the students who, when the appropriations committee voted to raise tuition 25 percent across the board, were the only ones in the state to be there and speak against it.

We are the students who mobilized and lobbied every member of the appropriations committee and personally met with the chairman of that committee, successfully preventing an additional raise in tuition.

We are the students who helped to get an additional $1 million in financial aid.

In addition, the fact is that the recreation center decision was made 10 years ago and the vote for student fee increases was not unanimous. But, we are the students that have reformed the A&S fee process so that the fee can never be raised without real, constructive, and in-depth student input. One generation of students will never again be able to pawn costs off on another generation.

We are THE SEMINOLE PARTY! and WE'RE ON YOUR SIDE!

So, in the future Mr. Johnson, get your facts straight. Call the student government offices or go down to the Capitol and find out what is really being done. Don't subject the students of FSU to your distorted tirade based on misinformed assumptions.

ordinance provided it meet national anti-apartheid sanctions, told a nearly full city commission chamber that the city's anti apartheid law would remain strong despite the move.

"I believe this is fair and I believe that it's balanced," said McLean, who asked that portions of the ordinance not coinciding with national laws be deleted. "And I believe it's fair to both the black and the white community."

The commission moved to grant the exemption despite an earlier ruling by a review committee that found General Dynamics in violation of the ordinance. That body upheld the city purchasing administrator's decision, which also found the company in violation of the law last summer.

General Dynamics and partner Tadiran received a $4 million subsidy from the city to come to Tallahassee to construct high-tech combat radios on a Pentagon contract. The city owns the buildings where the two companies are located and leases them for $1 per year.

The company was found in violation of the ordinance when it revealed that one of its subsidiaries—Cessna Aircraft—sold aircraft to a South African company, Aircraft Distributors of Southern Africa.

General Dynamics employs 79 workers at its plant at the Commonwealth Centre and has constructed approximately 70 test radios to date.

Inman-Crews, the single dissenting vote on the commission board, said that despite other arguments, the commission should adhere to language in the ordinance saying the city should not do business with companies that have ties to South Africa.

"We do have an ordinance here," Inman said. "We knew it was going to be painful if we ever had to apply it."

Immediately seconding McLean's motion, Commissioner Hightower argued that General Dynamics has been successful in providing jobs in the community and that municipal government has no business tampering in international affairs.

"That's why we have a Congress," Hightower said.

Commissioner Lightsey echoed Mclean's argument that expected reform in the South African government's policy of racial separation was a good reason to revise the ordinance.

"I think that events in the world today are such that we can anticipate positive changes in South Africa," she said.

North Florida Rainbow Coalition Co-Director David Mack said the vote meant that commissioners—with the exception of Inman—are not interested in enforcing the ordinance.

"The exemption is an outrage," said Mack after the board adjourned. "They only want a policy on paper."

General Dynamics plant manager Bill Widmer was not totally satisfied with the commission's decision because he had hoped it would clear the company altogether. He added that the firm would continue to work to get a full exemption.

"We wanted a long-term complete judgment," Widmer said. "But it's a start in the right direction."

the Bethel AME Church, agreed.

"Some of these people put their families, careers and personal lives on the line for people who don't give a damn about them," he said. "President Bush and our elected officials are saying 'It's OK to say let's fight and kick some butt when none of our loved ones are there.' I bet none of them have close family there."

Richardson said the well-being of African Americans and others is not being considered.

"I'm not sure that a piece of land and a bucket of oil can justify . . . laying down the lives of . . . United States service people," he said.

But Florida A&M University student Russell Boudreaux said it is vital for the American troops to be in the Middle East.

"The American presence . . . is a necessity because we can't have Hussein unjustifiably entering other nations and taking them over," 19-year-old Boudreaux said. "We have to stop his surgence of power or it'll be another Hitler regime."

He said if the draft was reinstated and he was summoned to serve, he would support President George Bush's stance.

"I'd go to defend other people as well as Americans," he said. "When you see the senseless killing of people in Kuwait, you don't want to see it spread any further."

But Rev. R.B. Holmes said the United States should wait until other alternatives have been exhausted.

"We need to let the economic sanctions work," said Holmes, minister of Bethel Baptist Missionary Church. "We should show the world we can think it out and not fight it out."

Holmes added that funds being spent preparing for war should be used for domestic issues.

"We can use (the money we're spending to put people back to work to) clothe the naked, house the homeless and feed the hungry," he said. "We want Hussein out of Kuwait and he should be. But at the same time we can't ignore drug pushers out of our neighborhoods, which is a major war here."

Two-year-old Ikea Guthery is part of one local African American family being affected by the crisis.

The young girl's parents, who are Army enlistees, are stationed in Saudi Arabia awaiting the Jan. 15 deadline.

In the meantime, Ikea is living with her grandmother, Brenda Jarmon "BJ" Postley, and not a day goes by that she doesn't yearn for her parents.

"My granddaughter is suffering. She'll wake up at 3 a.m. and her exact words are 'I want my mother,'" said Postley, a 39-year-old Florida State University doctoral student in social work. "A day hasn't gone by when she doesn't ask for both of her parents."

Postley said her 23-year-old daughter was deployed to Saudi Arabia Aug. 23, her son-in-law in September. She said she is greatly concerned for her daughter's well being and does not support the presence of American soldiers in the Middle East.

"I don't think we need to be over there," said Postley, who is the mother of two. "My common sense and rational side says we don't need to be over there. It's not our fight. They should let the Arabians solve it themselves.

"If America doesn't go through with its plan, we're going to look crazy. We're going to look like a fiasco."

Downunder zydeco: down home good time

BY JOSH MITCHELL
FLAMBEAU WRITER

No, zydeco is not a prescription drug. It's a product of Louisiana's Creole heritage.

Zydeco consists of R&B with an accordion as the lead instrument instead of the traditional saxophone, piano or guitar. Another requirement of the zydeco sound is the washboard.

C.J. Chenier and the Red Hot Louisiana Band will be on hand to play some zydeco at Florida State University's Club Downunder Saturday night. Although the band's current line-up has been touring the rest of the country for three years now, Saturday night's performance will be its Florida debut.

Gauging by the band's name, one might be led to believe that these guys are some sort of rhythm and blues outfit. Well they are—in a way. But C.J. and the Red Hot Louisiana Band play a slightly different kind of R&B.

When most people think of accordion music, they think of Lawrence Welk and his ridiculous bubble machine. Likewise, the thought of a washboard brings to mind the theme from the Beverly Hillbillies. Rest assured though, the Downunder has brought some pretty strange acts to town, but Lawrence Welk? As Homey the Clown would say, "I don't think so!"

If you do a little research, you'll find that the word zydeco was coined by C.J.'s late father, the "King of Zydeco," Clifton Chenier. It's translated from a mutation of the French word "haricots," which means "snap beans." The word zydeco itself comes from the old Creole phrase "Zydeco sont pas sal," which means "the snap beans are not salty." This in turn means life isn't too exciting; things are just so-so. And according to the band's press packet, the music is kind of "snappy" as well.

Zydeco, snappy as it is, is easy to dance to. It's common for C.J. himself to start shows off by coaxing people onto the dance floor. As C.J. said in a recent phone interview, "ya'll come on out and let's have a good time."

C.J. and the band take the stage around 9:30 for two "soul stirring" sets Saturday night. Admission is free to FSU students with validated IDs. A nominal fee will be required for those who aren't. Call 644-5078 for more info.

McEuen gets down and Dirty at the Warehouse

BY SPENCER FLEURY
STAFF WRITER

The man behind "Mr. Bojangles," jack-of-all-stringed instruments John McEuen has a reason for his eclectic selection of material for his performances.

"I like to bring bits of our country's music to people who don't expect it," said McEuen, formerly of the country music giants The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, in a recent phone interview.

McEuen, who will perform tonight at The Warehouse, wasn't always interested in playing music.

"I guess I knew I wasn't going to be a magician," McEuen said. "What turned me on was magic."

But instead of following his love for magic, McEuen followed the musical currents of Southern California.

"The Southern California music scene was starting, and it seemed to be what a lot of people were doing that was fun," he said.

John McEuen

But it was one band in particular that led McEuen to the five-string banjo.

"I was led to music by the Dillards, a Missouri bluegrass band," McEuen said. "They were a big influence on me and on a lot of other people."

Other influences include Jackson Browne and Jose Feliciano, both of whom McEuen knew well in those early days in the mid-'60s.

"Feliciano and I would drive around looking for clubs to play," he said. "We'd go to coffeehouse type places and see if they'd let us play.

"Once Jose said, 'John, you should play more than just the banjo.' So I bought a mandolin," said McEuen. "I'm glad he told me that, or I wouldn't have bought it and it wouldn't have been on 'Mr. Bojangles,' one of the Dirt Band's biggest hits."

From there McEuen branched out to the fiddle, the guitar and the lap slide guitar.

McEuen says his music is similar to that of his influences, but the similarity was not the result of any "conscious effort."

"It was something I didn't realize until a couple of years ago," McEuen said.

In 1987, he put an end to his stint with the Dirt Band and headed out on his own.

"I think we kinda quit each other," he said. "It was becoming a copy of itself. There was no risk anymore."

One major difference in attitudes was in how McEuen and the rest of the Dirt Band viewed performing.

"I liked going out on stage and seeing where the audience will take you," he said. "I didn't like playing the same set every night. It was predictable. I haven't missed it.

"Also, none of what I've done in the last year would've happened had I still been in the Dirt Band," he added.

Some of his recent accomplishments include a 90-minute video entitled The Dillards – A Night In The Ozarks, which McEuen produced and directed, an album with long-time friend and collaborator Michael Murphy, six benefit concerts and something he considers to be very important.

"I didn't miss any of my kids' birthdays," said McEuen, who has six children.

Now that he is on his own, McEuen takes advantage of his freedom to experiment.

"I play classical music on the banjo, and I like to use banjo techniques on the guitar," McEuen said. "I also like to make people laugh on the way to getting them to listen, which he does by telling stories and sharing anecdotes with the audience.

Overqualified for Earth: We've gone to far to turn back now

BY MARTIN ALLEN
STAFF WRITER

Submitted for your consideration: The idea that the Planet Earth, and all of the creatures living on it are all part of the same organism, and that whatever the dominant species (in this case Man) does to it, or for it, reflects directly back upon his environment and himself.

This is one of the premises of Tallahassee's newest performance art group, The Watercolors School of Creativity. Consider as well, the fact that since we have become a technologically based species, we have reached a point in our development where not only have we become dependent upon our technology, but we must go even further with it in order to repair the damage that we have already done. Thus, insuring not only our survival, but that of the planet itself.

Now that's one hell of a thing to have to think about over a bowl of corn flakes, but that is exactly the position we find ourselves in, according to Lee Payton, the driving force behind the debut performance of The Watercolors School.

The Watercolors School is scheduled for at least three shows this Sunday at The Nautilus Foundation.

"One of the main themes of the project is that man, through his desire for technology and materialism, has driven himself away from his harmony with Nature," said Payton. "Look at how far down we've gone in only about 500 years, as opposed to the Native Americans who lived here for thousands of years."

The theme of the show, entitled "Overqualified for Earth," is presented in two acts. The first act is pro humanity, designed to show the good things that man is capable of. The second act is intended to raise environmental awareness beyond the point of a few network news sound bites, perhaps even to the point of re-creating old mythology.

"Now, in the '90s, we must become aware that the earth is our deity," said Payton. "It's going to take that level of awareness for us to be able to sustain ourselves."

> 'Look at how far down we've gone in only about 500 years, as opposed to the Native Americans who have lived here for thousands of years.'
> —Lee Payton founder of Watercolors School of Creativity

The show itself promises to be a multi media synthesis of music, poetry and theater, with an elaborate spaceship set design, visual and lighting effects and slides.

"It's more of an elaborate concert than anything else," said Payton.

The Watercolor School of Creativity grew out of Payton's desire to start a band.

"We wanted a tight, dynamic band, so much so that it would flow like watercolors," he said. "I'm trying to assemble a creative force that gives me the same rush as when I paint with watercolors."

Payton would like to stress that the performance is free to the public, but any donations would be greatly appreciated in the hopes the show can be taken on the road. Any actual profits will be donated to the Persian Gulf Relief Fund.

"Whoever is the most reputable," he said.

Overqualified for Earth will have at least three performances on Sunday, Jan.13, at 4, 5, and 6 p.m. at the Nautilus Foundation. Go east on I-10, to exit 32, go approximately one mile to Hwy. 158, turn left, another mile turn right and go yet one more mile, then turn left at Nautilus Drive. The show is free to the general public.

McEuen's new album, Blackberry Jam, is still waiting to be released due to lack of a record company.

"I decided not to wait to tell the record companies what I wanted to do, but instead to go ahead and do it," he said. "The music was important to record."

He will present the album to record labels later this month.

McEuen said the album will feature the renowned Earl Scruggs on two cuts — "Carolina Traveler," which Scruggs wrote, and "Cripple Creek," which McEuen calls "a common song done in an uncommon way."

Scruggs is one of McEuen's favorite performers to work with, "because when I hear our recordings I can't stop when they're done," said McEuen. "I feel like I'm listening to something that ought to be preserved."

"I also really enjoyed working with Michael Murphy because he has a constant barrage of new stuff," he added.

McEuen said he has been very fortunate.

"I've been through a group that made a spot for itself. I mean, I could be in a supermarket at 2 a.m. and hear 'Mr. Bojangles' on the muzak and I'll say 'Oh, no! Not that! Not now!' But I'm glad that happened for 20 years."

John McEuen performs tonight at the Warehouse. Admission is $6. Doors open at 8.

REVIEW

Photography thrives in the Sunshine State.

To get a healthy sampling, be sure to catch the opening of FACT & FICTION on Friday, January 11 from 7 to 9 P.M. at Florida State University's Fine Arts Gallery on Copeland St. This collection of photographs, organized by the Norton Gallery of Art in West Palm Beach, offers a range of techniques and subject matter diverse enough to include the interests of most everyone.

Artists who choose photography as a discipline approach it either in a straightforward way or in a manner that involves technical manipulation during printing. Bruce Weber explains these two schools of thought in his essay for the exhibits catalogue which is filled with beautiful reproductions to illustrate his definitions.

Straight photography includes the work of a group of Miami artists involved in street photography. Included among these is the work of Mario Algaze who uses Latin America as his subject. Because of his Cuban heritage, he is able to blend with the culture, and in his austere black and white photographs, he tries to show how the citizens have gone on with their lives in spite of the political unrest around them. CALENDAR

THE RENOWNED MARTHA GRAHAM Dance Company will take the art of dance to new heights tonight at 8 p.m. in the Florida State University Ruby Diamond Auditorium. The performance is part of the FSU Artist Series. Those who wish to attend should call 222-1287 for ticket information.

A RECEPTION WILL BE HELD FOR sculptor Deborah Lagrasse from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. tonight at the Florida A&M University School Of Architecture's gallery. The gallery is located at 1936 South MLK Blvd. For more information call 599-3244.

PEOPLE WITH A CRAZE FOR photography can see some awesome works at Fact & Fiction: The State of Florida Photography exhibit at the FSU Gallery & Museum. There will be an opening reception from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

ALL ANTI-WAR FOLKS CAN COME together at the "Give Peace A Chance" rally being held Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. The memorial is at the intersection of Monroe Street and Apalachee Parkway. The Peace Choir, Mimi and Merelyn and several other bands will be there to provide inspiration and entertainment.

A TWELVE HOUR SILENCE AND meditation session will be held Saturday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Unitarian Church. The event is free, but bring lunch and dinner. You can come and go as you please. For more information call 488-9200 ext. 202.

PEOPLE CAN KICK UP THEIR HEELS AND twirl tonight at the Club Downunder with Dimestore Lucy. The band will hit the stage at 9:30 p.m. FSU students with valid IDs can get in for free. All others must cough up $2. For more details call 644-6710.

GEAR UP TO BUCK AND PARTY TONIGHT with Gruel at the Grand Finale. The fun begins at 9:30 p.m. and the cover is a measly $1. To know more call 599-9358.

FSU'S CENTER FOR PARTICIPANT Education wants you to help them hire another staff member. By coming out Sunday at 7:30 p.m. to the Grand Finale, you can be a part of its fundraising benefit. Katzenjammer, Mighty Big Blues Band and Tim Fitch and 14 cents will get the crowd jumping. CPE is asking for a $3 donation. For more information call 644-6577 or 599-9358.

HANG OUT AND HAVE A GOOD TIME AT Flamingo Cafe tonight and Saturday night with the Parker Brothers, playing contemporary rock 'n' roll. Both shows are from 9:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. There is no cover but the dress is casual.

photograph is a shot of two girls made small by the large room in which they are kneeling.

Another artist who uses the straight approach is Eric Breitenbach of the Southeast Center for Photo Graphic Studies at Daytona Beach Community College. He exhibits two photographs, both from his "Florida Documentary Project," for which he visited 67 Florida counties.

His goal was to photograph "the real Florida, its people and places" and what the state has "become in terms of religion, class, social structure and economics."

The photographs are unstinting in their reality. "Prison Inmates, Pembroke Pines, Florida" features two young women who look enough alike to be sisters. Even their tattoos can be read.

John Hodges of Tallahassee was a student of Breitenbach. His work is involved with street people, what he calls the "outcasts" of society because of "his love of man—and as an expression of his need 'to rejoice and laugh and scream at the miracle of life.'"

"A Young Couple on Ocean Avenue" features a very young couple carrying their belongings in large bags. The girl is barefooted.

Among the manipulative school of photographers is Jerry Uelsmann whom Weber cites are the most recognized of Florida's photographers.

Uelsmann considers photography a "metamorphosis" and has been a major influence throughout Florida. Many of Uelsmann's students are included in this exhibit, among them Robert Fichter of FSU's art department.

Fichter works with painting and printmaking in conjunction with photography and has three large Cibachrome still lifes from his "Apocalyptic Images" series. "Space Heater" shows a plastic teaching model, a bust of a man with skull and brain exposed, against a backdrop of a painted bucolic landscape featuring animals and people picnicing, along with a few skulls. Encroaching upon this scene is a lush red sky. Fichter combines a sense of fun with a deep sense of foreboding.

Linda Adele Goodine, also of Tallahassee, exhibits a large Cibachrome print of a figure in a ritualistic circle. With intense lighting, she has created mystery and melodrama.

A portion of the gallery is devoted to an installation by George Blakely who teaches in the art department at Florida State. Blakely is interested in the way people assimilate information. His thousands of images drape the walls, ceiling and floor. It would take many visits to look at each photograph, but it doesn't take long to walk around and experience the feel of Blakely's environment. He hopes "... viewers will begin to look critically at what they have seen a hundred times."

This show will remain on exhibit through February 10. FSU Fine Arts Gallery hours are from 10-4 daily and from 1-4 P.M. on Saturday and Sunday.

All quotes are from a catalogue essay entitled "Contemporary Florida Photography" by Bruce Weber.

FSU grad takes the spotlight

BY KEITH TRALINS
STAFF WRITER

Florida State had a homecoming this past Wednesday. Not the kind with the football team and the parade though, a much more sentimental homecoming. A very recent graduate of FSU returned to Tallahassee—starring in a Broadway touring company that produced A Chorus Line.

Mark E. Stephens, at only 22, is by no means the youngest person to ever be in a touring show. But since he graduated from FSU last spring and went to New York, he hasn't stopped working. But Stephens knows where his priorities lie.

"To tell the truth," said Stephens in a recent interview, "the money is not that important and the fame is not that important. As long as I have enough to live on and have my good friends, I'll be very happy."

Mark Stephens in an early FSU appearance.

Born in 1968 in Auburndale, Stephens attended Winter Haven High School before coming to Tallahassee. From the beginning, Stephens knew he wanted to be an actor and his parents were encouraging.

"My mother always supported me," said Stephens. "But my father wanted me to be a pro football player, but after my first professional job, my father asked, 'Are they paying you?' and I said, 'Yeah,' and that was all there was to it."

Kate Gelabert, who worked with Stephens as a teacher and choreographer, had only positive things to say about Stephens.

"As a student, he was wonderful. He was real eager to learn," said Gelabert. "I think he knew that at one point dancing was not his strong point, so he really concentrated on it. He just always seemed very enthusiastic to learn."

Mark Stephens is an optimistic kind of guy. Being an actor in today's world is not an easy thing. Work is almost impossible to come by, and nothing is ever a "sure thing." But Stephens holds his head high, and expects the best.

"I don't believe that every person has to go through the suffering and the struggle," he said. "I think we make it as hard for ourselves as we choose to. If I say to myself, 'this is so hard and I'm not going to make it,' then I set up that pattern in my life.

"But if I say, 'I enjoy what I'm doing and I'm good at what I'm doing and I want to keep doing it,' I think that's what I'll keep doing."

Stephens cherishes the other parts of his life that give him great pleasure, mainly his friends and solitude in which he finds his spiritual self.

"I used to go crazy if I was alone, but now I cherish the time when I am alone," he said. "I like to just sit alone in a room with my headset on and listen to instrumental jazz music."

But touring companies do not allow a lot of free time alone for their cast members. Tours of this size usually only stay one or two nights in a town for performances; days are spent traveling on a bus together. But Stephens takes great care to get his time alone.

"I make time," he said.

"It was great working with Mark," said Bradford Crews, a fellow classmate. "It was fun working with Mark. Mark is a very supportive actor."

Being out of school does have some effect on Stephen's life.

"I miss the people at FSU," said Stephens. "I had some great times here. But I honestly don't miss college life."

For Stephens, his college years were not the best years of his life, and he offers a curious belief as to why.

"I believe that I'm in the best years right now. And maybe when I'm 32, those will be the best years," Stephens said. "I don't like to think of it as those (the college years) were the best time, but every moment is the best time."

Still, Stephens has not forgotten what the FSU School of Theatre has done for him.

"The people of FSU were instrumental in (my) knowing that the artistic part is what is important to me," said Stephens. "If I get fame and fortune, great, I'm not going to turn it down, but it's not the goal."

Ironically, while Stephens was at FSU he played a role in A Chorus Line. He has also appeared professionally in Into The Woods, La Cage A Folles, Gypsy and Brigadoon.

Ward comes off bench to help FSU to 72-67 win over 'Cats

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

Has Pat Kennedy found his man?

The Florida State coach may have finally found a point guard in Charlie Ward. The sophomore came off the bench Thursday night to ignite the Seminoles to a 72-67 win over the Cincinnati in front of 6,502 at the Civic Center.

For his efforts, Ward won the starting point guard role.

"Charlie was the biggest overall difference in our win tonight," Kennedy said. "He just did an outstanding job of creating tonight."

FSU broke a two game losing streak and improved to 6-5 overall and 1-2 in the Metro Conference. Cincinnati fell to 8-5 and 2-1.

Ward replaced starter Derrick Myers and did a good job of breaking the Cincinnati press. Although he scored just four points, his ball handling and passing led to many easy layups and dunks for the Seminoles.

In a rarity this season, FSU shot over 50 percent from the field Thursday night—55.3 percent to be exact

Ward was not the only guard to show improved play as two struggling shooters—Chuck Graham and Aubry Boyd—combined for 29 points on 10 of 17 shooting.

Boyd came off the bench to hit 6 of 11 shots and led the Seminoles with 18 points. Graham, who entered the game hitting just 37 percent of his shots, connected on 4 of 6 shots and scored 11 points.

"When Chuck and Aubry are hitting their outside shots, we're a totally different team," Kennedy said. "We need their perimeter play to beat teams like Cincinnati."

Sophomore Doug Edwards had another fine all around game, hitting 6 of 7 from the field for 15 points. Edwards also led the team with 11 rebounds, and he added five assists and four steals. It was Edwards' passing that drew Kennedy's praise.

"Douglas is the key to our improved passing game," Kennedy said. "It's great to have a player with the knowledge that he has out on the court."

Despite the improved offensive performance, the defense may have been the key to the Seminoles' victory. FSU held the Bearcats to 25-of-70 shooting, for 36 percent.

"Our defense has been solid all year long," Kennedy said. "We did an outstanding job on their star players tonight."

FSU employed a triangle-and-two defense in which they play man-to-man on two players and the rest of the team plays zone. The Seminoles played man-to-man on Cincinnati's leading scorer Louis Banks and Levertis Robinson.

Banks had 18 points and Robinson added 10, but the two combined to shoot just 12 of 29 from the field. Kennedy credited the Seminoles' defense with frustrating the Bearcats.

"Our triangle and two defense really slowed their offense down," Kennedy said. "I know from experience that it is a frustrating defense to play against."

FSU got off to its customary slow start, falling behind 12-5 after four and a half minutes. After a timeout, the Seminoles went on a 13-2 run which gave them a lead they would never relinquish.

After taking a 31-23 lead at halftime, the Seminoles' first eleven field goals of the second half were either layups or dunks. The fast break explosion enabled FSU to sprint to a 57-40 lead with five minutes remaining.

From that point on, however, things got a little tense for the Seminoles.

The Bearcats went on a 27-15 run, but could never cut the lead to less than four points. FSU's missed free throws helped Cincinnati to get close– the Seminoles hit only 11 of 18 free throws in the last five minutes.

"That's part of our inexperience," Kennedy said. "If we hit our free throws, there's no telling what the score would have been. But I'll take the score we had."

The Seminoles must now prepare for another tough Metro opponent as they play Louisville on Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Civic Center.

"This win gives us a lot of confidence heading into the Louisville game," Kennedy said. "Beating one of the best teams in the Metro like Cincinnati will give our young players a boost."

Although they have struggled, the Cardinals feature two of the best players in the Metro with LaBradford Smith and Everick Sullivan.

"Smith and Sullivan are two great players," Kennedy said. "The thing that Louisville lacks this year is a big man."

A lack of a true big man may be the reason that Louisville is not as strong as they have been, according to Kennedy.

Finney's back, but Rattlers still have plenty to work on

BY MICHAEL HARRIS
STAFF WRITER

Finally, there's a verdict Reginald Finney will play.

Florida A&M Coach Willie Booker had seemingly been waiting forever on the academic status of Finney, one of the Rattlers' leading players a year ago and who sat out last semester. The 6-foot-5 guard forward will play in FAMU's 7:30 p.m. matchup Saturday against 6-6 South Carolina St. at Gaither Gym.

"Against South Carolina St., my main worries are foul trouble and rebounding."

—FAMU Coach Willie Booker

It brings Booker closer to the team he talked of in the season's beginning—one of an exploding offense and a tenacious defense.

However, the return of Finney and DeLon Turner—also out in the fall semester—doesn't mean the 3-6 Rattlers will explode just yet.

"The team is off-balance some with the return of Finney and Turner," FAMU point gaurd Kenny Davis said. "We don't quite know where we stand, and Finney and Turner are rusty."

Frustrated with his performance after Monday night's game against Delaware St., Turner wanted to quit the team after shooting a poor 3 of 13 from the field.

"DeLon is a very sensitive person," Booker said. "He thought he let the team down and the fans down. He expected to be able to come into the game where he left off but it didn't happen that way. He knows now that it will come, but it's going to take some time and work to get there."

Even with Finney and Turner back, the Rattlers still have depth problems. But now it's at the guard instead of the forward positions. With the loss of Reginald Kennion due to a torn ligament and Rodney Staten due to personal reasons, Booker is forced to play an inexperienced crew.

"When you're not physically or mentally in shape,

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

FRIDAY, JANUARY 11, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Those who are marriage-minded could find the right partner now. Humor will help you handle a rocky employment period in early summer. A trip you take next August could inspire you to change careers. Enroll in school part-time to learn valuable new skills. Those who embrace advance technology will make the greatest financial progress. Do not be the last to try new things.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Naomi Judd, golfer Ben Crenshaw, actor Rod Taylor, producer Grant Tinker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be realistic about financial matters. Self discipline is the secret to big success now. Someone may need to confide in you. Avoid getting caught in the middle of a dispute.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid making hasty financial moves. Otherwise, you could change your mind in a hurry! Work hard to meet a deadline. A new face in the crowd stirs up thoughts of romance. Go slow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not let complacency endanger an important professional relationship. If married, check with your mate before accepting a social invitation. A child's request destroys top priority.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A stroke of good luck hands you a bonus. If small repair jobs need to be done, take care of them early in the day. A compliment or charity project brings great satisfaction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance beckons. Be extra careful. When making long range plans, ignore unsolicited advice from unfamiliar people. Investing with a loved one could backfire. Loosen the apron strings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This is no time to be a social recluse. Issue and accept more invitations. Short business trips are more productive than overnight travel now. Your fame and fortune are on the rise!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone could have designs on your position. Keep an eye on an ambitious co-worker. A newcomer is bowled over by your charisma. Limit the money you spend on socializing tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Follow your heart today. Let yourself fall in love! Career matters take precedence over social affairs. Wherever influential people do business is the place you should be.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be prepared for some schedule conflicts. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Heart-to-heart talks will bring great joy, whether they involve friends or a romantic interest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If your co-workers are uncooperative, go slow. Talking things out now will not help. Do not press important issues; time is on your side. Give a loved one more breathing room.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take the initiative! Your strength of purpose will inspire others to rally around you. New alliances open highly favorable influences. State your concerns forcefully. Others will follow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on business objectives this morning. Idleness or self-humor could be painful to your spirit. Seek out upbeat people or visit a place of great beauty. Allow for transportation snags tonight.

Lady Seminoles to play three at home

BY SUE MULLINS

The start of the three game homestand awaits the Lady Seminoles basketball team this weekend as it tips off Saturday with Metro conference rival Cincinnati at 4 p.m. just before the men's team takes on Louisville.

Florida State (10-3 in the Metro and 7-2 overall) then plays host to Louisville on Monday and Alabama on Jan. 16. FSU has played on the road since losing their opener over LSU in the Tallahassee Holiday Classic.

The Lady Seminoles defeated Virginia Tech and Old Dominion last Monday. FSU shot a season high 60 percent in that game, outscoring the Lady Monarchs 50-30 in the final 20 minutes after leading by 15 points at the half.

"We've been working on our offense in practice," FSU Coach Marianne Stanley said. "We've been working on getting the ball inside to Wendy Bryan and Sheila Frost. We've been working on getting the ball to the open person. We've been working on our defense and our rebounding. We've been working on all aspects of our game."

Bryan, a 6-foot-2 junior forward who leads the nation with a 71.1 percent field goal percentage, needs to score only seven points to surpass the 1,000 point mark, and she leads the team with 4.6 assists per game.

The Cincinnati contest should provide an opportunity for FSU to play its kind of game.

Cincinnati never runs the ball, which is in our favor," Meadors said. "With good defense, we'll play our running game."

Although it was thought that starting point guard Robin Cox might return after a seven-game absence because of knee problems, she won't see action this game.

The Cincinnati Bearcats (11-3 in the Metro and 16 overall) boasts the conference's player of the week in Tonya Taylor. The 6-foot-2 junior has averaged 22.7 points and 9 rebounds in her last four games.

The Seminoles Monday night opponent, Louisville leads the Metro with a 3-0 record in games, while sporting an 11-2 overall record. Women's coach Jo Meadors said, "We've played them twice before and we've been successful against them. We've been successful against their style of play. We've been successful against their defense and we've been successful against their offense."

Last minute talks with Saddam fail

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar met for about 2-and-a-half hours Sunday with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, declaring afterward he was "neither optimistic nor pessimistic" about the chances of avoiding war.

Perez de Cuellar, who also met for about three hours with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, said afterward at the Baghdad airport he was hurrying back to New York to brief the U.N. Security Council Monday morning on his talks.

"I am neither optimistic nor pessimistic, but I am always hopeful," de Cuellar said in brief remarks at the airport, where he left around 10 p.m. on a flight to Paris before continuing to New York.

> 'I am neither optimistic nor pessimistic, but I am always hopeful.'
> —Javier Perez de Cuellar, U.N. secretary general

Perez de Cuellar was accompanied to the airport by Aziz, who also had greeted the U.N. chief upon his arrival the previous evening. Perez de Cuellar appeared comfortable while awaiting his flight, while Aziz was solemn and had no comment for reporters.

The Iraqi government also had no immediate comment on the meetings, which were arranged after talks last week in Geneva between Aziz and U.S. Secretary of State James Baker failed to reach an agreement for Iraq to remove its troops from neighboring Kuwait.

Perez de Cuellar's meeting with Saddam was seen as a final effort to avoid war between more than 1 million soldiers in the Persian Gulf awaiting the midnight EST deadline Tuesday set by the U.N. Security Council for Iraq's withdrawal from the nation it invaded Aug. 2.

But rather than a breakthrough, there were signs Saddam was taking an even harder line.

Saddam first met Sunday with Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat and former Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, and the Cable News Network reported he kept Perez de Cuellar waiting for up to an hour outside his office before beginning their meeting.

The peace plan reportedly carried by the U.N. chief called for a simultaneous withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and U.S.-led allies from the Gulf region.

The plan would guarantee Iraq it would not be attacked after leaving

While President George Bush received the Congressional green light for use of military force in the Persian Gulf Saturday, more than 1,000 Tallahasseans "voted with their feet" downtown to send the opposite message.

It's like the old saying back in the '60s, 'Make love, not war,'" said Anita Davis, county commissioner and president of the Tallahassee chapter of the NAACP. "We need to be making love, not war."

Davis, who was wearing a Martin Luther King Jr. T-shirt, spoke from a makeshift stage near the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial where the rally was held. At one point the county commissioner lead the crowd in a cheer for P-E-A-C-E.

"It's King's birthday on Jan. 15. He left a legacy for us," said Davis. "If we can't do it with him, we'll do it for him. We don't need to educate our children toward war."

In the midst of jugglers, kids rolling down hills and Hare Krishnas banging drums and handing out free food, speaker after speaker denounced war and President Bush's policy in the Persian Gulf.

"I am 24 years old and still eligible for the draft," Russell de Grove, co-organizer of the rally, told the applauding crowd. "If they reinstate the draft, I will not go. I will not kill for my government's foreign policy."

BY PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

If armed men invaded a home in this country, killed those in their way, stole what they wanted and then announced the house was now theirs—no one would hesitate about what must be done.

And that is why we cannot hesitate about what must be done halfway around the world, in Kuwait.

There is much in the modern world that is subject to doubts or questions—washed in shades of gray. But not the brutal aggression of Saddam Hussein against a peaceful, sovereign nation and its people. It's black and white. The facts are clear. The choice unambiguous.

Right vs. wrong

The terror Saddam Hussein has imposed upon Kuwait violates every principle of human decency. Listen to what Amnesty International has documented: "Widespread abuses of human rights have been perpetrated by Iraqi forces ... arbitrary arrest and detention without trial of thousands ... widespread torture ... imposition of the death penalty and the extrajudicial execution of hundreds of unarmed civilians, including children."

Including children. There's no horror that could make this a more obvious conflict of great vs. evil. The man who used chemical warfare on his own people—once again including children—now oversees public hangings of dissenters. And daily his troops commit atrocities against Kuwaiti citizens.

This brutality has reverberated throughout the entire world. If we do not follow the dictates of our inner moral compass and stand up for human life, then his lawlessness will threaten the peace and democracy of the emerging New World Order we now see. This long dreamed of vision we've all worked toward for so long. A year after the joyous dawn of freedom's light in Eastern Europe, a dark evil has descended up another part of the world. But we have the chance—and we have the obligation to stop ruthless aggression.

I have been in war. I have known the terror of combat. And I tell you this with all my heart: I don't want there to be war ever again. I am determined to do absolutely everything possible in the search for a peaceful resolution to this crisis—but only if the peace is genuine, if it rests on principle.

Two girls battered

Two 13-year-old girls were severely beaten by four other girls and a boy who went to the victims' home Friday morning, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said Sunday.

Kiracofe said the argument was apparently over a boy one of the girls had a crush.

The four attackers took turns beating and kicking the two girls for an hour and 15 minutes and both victims received "severe facial injuries," Kiracofe said.

The attackers, all between the ages of 15 and 18, ransacked the victims' home, destroying property and stealing thousands of dollars worth of jewelry and compact discs, Kiracofe said.

Since both victims and four of the suspects were minors, their names cannot be released, Kiracofe said.

Working with the victims and the Leon County Sheriff's Office, four of the suspects were located and arrested the same evening. The fifth suspect, 18-year-old Cynthia Fox, turned herself into police on Saturday.

Fox, of 2809 Stokeley Lane, was charged with felony criminal mischief and grand theft and taken to the Leon County Jail and is being held on a $2,000 bond.

The other suspects were charged with felony criminal mischief, grand theft and aggravated battery. The four minors were placed in "secure detention" at the Leon County Detention Center, Kiracofe said.

Robbery at "The Moon"

A 17-year-old male was robbed by three other males early Saturday morning, Kiracofe said.

The incident occured at 12:05 a.m. in the parking lot of The Moon, 1105 East Lafayette Street. The suspects allegedly stole the victim's hat and a gold chain. The victim was also struck in the mouth, Kiracofe said.

The victim called the police, who were able to catch the suspects as they drove away from the incident.

Two suspects, 19-year-old Larry Milton and a 17-year-old, were arrested and charged with strong arm robbery, Kiracofe said.

No charges were pressed against the third man.

The 17-year-old was taken to the Leon County Juvenile Detention Center. Milton, of Quincy, was taken to the Leon County Jail and is being held on $5,200 bond.

Administrators will teach this summer

BY AMY ELLERSON
STAFF WRITER

Administrators at Florida's nine state universities are being asked to help alleviate the blow of recent state budget cuts by stepping back into the classroom this summer.

The State University System Chancellor Charles Reed issued a statement in late December asking that all qualified administrators volunteer to instruct a summer course.

"No one is going to be compelled. Essentially, this is a service," BOR spokesperson Pat Riordan said. "It appears to be a lot of people willing to chip in and help."

The need for administrators to teach summer courses comes after a state revenue shortfall forced two separate budget cuts totaling about 5 percent of the state's education budget. Many schools, including Florida A&M University, chose to deal with the cuts mainly by reducing summer school programs.

In the latest round of cuts, finalized last week, Florida State University lost $3.6 million and FAMU lost $1.1 million. The university system as a whole lost $25.3 million.

Reed couldn't be reached for comment, but he said in a press release that the volunteer effort is a temporary solution.

"This is nothing more than a stop gap," he said. "We've had to cut every dollar of new revenues this year, but we still have more than 7,000 new students. Something permanent has to be done about our revenues."

Reed has volunteered to teach a summer class.

Riordan, calling the recent budget cuts the "straw that broke the camel's back," also said that asking administrators to teach classes will help some, but not enough.

"This is no permanent solution to the budget crisis," Riordan said. "It looked as if in some schools, we would be wiping out summer school altogether."

But state universities will not have to cancel as many classes this summer, according to Riordan, now that administrators have volunteered to help out. He added that about 17 or 18 Tallahassee-based BOR employees also will teach courses at FSU and FAMU.

> 'I know when the six weeks are over my desk will be piled high with things not considered urgent. On the other hand, I know most of us would rather be teaching than writing memos.'
> —Elisabeth Muhlenfeld

"We were really impressed by their willingness to pitch in and help in a crisis. Otherwise, the entire burden would have fallen on the students," Riordan said.

FSU Provost Gus Turnbull said that up to 50 classes will be taught by FSU administrators this summer.

"I think it's a useful gesture, but it certainly is not going to make any large dent in the teaching needs," said Turnbull, who plans to teach local government administration.

Although FSU took a large part of its cuts in library funding, the summer instruction budget is faced with a 33-percent reduction. The university is seeking permission from the BOR and the state's budget office to cover the loss with other reserves.

FAMU Provost Richard Hogg said administrators will help the university out greatly by teaching, even though the school's upcoming summer term will be drastically reduced because of the cuts.

"We're trying to provide as many classes as we can afford. This is one way administrators can help fill in for that void," said Hogg, who will teach a biology course.

But before administrators can step back into the classroom, according to Hogg, they will be evaluated by department heads and deans. He said administrators will undergo the same scrutiny as anybody else applying for a faculty position.

Elisabeth Muhlenfeld, dean of undergraduate studies at FSU, said she is looking forward to teaching this summer. Muhlenfeld taught a class last semester in American literature, but she said it will be difficult to teach a summer course—many of which meet everyday for six hours—and keep up with her daily administrative duties.

"I know when the six weeks are over my desk will be piled high with things not considered urgent. On the other hand, I know most of us would rather be teaching than writing memos," Muhlenfeld said.

The bottom line: This war is George Bush's fault

BY RON MATUS
EDITOR

COMMENTARY

It's important to remember now—before the television screens fill with images of exploding missiles and flag-draped coffins, and the chaos of war warps reality and rationality—who is responsible for what is measuring up to be the greatest crime of this generation.

Maybe President George Bush's initial response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and its alleged threatening posture toward Saudi Arabia, though hypocritical in light of the United States' own violations of international law and doubtless motivated more by economic concerns than human life, was appropriate.

But regardless, from that moment forward Bush's actions—whether intentional or not—coupled with the inaction of Congress and the American people, blew what indeed was the perfect opportunity to establish a new world order, and instead led the United States down the path to war.

• Instead of seeking to replace the first batch of U.S. troops ordered to Saudi Arabia with a truly international force, so that the world community could stand united in risk, cost and potential benefit, Bush satisfied himself with a few thousand tokens.

• Instead of giving the most comprehensive sanctions ever imposed by the international community against another nation a chance, Bush switched the role of the U.S.-dominated forces in Saudi Arabia from defensive to offensive by ordering the deployment of an additional 200,000 American soldiers just three months after the sanctions were imposed.

• Instead of using the time that was his advantage, Bush created a fictional deadline from an open-ended United Nations resolution, further accelerating the momentum toward war.

• Instead of using a diplomatic carrot to make Hussein reconsider his invasion of Kuwait, Bush opted to call the Iraqi leader names while holding—in old world order fashion—the cocked gun of military force to his head.

It wasn't until five months after the crisis began that any contacts between U.S. and Iraqi officials took place. They failed, and by then it was too late to try again.

Despite the rhetoric, it was not Saddam Hussein but President Bush who made the miscalculations that brought the United States to war.

President Bush was correct when he wrote in an open letter to American college students this week that the issue of war is "black and white." But despite the rhetoric, it was not Saddam Hussein but President Bush who made the "miscalculations" that brought the United States to war.

Of course, they are only miscalculations if you believe the upcoming war was unintentional. Theories suggesting more sinister motives behind Bush's actions—gaining U.S. access to the world's oil supplies, establishing a permanent military presence in the volatile Arab world to keep it under U.S. control, greasing the gears of a military-industrial complex threatened with rust by Cold War thaw—seem all the more plausible in light of the course Bush has taken.

It's hard to believe with all the uncertainties of war in the region—nobody knows how long it will last, how many will die, whether there would be a Kuwait for the emirs to return to, whether it would further devastate a U.S. economy tottering on the edge, whether it would further destabilize the region—that Bush even considered it an option.

And it's hard to believe that Bush didn't give the sanctions a chance. No, there was no guarantee that they would have worked. It would have required a lot of effort to keep the international community united behind them, and some creativity to help those countries who would have suffered as a result. But certainly they were a much better alternative than war.

Bush has justified his decision for war by comparing Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to Hitler, but his analogy is flawed. Regardless of how despicable and ruthless Hussein may be, Iraq is no Nazi Germany. With his forces tied down in Kuwait, and sanctions cutting his import-dependent country off from oil revenue and vital supplies of every kind, Hussein has nowhere to go except, eventually, out.

The president isn't solely to blame. Congress is an equal partner in the crime. Refusing its constitutional responsibility for petty political reasons, Congress did not debate the merits of war until two months after the additional troops were ordered. By then, having succumbed to the momentum and bought into the idea of there actually being a deadline for war, it was too late. Spinelessly, many of our elected officials, including Florida's Bob Graham, chose to blindly pledge their allegiance to the president rather than point out his folly.

The American people must share some of the blame, too. Bush continued to narrow his options with scarcely a peep of protest from the masses. Until very recently, he had carte blanche.

That is finally changing. People are realizing how disastrous Bush's decisions have been, and how tragic and senseless this war is.

But it's a little too late.

not appeasement.

But while we search for that answer, in the Gulf young men and women are putting their own lives on hold in order to stand for peace in our world and for the central value of human life itself. Many are younger than my own children. Your age, most of them. Doing tough duty for something they believe in.

Let me tell you about one of the soldiers over there, SFC Terry Hatfield, a young man from Georgia. He sent me a Christmas card. And this is what he wrote:

"Mr. President, I just wanted you to know my soldiers and I are ready to do whatever mission you decide. Freedom as we know and enjoy has been taken away from another country and must be restored. Although we are separated from family, friends, loved ones, we will do what must be done . . . We stand ready and waiting. God bless you and the U.S.A."

Terry understands the moral obligation that has compelled our extraordinary multinational coalition to make this stand in the Gulf. To look this international terrorist straight in the eye and say, no concessions. To proclaim for now and in the future, no compromises. To bear witness by our presence to the fact that aggression will not be rewarded. Terry waits thousands of miles from the White House, yet we share the same thoughts. We desperately want peace. But we know that to reward aggression would be to end the promise of our New World Order. To reward aggression would be to destroy the United Nations' promise as international peacekeeper. To reward aggression would be to condone the acts of those who would desecrate the promise of human life itself.

And we will do none of this. There are times in life when we confront values worth fighting for. This is one such time. Each day that passes means another day for Iraq's forces to dig deeper into their stolen land. Another day Saddam Hussein can work toward building his nuclear arsenal and perfecting his chemical and biological weapons capability. Another day of atrocities for Amnesty International to document. Another day of international outlaws, instead of international law.

I ask you to think about the economic devastation that Saddam Hussein would continue to wreak on the world's emerging democracies if he were in control of one-fifth of the world's oil reserves. And to reflect on the terrible threat that Saddam Hussein armed with weapons of mass destruction already poses to human life and to the future of all nations.

Together, as an America united against these horrors, we can, with our coalition partners, assure that this aggression is stopped and the principles on which this nation and the rest of the civilized world are founded are preserved.

And so let us remember and support Terry Hatfield, all our fine servicemen and women, as they stand ready on the frontier of freedom, willing to do their duty and do it well. They deserve our complete and enthusiastic support—and lasting gratitude.

This open letter to college students from President Bush has been sent to more than 400 campus newspapers. The Flambeau obtained a copy courtesy of The Independent Florida Alligator in Gainesville.

SENDING THE MESSAGE

Randy Hils and Christine Stuck (below left) were among the protesters lined up on Monroe Street Saturday to show their displeasure for U.S. policy in the Middle East. Stuck held a picture of her son, who's heading for military duty in the Persian Gulf area, while Jennifer Felleno and her friends (above) encouraged passersby to "honk for peace."

University, harshly criticized what he called U.S. double standards concerning foreign policy.

"Our leaders tell us we'll be fighting for humanitarian reasons," said de Grove. "But where was our concern when Hussein was gassing the Kurds? Where was our concern in El Salvador, where the U.S. Air Force provided reconnaissance for Salvadoran aircraft which in November 1989 killed 3,000 civilians in bombings? Where is our concern for the hundreds of Panamanians still homeless since we bombed their neighborhoods more than a year ago?"

Double standards were a key reason for other people's anger, too.

"I'm against military involvement in the Middle East," said George Sirianni, an employee at the state Department of Transportation. "All we are going to do is get rid of Hussein and install another dictator in his place. Denial of human rights will continue, but the new government will be friendly to the U.S."

Throughout the day, supporters driving past the rally honked their horns and threw cheers and peace signs at the protesters, who lined up on the side of the road wielding posters stating "No blood for oil," "ACT UP Health Care, Not Warfare," "Bush Hussein Save Lives, Not Face."

On the other side of the road about 20 to 25 counter-demonstrators—including many high school "skinheads"—stood holding different signs.

Janet Nelson (right) stands in front of a gallows built to discourage 'blood for oil'

Kevin Miller carried a sign paraphrasing one of Bush's remarks about the Gulf: "America: Time To Kick Some A—."

"I'm standing up for what I believe in—that we can't take s—t from other people," said 18-year-old Miller. "If we let anybody do what they want, other countries will take advantage of America, they'd think we're wimps and f—k with us."

Quinn Henderson, in town on break from school at Emory University in Atlanta, gave his reasons for counter-demonstrating.

"I think Saddam is committing an evil act," said 19-year-old Henderson. "Kuwait asked for help and so we should give it to them. If we don't stop Saddam, he's just going to make his way through the Middle East."

The counter-demonstrators, who at one point burned an Iraqi flag, said they were angry because the peace rally was sending the wrong message to troops stationed in the Middle East. One Lincoln High School senior called the peace protesters across the street "hypocrites."

Lincoln High student Thomas Bull stands among pro-war demonstrators at the rally, holding an American flag. But Bull said he is neutral on President Bush's Gulf policies.

"Some of the people over there are just there because peace is trendy," said 17-year-old Barker Powell.

Many people at the peace rally said they were there to send a message to the U.S. government not to criticize soldiers who are acting on the orders of the president.

Besides wanting to inform the government, many protesters recognized a need for the rally in another way.

"George Bush isn't going to change a thing based on this rally, but we have to do this for ourselves. We have to have a positive outlet for

Urban League president to speak at King commemoration

The president of the National Urban League will be the featured speaker for Florida State University's annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Commemoration Convocation on Friday, Jan. 18.

John E. Jacob

The ceremony will begin at 11 a.m. in Ruby Diamond Auditorium, located in FSU's Westcott Building.

John E. Jacob has been national president of the Urban League since January 1982, and has worked for the social service and advocacy agency since 1965. The Urban League serves millions of Americans through its national headquarters in New York, governmental affairs and research departments in Washington, D.C., and affiliates in 113 cities.

Jacob also writes a weekly newspaper column, "To Be Equal," syndicated by the Copley News Service to more than 600 papers nationwide.

Prior to becoming Urban League president, Jacob was executive vice president for three years, overseeing the organiza-tion's daily operations. He also was president of the Washington, D.C., Urban League, 1975-79, executive director of the San Diego Urban League, 1970-75, and began his career in 1965 as director of education and youth incentives with the Washington affiliate.

Jacob chairs the Howard University board of trustees, and is a board member of the Local Initiatives Support Corp. He co-chairs the Citizens Commission on AIDS for the New York City-Northern New Jersey Region, and is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. He sits on the boards of the New York Telephone Co., Continental Corp., Coca-Cola Enterprises Inc., and National Westminster Bancorp Inc.

The featured speaker is listed in Who's Who in America and Who's Who in Black America and is one of Ebony magazine's 100 most influential black Americans. Jacob also has received the United Way of America's National Professional Leadership Award and the 1989 Bayard Rustin Humanitarian Award.

A native of Houston, Jacob earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in social work from Howard University. He has received honorary doctorates from Old Dominion, Fisk, Tuskegee, Central State, Florida International, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville and Howard universities and Lafayette and Dominican colleges.

Also on Friday at a luncheon, an FSU faculty member will be presented the 1991 Martin Luther King Jr. Distinguished Scholar Award for outstanding service to the university and its students in keeping with the ideals of the late civil rights leader.

For more information, call the FSU Office of University Human Resources at (904) 644-5283.

Minorities win grants for study abroad

Four Florida State University students will travel to Italy or England for the spring semester thanks to scholarships established to help minority students study at FSU's overseas centers.

The new Florence/London Minority Scholarships, funded by revenue from collegiate license-plate sales, were awarded to students demonstrating financial need and academic achievement.

The first winners of the $5,000 scholarships are FSU junior Anna Albelo of Miami, an Hispanic with a 3.2 grade-point average majoring in television production and French; senior Gail P. Myers of Daytona Beach, a black English major with a 2.8 GPA; junior Gisela Acevedo of Tallahassee, an Hispanic accounting major with a 2.9 GPA; and sophomore Bridgette V. Bush of West Palm Beach, a black student with a 3.5 GPA majoring in anthropology.

Acevedo and Bush will attend the Florence program and Albelo and Myers will attend the London program.

In the future, one scholarship to Florence and one to London will be awarded each fall and spring semester to worthy minority students at FSU.

Fancy yourself a Hemingway?

The Florida State University English Department Writing Program is sponsoring the 1991 World's Best Short Story Contest. The winner receives $100 and a box of Florida oranges.

The winning entry will be published in Sundog: The Southeast Review. Send your entry (on one typed, double-spaced page) no later than Feb. 15 to Jerome Stern, Short Short Story, English Department, Florida State University, Tallahassee, Fla., 32306.

The winning entry will be announced on May 15, 1991.

FLORIDA STATE FOCUS
NEWS & INFORMATION

1991 ROBERT O. LAWTON DISTINGUISHED PROFESSOR AWARD

Each year Florida State University names a distinguished professor. All members of the faculty are eligible to submit nominations to the Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor Committee. Nominations should come from individuals, not from departments, schools or colleges, or other administrative units.

Nominations should be addressed to the Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor Committee, Office of the President, 211 Westcott. These should be received by Friday, March 1, 1991; and should be accompanied by complete curriculum vitae, evidence of scholarly excellence such as copies of major reviews or current publications and letters of recommendation from individuals both within and outside the University. It is important to emphasize the national and/or international reputation of the nominee. Nominations received from faculty members from the previous year will be reconsidered automatically, but supporting materials should be updated.

The Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor is chosen from the ranks of those teaching at Florida State University. The screening committee will make its recommendations on the basis of major contributions to teaching, research or creative endeavors, which have been made by the faculty member during his/her career at Florida State University. To be eligible for this award, the faculty member must be a tenured professor, have been at the University for at least 10 years, and above all, have achieved true distinction in his/her discipline or profession. Although scholarly distinction is the primary qualification, evidence of quality teaching (including the directing of graduate research and service to the University and the academic community at large) should be emphasized.

The Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor Committee is composed of three distinguished professors and three other faculty members appointed by the President from a panel of six submitted by the Faculty Senate Steering Committee. This Committee will consider the nominations and make its recommendations to the President, who will appoint the Distinguished Professor.

The title of Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor will be conferred for the year. The title will be retained, with the date of the award, and will be indicated in the catalog listing of the faculty.

President Bernard Sliger encourages all members of the faculty to submit a nomination.

PRESIDENT'S CONTINUING EDUCATION AWARD

President Bernard Sliger announced Jan. 4 the opening of nominations for the President's Continuing Education Award, which recognizes outstanding tenure or tenure-track faculty contributions to continuing education as a vital component of the University's mission. The award carries a $2,000 stipend.

For this award, continuing education is considered to be any teaching, research, publication or administrative services related to outreach educational services.

Nominations may be submitted by any FSU faculty member, staffer or student, and will be accepted through Feb. 1.

To nominate, send a card with the nominee's name and the nominator's name, address and phone number to: President's Continuing Education Award Committee, Office of the President, 211 Westcott, Florida State University, Tallahassee, FL 32306. The nominator will receive a questionnaire to be completed.

War ... what is it good for? Absolutely nothing, kids say

BY LAUREN V. LUSTIG
ARTS EDITOR

Although the kids at Saturday's peace rally may not know the nuances of the Persian Gulf crisis, they did know one thing: War is wrong.

• "War is wrong because it hurts the earth and people die," said six-year-old Rose Leitman.

• "War is wrong because sometimes some people's fathers go away and don't come back—they die," said 9-year-old Sara Leitman.

• "War is wrong because when the soldiers come back, they are not the same. War changed them," said 7-year-old Amber Lynn Lefdset.

• "I don't think war is good because when soldiers go to war the people who love them get hurt," said 8-year-old Kendra Lay.

Touched yet? Well read on.

"I don't think the government listens to Americans," said 15-year-old Melanie Bradford, decked in peace earrings and a tie-dye. "They just do what they want to do. I think the future looks bleak. I would like to be an environmental engineer when I get out of school or maybe work in the government. I'm an honest person and the government needs more of that."

Fourteen-year-old Kata Faust, sitting across from Bradford, said the U.S. shouldn't be involved at all in possible fighting in the Middle East.

"It's not our war," said 14-year-old Kata Faust. 'We shouldn't have our people going to die."

And, like most folks young and old at the rally, 14-year-old Tres Sandell said the U.S. is handling this crisis all wrong.

"I have a lot of friends age 20, and brother and sisters," said Sandell, a student at SAIL, a school for applied individual learning. "I'm out here to make a statement to Congress that there are other ways to go about this besides killing."

Kuwait and included a pledge the United Nations would give priority to solving the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Arab diplomats in the Middle East expressed hope beforehand that Saddam would consider the plan and ask his parliament to endorse it in a special session Monday, just before the Tuesday deadline for Iraq to leave Kuwait.

"This is the last chance," an Arab ambassador in Cairo said. "Perez de Cuellar is offering Saddam what he can ... if Saddam refuses, it will be war."

Perez de Cuellar told reporters at the airport he had "become more aware of the Iraqi position" and was hurrying back to report to the Security Council, but gave no further explanation.

"I have to be in New York at 9 o'clock Monday morning to report on my discussions with the Iraqis to the Security Council," said Perez de Cuellar, who planned to take the supersonic Concorde jet on the leg from Paris to New York.

In Washington, National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft told the U.S. television network NBC that while he remained hopeful about the outcome of the Perez de Cuellar mission, "if you look at the record so far, you have to be pessimistic."

The United States has at lease 370,000 troops deployed in the Gulf region, alongside some 240,000 troops from allied nations including England, France, Egypt and Syria.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa, meanwhile, warned Israel not to get involved in the crisis even in self defense, because "its intervention means mixing the ... cards in the region."

A high-level U.S. delegation headed by U.S. Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger reportedly was giving the Israelis a similar message during talks in Jerusalem Sunday.

Secretary of State James Baker meanwhile visited with Turkish officials in Ankara Sunday before traveling to London during his European and Arab tour to shore up the anti-Iraq alliance.

In Baghdad Sunday, the official Iraqi News Agency reported Saddam said, "We refuse the order of hegemony that America intends to impose on Iraq, the Arabs and the world ...

"We think the path that would achieve security and stability in the region is the road that would return Palestine to its original citizens ..."

he said.

Iraq has repeatedly said the Gulf crisis should be linked to other regional problems, such as Israel's occupation of Palestinian lands.

Baker has repeatedly ruled out U.S. support for an immediate international peace conference on the Middle East, in case it is construed as a reward for Iraqi aggression.

But Sunday, British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, making his own Middle East tour, said in Amman, Jordan, that if the Palestinian problem is not solved, "all the injustices, the insecurity that comes from that problem remains."

Britain on Sunday meanwhile expelled 28 Iraqi diplomats, cutting the staff at Iraq's London embassy to four because the present level of staffing was unjustified."

Britain, like most Western countries, has already evacuated its staff from Baghdad. Turkey also said Sunday it was ordering its diplomats home.

In Turkey, Dutch experts arrived to prepare for the deployment of Patriot surfact-to-air missiles. A total of 300 Dutch and U.S. experts are to arrive to operate the missiles aimed at defending Turkey against an Iraqi attack.

how we feel," said one demonstrator, Larry Teich. "I've been doing this since the '70s and I have gotten sort of burned out—the futility of it all. But I'm here for my son. All he sees is what's on the news, the negative. I want him to see some life-affirming messages as a balance."

Roger Peace, a member of the Tallahassee Peace Coalition, which co-sponsored the rally, agreed.

"These kinds of things don't have any immediate effect," Peace said. "You build support. People realize there are a lot of people who think like themselves. And it helps to raise the issue for people who are unconcerned or who may have been brought up not to question foriegn policy or the president."

Acting on behalf of concerned constituents, Peace was supposed to present petitions calling for a peaceful solution to U.S. Rep. Pete Peterson, who represents North Florida. But Peterson was still in Washington voting against the resolution to OK the use of force against the Iraqis.

In between speakers, skits were performed and members of the Tallahassee music world took the stage. The peace choir moved the crowd with many protest songs. The big favorite was the song "Give Peace A Chance"; over 500 hands waved peace signs in the air and voices chanted the song over and over.

The Stumpbreakers, a collaboration of 15 local musicians, did an acoustic '30s set and Tim Fitch and 14 Cents closed out the day.

"I think these rallies have an incredible impact," said Ed Deaton, past president of the Tallahassee Veterans for Peace, another sponsor of the rally. "We haven't fired a shot. There are no body bags coming home yet. But there are over 1,000 people here demonstrating for peace and that sends a message. Let's honor this memorial, let's not have another memorial. Let's not maim another generation."

Bush condemns use of force in Lithuania

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—President George Bush condemned the use of force in Lithuania Sunday, as his senior advisers warned for the first time that unrest in the Soviet Union could imperil plans for a superpower summit next month in Moscow.

Speaking to reporters at the White House, Bus called the violence in Lithuania, where Soviet forces were blamed Sunday for 13 deaths in a bloody military crackdown on dissent, "deeply disturbing."

Bush went on to denounce the turn of events as "completely inconsistent" with reformist policies that have "helped create a basis for unprecedented cooperation and partnership between the United States and the Soviet Union."

"We condemn those acts, which could not help affect our relationship," Bush said. "At this hour, the United States and the West will redouble our efforts to strengthen and encourage peaceful change in the Soviet Union."

Bush said he inferred from a telephone conversation Friday with Gorbachev that the Soviet president still wanted to "peacefully negotiate" the Kremlin's differences with Lithuania, one of three Baltic states that last year announced an intention of seeking independence from Moscow.

But he also expressed concern about "the internal affairs" of the Soviet Union in response to suggestions that Gorbachev, under pressure from the military or other forces, might have lost some degree of control over the situation.

While Bush would not disucss actions the United States might take in response to further violence, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft and White House Chief of Staff John Sununu acknowledged the summit—already subject to possible postponement because of the Persian Gulf crisis—could further be jeopardized by the situation in Lithuania.

On the NBC News program "Meet the Press," Scowcroft said the confrontation "certainly could" damage U.S.-Soviet relations.

"Violence is incompatible with a solution to this problem, it's incompatible with perestroika and it's incompatible with the move of U.S.-Soviet relations toward partnership," he said.

On the CBS News program "Face the Nation," Sununu said the intent of the U.S. response would be "to encourage a movement back towards the democratization and the more open structure that was the hallmark of the last three years" in the Soviet Union.

Film looks at Price of war

KELLY SHANE
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Traditionally, there is a concept that in an international conflict "a nation goes to war." But after all the talk of politics, "higher" ideals and nationalistic bravado is pushed aside. The truth is that war will be individual men and women who fight and die.

This is a major theme in Raoul Walsh's 1926 film What Price Glory? The film, based on the play by Maxwell Anderson and Laurence Stallings, is a successful, if not odd, balance between a comedy about a love triangle and a drama about men facing the horrors of war. Though these styles are standard entertainment clichés, Walsh's skillful handling of the story makes for a wholly satisfying movie.

The plot revolves around two full-time Marines, Captain Flagg (the towering Victor McLaglan) and non-commissioned officer Quirt (Edmund Lowe, well known at the time as a romantic lead). Both have a great deal of begrudging respect and admiration for each other, but are highly competitive, especially when it comes to women. They knew each other in China and the Philippines, and then meet up again in France during World War I, fighting against the Germans and fighting with each other for the attention of a beautiful French girl, Charmaine, played flirtatiously by Dolores Del Rio.

While not in the field, their troops are spending most of their time in a small French villiage trying to live it up with wine and women—usually with quite humorous results. Much of the humor (and part of the plot) is quite risque (look for mouthed obscenities of the two Marines). Ironically, the same film could not have been released in Hollywood ten years later, due to an increasingly tight grip by industry's film codes.

In contrast to the town, the scenes on the battlefield are brutal. If not for the color tinting used in the restoration of the film, much of it could be passed off as documentary footage. Walsh pulls no punches in depicting the amount of death delt out by the newly developed weapons capable of killing more people with less effort. The most disturbing shot was of a line of men in a trench being covered by dirt in an explosion. Only their bayonets were sticking out of the earth.

Though Flagg and Quirt are war weary, they do what they feel is their duty. Though never questioning his own involvement, Flagg fears for the young and innocent draftees. His personal reaction to a fresh group of recruits is mainly despair and pity. He can only ask himself why the earth must be washed with the blood of young men every 30 years. Like many things in the film, this verges on cliché, but like many cliches, it has a ring of truth.

There is no doubt that this film is an indictment on the institution of war, though, probably thanks to the fact it is silent, there are no overly long speeches yelling this. The movie points no fingers at any government or country, nor does it offer an idealized solution. It just shows the effects of the war on individuals put into situations beyond their control.

The film was well-accepted by critics and audiences alike. Walsh, who began under D. W. Griffith, had already established himself a few years before with The Thief of Bagdad, starring Douglas Fairbanks. Walsh went on to be a successful Hollywood director for the next four decades.

What Price Glory?* plays tonight at 7:30 at Moore Auditorium. Though it is quite easy to find the 1952, John Ford version of this film, the original version is quite rare, so see it while you can. It will be followed by Akira Kurosawa's interpretation of Dostoyevski's *The Idiot

New SCE lineup mix of old and new

Once again the people at Student Campus Entertainment are lighting up the screen at Moore Auditorium with a bevy of great films.

Each semester, SCE brings films on the cutting edge and sometimes there's even a Tallahassee premiere of hard-to-see features. This semester's premiere is Jesus of Montreal, which garnered national critical attention.

Also listed in this handy little clip-and-save schedule are the Cafe Cinema installments which come every Thursday. Highlights include Akira Kurosawa's Dreams, Henry V and My Left Foot.

All films cost a measly $2, but the Cafe Cinema films are free for students with a valid ID. Cafe Cinema films will be denoted by (CC).

Find black culture at Amen-Ra's

BY BERNARD GRAHAM
STAFF WRITER

In many bookstores, the black literature section is a handful of books that cover a limited range of the black experience. When patrons ask for a book by someone other than James Baldwin or Maya Angelou, the salesperson usually looks at them as if they're standing there naked.

Now those who want to educate themselves about the depth and width of black life have a literary haven: Amen-Ra's Bookstore.

The store, owned by Dana and Sharon Ames-Dennard, is an inviting new business that beckons the public to come and learn about black people.

"The bookstore is about bringing light to the history and culture of people of African descent," said Dana Dennard, an assistant professor of psychology at Florida A&M University. "The purpose of the bookstore is community psychological intervention.

"Rather than pulling everybody in one by one and charging them $75 per hour — we're hoping to hit quite a few by having them come in and read a little about themselves."

The bookstore opened Dec. 8 and has works that run the gamut of black life from spirituality to psychology and history. Books can be found by Molefi Asante, Charles King, Alice Walker, Nikki Giovanni and many others. There are also many books targeting adolescent and teenage blacks.

Sharon Ames-Dennard, 29, said the bookstore will serve as a tool in helping young black children build their self-esteem. She said that for many black youngsters, the traditional school system does not expose them to positive black role models.

"With the bookstore, we hope to offer a service where when black kids are reading and developing self-image, they can have books they can read and see themselves," said Ames-Dennard, a psychologist with the Southwestern State Hospital in Thomasville, Ga. "We want them to learn about their African ancestry as well as their history here in America."

Encouraging black people to read and learn more about their people is an important task for the Dennards.

"We recognize that the main problem of blacks as a community, first of all, is its lack of knowledge of self," said 36-year-old Dennard, who received his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from Florida State University. "Second of all, the problem is Europeanized psychology. Black folks in general do not know themselves, since they've been cut off from their true lineage to Africa."

Some people might think the Dennards are radical, but they're displaying the natural history of people of African descent. Dennard said the store has been well received, but there have been occasions when the focus of the store has been too strong for some people.

"I remember one woman came in and flew right out. I could tell from her reaction that she looked and said 'Oh no, this is not for me,'" he said. "She had to go home and deal with why she's so afraid to deal with something that's African-oriented."

The bookstore is designed for all black people and others who are ready to see and understand the fruitful history of blacks, Ames-Dennard said. She added that the store carries literature to dispel the myth of blacks being civilized by slavery.

"The lie is that the best thing that could have happened to us is that we ended up enslaved in America and (whites) saved our lives and souls," said Ames-Dennard, who also received her master's and doctoral degrees from FSU. "The goal of the bookstore is to bring enlightenment. Before you can help yourself, you need to know your history."

Not only will customers find a variety of literature, but there are T-shirts and greeting cards for sale. The walls are decorated with fascinating sketches of people such as Alvin Ailey and Nelson and Winnie Mandela, which are also for sale.

As customers browse around, there are complimentary tea and mints to help them get accustomed to the store.

So to heighten your insight into the black experience or if you're just curious, give Amen-Ra's a look.

Amen-Ra's, 1326 S. Adams St., is open Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. To find out more call 681-6228.

More nominees for 33rd Annual Grammy Awards

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.—Two veterans, singer-songwriter Phil Collins and producer-arranger Quincy Jones, joined relative newcomers Mariah Carey and M.C. Hammer in topping the list of nominees Thursday for the 33rd Annual Grammy Awards.

Jones picked up five nominations, bringing his total over the years to 74, more than any other individual in the history of the awards. He has won 19 Grammys.

The awards will be presented Feb. 20 during a live broadcast on CBS from New York's Radio City Music Hall. During the three-hour telecast, the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences also will present Lifetime Achievement awards to country music legend Kitty Wells, contralto Marian Anderson, and rock 'n' rollers John Lennon and Bob Dylan.

Collins received the most nominations Thursday with eight, including one for album of the year for his " ... But Seriously," and record of the year and song of the year for Another Day In Paradise.

Carey, a pop singer, grabbed five nominations, including ones in the coveted categories of record and song of the year for her "Vision Of Love" and album of the year for "Mariah Carey."

She was also nominated for best new artist—an award won last year and eventually "lost" by Milli Vanilli—as well as for female pop vocal performance.

Rapper Hammer also received five nominations. His album Please Hammer Don't Hurt 'Em was nominated for album of the year and long form music video, while his single, "U Can't Touch This," was up for record of the year, rap solo performances and best R&B song, a nomination he shared with co-writer James Miller.

Jones's five nominations included one for his album Back On The Block. With those nominations, Jones surpassed longtime nomination frontrunner Henry Mancini, who has accumulated 71 over the years.

Jones' last Grammys were awarded in 1985 for his "We Are The World," the song recorded by dozens of top recording artists as a fund-raiser for African famine relief.

Jones, nominated most often for his producing and arranging efforts, was last given a performing Grammy in 1981, when "The Dude" took the R&B male prize.

Joining Collins, Carey and Hammer in the record of the year category were Bette Middler for her "From A Distance" and Sinead O'Connor for "Nothing Compares 2 U."

FSU stays hot, shoots by slumping Louisville, 77-66

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

The offensive consistency that Florida State has been looking for may have finally been found.

For the second consecutive game, the Seminoles shot over 55 percent from the field as they beat Louisville, 77-66, in front of 9,545 Saturday night at the Civic Center.

"We've been playing outstanding defense all year long," said FSU Coach Pat Kennedy. "Our offense is just now starting to come around."

Aubry Boyd led the Seminoles with a season-high 23 points. The senior guard showed more signs that his early-season shooting slump may be ending, hitting 9 of 15 shots, including 5 of 8 from 3-point range.

"Aubry is starting to hit the outside shot," Kennedy said. "He seems to be much more comfortable at home."

The Seminoles, 7-5 and 2-2 in the Metro Conference, used three 3-pointers from Boyd to jump to a 16-13 lead nine minutes into the contest.

Louisville, 5-7 and 0-4, climbed back to take a 24-22 lead, but that would be the Cardinals last lead of the game.

FSU outscored Louisville 15-4 over the last three minutes of the half keyed by seven straight points from Boyd. The Seminoles' biggest shot may have been Charlie Ward's 3-pointer just before the buzzer. Ward's shot gave FSU a 37-28 halftime lead.

"Our run at the end of the half was a big key to our win," Kennedy said. "Charlie's shot gave us a lot of momentum going into the locker room."

FSU center Rodney Dobard took over the scoring load in the second half as he poured in 12 of his 16 points after halftime.

Dobard scored five quick points to help the Seminoles sprint out to a 51-38 lead five minutes into the second half. But after a timeout, the Cardinals rallied. Louisville forward Everick Sullivan led the comeback with three 3-pointers, his last one pulling the Cardinals within 55-51 with 10 minutes remaining.

LaBradford Smith, Louisville's leading scorer, struggled all night, hitting just one of seven from the field. Smith finished with just four points, 13 below his average.

FSU employed the same triangle-and-two defense which was so effective in the win over Cincinnati. Smith and Sullivan faced intense man-to-man defense the entire game.

"The triangle-and-two worked very well against LaBradford and Everick," Kennedy said. "Later we went to our 1-3-1 press and did a nice job in that as well."

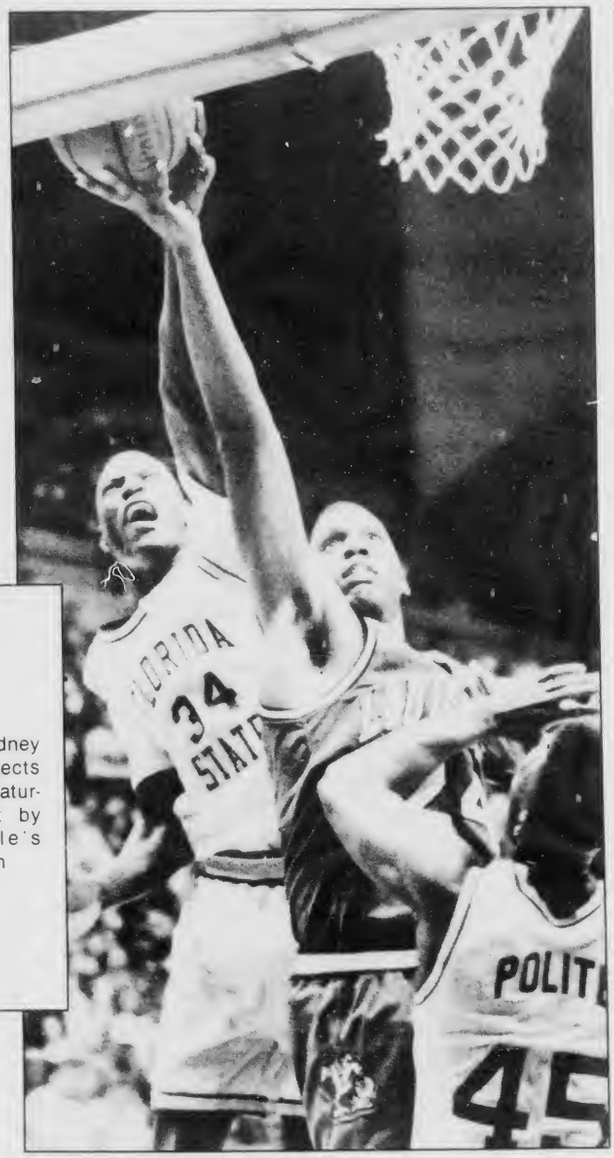
The Seminoles extended their lead to 10 again, only to have it cut to 65-61 with just over three minutes remaining. Unlike past games, FSU hit clutch free throw, hitting eight of its last 10 from the line to hold off the Cardinals.

Ward was impressive in his first start, scoring 14 points and routinely breaking the Louisville press.

"Charlie was a big key for us," Kennedy said. "But more importantly, this was just a tremendous team effort."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum was impressed with the FSU squad, but was also proud of the way his team played.

"We're young and struggling right now," Crum said. "It's tough because people expect us to win, but we're just not a very good team."



FSU's Rodney Dobard rejects this shot Saturday night by Louisville's Troy Smith

Finney's defense, not offense, makes a difference for FAMU

BY MICHAEL HARRIS
STAFF WRITER

Surprisingly, it wasn't Reginald Finney's offense that made a difference Saturday night in his first game back—he hit just 3 of 12 shots.

Instead, it was his defense that helped propel Florida A&M to a 77-73 over South Carolina State before 3,503 at Gaither Gym.

"Finney's presence made the difference tonight," Coach Willie Booker said. "I knew his offense wouldn't be there and expected his defense to be rusty, but his defense really suprised me. He played great defense. With time, though, his offense will steadily improve."

However, Finney wasn't FAMU's only defensive force—Kenny Davis and Thomas Dow provided plenty of help. In the second half, Davis kept the Bulldogs' point guard, Curtis Faust, back behind the 3-point line, keeping him from making the key passes which helped Carolina dominate most of the first half. And Dow played tight defense down low, making two blocks, one of which was with a minute left.

At the start of the second half, the Rattlers, now 4-6 overall, and 2-1 in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, came out sluggish on offense and lax on defense. They committed seven fouls in the first 12 minutes and were down by as many as 12 points.

In the last 3:30 of the half, though, FAMU came to life and closed the gap to 36-34 at halftime.

"In the end of the first half, DeLon Turner came in and gave us a big boost that enabled us to cut their lead," Booker said.

Turner, who struggled in his last game out, finished with 15 points on 6-of-12 shooting.

The Rattlers failed to use the momentum they built before halftime, struggling again at the start of the second half. FAMU collected seven early fouls and was down by as many as nine points.

But with 17:00 left, FAMU went on a 22-12 run, taking a 58-57 lead with 7:58 remaining. Forced turnovers were the key to the rally.

FAMU's Reginald Finney also scored 14 points in his return Saturday

"In the second half I made some adjustments," Booker said. "I got them to put more pressure out on the perimeter and trap Travis Williams. In the first half the guards made too many easy passes inside. Once we closed their inside game down some they were in trouble because they don't shoot that from well outside."

The Rattlers forced 17 turnovers while committing only 12 and caused Carolina to shoot only 42 percent from the field.

The two teams traded leads towards the end, but a tough FAMU defense allowed just one point in the last 1:29, keyed by a block and two steals.

"When our offense gets clicking, they play good defense," Booker said. "When they don't score, they don't hussle back and, consequently, they play poor defense. Now that we have our key players back, we will be uphill once we get everyone acclimated to the system."

Kelvin Daniels lead the offense with 22 points.

The Rattlers take on North Carolina A&T tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Gaither Gym.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—Jeff Hostetler sparkled in his first playoff appearance, throwing for two touchdowns and running for another, and the New York Giants staged two goal-line stands Sunday in a 31-3 NFC playoff rout of the Chicago Bears.

The Giants next play the 49ers in San Francisco Jan. 20 for the NFC championship. The 49ers handed the Giants their first loss of the season, 7-3, in a Dec. 3 Monday night game. New York and San Francisco entered that game 10-0.

The NFC East-champion Giants take a 14-3 mark into San Francisco, while the NFC Central champion Bears finished 12-6.

Hostetler, playing for injured Phil Simms, helped the Giants to a 17-3 halftime lead Sunday with TD passes of 21 yards to Stephen Baker and 5 yards to Howard Cross.

Hostetler then capped a 49-yard drive after the opening kickoff with a 3-yard run around right end for a TD and 24-3 lead. Hostetler kept that drive alive with a 9-yard scramble around William Perry on fourth and six from the 35.

LOS ANGELES—Jay Schroeder threw two touchdown passes Sunday, including a 41-yarder to Ethan Horton that snapped a tie with 8:52 remaining, helping the Los Angeles Raiders

Special Summer Programs

PARSONS IN PARIS June 29-August 12
Paint on the Left Bank, explore prehistoric caves in the Dordogne, visit the masterpieces of renaissance art in Tuscany. Courses include painting, drawing, art history and the liberal arts. Students may choose to spend the last two weeks of the program in the Dordogne or Cortona, Italy.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN PARIS June 29-July 29
Study both the aesthetics and the craft of photography in the city that has inspired great photographers for 150 years. Guest lecturers and visits to Parisian galleries supplement the curriculum.

FASHION IN PARIS June 29-July 29
Study the history and contemporary trends of French fashion design through visits to Parisian museums and costume collections. Guest lecturers and visits to design studios and retail outlets are part of the program, as are daily classes in fashion illustration.

HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE & DECORATIVE ARTS IN PARIS June 29-July 29
Offered in collaboration with the renowned Musée des Arts Décoratifs, this program focuses on the history of French architecture and European decorative arts. Excursions to points outside of Paris are included; last summer, students visited Versailles, Vaux le Vicomte and Fontainebleau.

MODERN PARIS June 29-July 29
Combining architectural history with drawing, this program focuses on the development of Paris in the modern period (1830 to the present).

PALEOLITHIC ART & ARCHAEOLOGY OF THE DORDOGNE July 28-August 12
Daily class sessions near the town of Les Eyzies de Tayac, in southwestern France, are devoted to lectures and guided visits to the area's famous and less well-known prehistoric caves, living sites and archaeological excavations.

HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE IN ITALY June 29-July 28
The architectural heritage of Italy is studied in Rome, Florence and Venice, where on-site presentations are made by Parsons faculty.

HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE & DECORATIVE ARTS IN GREAT BRITAIN July 5-August 4
This four-week curriculum, covering the years 1600-1900, is offered in London, with several excursions to nearby towns and country houses.

PARSONS IN WEST AFRICA MALI: July 2-July 24 IVORY COAST: July 25-August 23
Workshops in ceramics and fibers will introduce students to artists and artisans in several Ivory Coast villages, where these crafts can be studied in their original context. A photography curriculum examines techniques of documentation and reportage in regions of great natural beauty and cultural diversity. The history of African art and architecture also is offered. A separate curriculum in Mali is available.

All programs include round trip airfare, accommodations and land transfers. Academic credit is available to qualified students. For more information, please return the coupon or call

MONDAY, JANUARY 14, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will want to make several important changes in your lifestyle now. Go for it! New insights result in a reordering of priorities in April. A rewarding romance will greatly influence your outlook on a wide variety of subjects by June. Do what you can to increase the value of your property and investments by September. A personality conflict with a difficult colleague should not be allowed to develop into open enmity next fall. Play a waiting game.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THISDATE: Dr. Albert Schweitzer, actress Faye Dunaway, actor Jason Bateman, journalist Andy Rooney.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your work associates will fulfill their promises. Teamwork enables you to accomplish twice as much in half the time! Pursue community activities or other outside interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get a second chance to achieve a career goal. Supportive friends give you inside information that will help you clinch a financial deal. Try to become more organized at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take steps to protect your assets. Someone who has your best interests at heart gives you valuable moral support. A friend with extravagant tastes describes a personal dilemma.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Step up activity in communications today. Now is the ideal time to acquire and transmit information. A work relationship improves when a burden is lifted. A loan could ease household tensions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Devote more time to fulfilling your family obligations. Make it clear that you make promises first. Catch up on a backlog of paperwork. A trip could help you cement an important alliance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The spotlight is on travel and a stimulating personal relationship. Strive to improve the lines of communication at work. Do not be afraid to move with the times.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not let jealousy get the best of you! Hard work is the perfect antidote for depressing thoughts. "A positive attitude chases the blues away." Curl up with a good book tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Apply yourself to the job at hand and it will not take nearly as long as anticipated. A loan is granted. Get in touch with professionals who can help you achieve a secret goal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome an opportunity to make important decisions. Romance may have to take a temporary backseat to your career. A letter or message contains a valuable hint.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Calling on the vast resources of other people will help you finish an important project. You are not about to let your desire for change things. Your mood primarily on the domestic scene.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your special talents could lead to new financial opportunities. Formulate ahead, you thrive on a challenge. Help a loved one who [illegible] tricky problem. Health issues are [illegible].

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your talents deserve a wider exposure now. Your business associates rely heavily on your decisions. Revise your personal plans to accommodate short-lived whims. Study flow resumes.

FSU's Wanda Burns broke the 1,000-point barrier Saturday, scoring 18 points

Lady Seminoles blow out Bearcats, 90-61

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Florida State history was made Saturday, as Lady Seminoles' senior Wanda Burns broke the 1,000-point mark and led her teammates to a 90-61 win over Cincinnati.

FSU improved its Metro Conference mark to 2-0 with the win and upped its overall record to 8-2. The Lady Seminoles are tied with South Carolina, which beat Louisville on Saturday, for the conference lead.

However, FSU faces a tough Metro test tonight with Louisville, 11-3 overall and 2-1 in the league. The game begins at 7 p.m. at Tully Gym.

FSU Coach Marynell Meadors said her team stayed focused throughout the game and allowed her to substitute liberally.

"Our game plan worked and we didn't have to make changes when others came in," Meadors said.

Five Lady 'Noles came off the bench to combine for 28 points, including two 3-point shots and 19 rebounds.

"We just focused in and did what we do best," Meadors said. "And that's to play good half-court defense, rebound and run."

Cincinnati was forced out of its post game, scoring only 38 points inside and allowing FSU a 45-33 rebounding edge--all despite their star player 6-foot-2 Tonya Taylor, scoring 31 points. Meadors called the FSU effort "the best game of the year, defensively."

The Lady Seminoles hit 78 percent of their free-throws and 4 of 9 of their 3-pointers. They also consistently rallied the crowd with fast-breaks off steals.

Sophomore Tia Paschal led FSU scorers with 23 points and six rebounds, but the day belonged to Burns. The 5-foot-8 guard earned the game ball 16 minutes into the contest for scoring her 1,000th career point—a lay-up off a steal. Burns finished the day with 18 points.

"I was trying not to think about it, but I'm really happy to score over a 1,000 points," Burns said.

Burns is only the tenth Lady Seminole to reach 1,000 points, and she did it in only two years and 10 games—the fewest of any school player.

"Pound for pound, I've never seen anybody any better in that position than Wanda," Meadors said.

A win against Louisville tonight could give FSU the national attention it has looked for all season.

"With a win against Louisville, people are going to start voting for us in the Top 25 poll," Meadors said.

advance to the AFC championship game with a 20-10 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

The Raiders, playing in their first postseason game in five seasons, will visit the Buffalo Bills next Sunday for a spot in Super Bowl XXV.

Schroeder, a weak link entering the season, exhibited his 1990 maturity by leading the Raiders to the game-winning touchdown. After the Bengals pulled even with 11:49 to go, Schroeder marched the Raiders 80 yards.

The quarterback kept the drive going when he connected with Tim Brown for 26 yards on third-and-20 from the Los Angeles 22. Three plays later, Horton got behind linebacker Leon White down the right sideline and Schroeder hit him in stride for the TD.

Schroeder, who completed 11 of 21 passes for 172 yards and one interception, had thrown a 13-yard scoring strike to Mervyn Fernandez in the second quarter. Jeff Jaeger had a 49-yard field goal in the third quarter and capped the scoring with 19 seconds left when he hit from 25 yards.

Marcus Allen, playing extensively because of an injury to Bo Jackson, gained 140 yards on 21 carries. Jackson injured his left hip on the second play of the second half.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

The Florida State Women's Rugby Club practices Tuesdays and Thursdays at the lower intramural field behind Mike Long Track. For more information call 644-2430 or contact Coach Kathy Flores at 575-7059.

Sign-ups for FSU's 3-on-3 intramural basketball tournament begin today and end Thursday. To enter the tournament which will be held Saturday and Sunday, stop by Room 136 Tully Gym. For more information call 644-2430.

France proposes linkage in last-ditch peace effort

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

UNITED NATIONS — In a last minute peace effort, France has proposed that the Security Council adopt a statement linking the Aug. 2 occupation of Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait to a Middle East peace conference.

However, the French move to avoid war in the Persian Gulf appeared to struggle to gain the United States.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering told reporters that the French initiative was not acceptable because "we don't believe the linkage that appears to be in the French text of the (France's) effort to shape the Security Council resolutions is a real contribution."

PLO officials assassinated

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

TUNIS, Tunisia — Two leading members of the Palestine Liberation Organization, including a top aide to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, were assassinated late Monday outside Tunis, Tunisia, and PLO officials said.

The two were Abu Iyad, No. 2 official in the Fatah movement, and Abdel Hadi, the PLO's chief of security, officials said.

FAMU, FSU students plan bashes for Martin Luther King's birthday

FLAMBEAU STAFF REPORTS

The birthday of the late civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. will be observed next Monday. And if you'd like to make Monday mean more than just a day off from classes, both Florida State and Florida A&M university organizations are planning several activities designed to do just that.

FAMU holds a convocation ceremony honoring King today—his actual date of birth—at 10:10 a.m. in Gaither Gymnasium. Ted Hemmingway, a professor of history and the associate dean of FAMU's School of Graduate Studies, Research, and Continued Education, will be the guest speaker.

Sharon Saunders, spokesperson for the university's public relations department, said the ceremony will feature the first ever presentation of the Martin Luther King leadership award. She said three people will recieve the award: Charles Evans, a professor of business at FAMU; Leon County District 1 Commissioner and President of the Tallahassee chapter of the NAACP Anita Davis; and Randy Swopes, a FAMU junior from Chicago majoring in political science.

At FSU, the birthday party begins tonight with the screening of two films at 8 p.m. in Smith Hall.

FSU's Black Student Union will present "Glory," starring Matthew Broderick and Denzel Washington, along with a documentary on Dr. King's life according to Assistant to the Vice-President for Minority Student Affairs Thyria Greene. Refreshments will be served.

Immediately following the movies, the men of the FSU chapter of Omega Psi Phi will lead a candlelight march beginning at 10:30 p.m. at Smith Hall.

FSU's annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Commemorative Convocation will begin at 11 a.m. on Friday in Ruby Diamond Auditorium. The featured speaker will be John E. Jacob, national president of the Urban League for the past nine years. Jacob also writes a weekly newspaper column called "To Be Equal," which appears in more than 600 papers nationwide.

Also on Friday, the 1991 Martin Luther King Jr. Distinguished Scholar award will be presented to an FSU faculty member at a special luncheon. The award honors outstanding service to the university and its students in keeping with the ideals of the late civil rights leader.

On Sunday, a gospel choir will entertain the masses, and two or more guests will deliver speeches in Moore Auditorium in what will be "kind of like a song-fest," Greene said.

She added that arrangements for the speakers haven't been finalized and that refreshments would be served.

Anyone wishing to attend may call the BSU at 644-5461 to find out when the choir begins.

Farmers crying foul over a road that will disrupt harvests

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

Construction on a road that will combine the Florida A&M University Florida State University School of Engineering with Innovation Park has some Tallahassee residents angry.

The road will run through two inactive plots of FSU land that are used for farming by local citizens. The approximately two-acre tract of land is known informally as the FSU Farm.

Thomas Hendry, who has farmed the land for the last nine years, said building the road—which began Thursday—violates farmers' rights.

He said signs telling the farmers the road would be constructed were put up by staff at Innovation Park Jan. 2 "as a convenience."

"This area has been designated for road construction by Florida State University ... Construction to begin immediately .... If you wish to harvest do so quickly," the signs read.

Hendry said this was the first notice that a road was going to be built. He said farmers' rights of due process were violated because there was no public hearing or prior notification that some plots would be paved over.

"We claim the natural law rights of good stewardship, unbroken over a 25 year period, though the land as a whole is owned by the state of Florida under the auspices of Florida State University," Hendry wrote in a Jan. 8 letter to Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay.

The road will cost $2 million and is a joint project of FSU, the state and Innovation Park—home of the university's new national magnet lab. It will be an extension of Levy Street and will run to the engineering school via the FSU farm and Innovation Park. At that junction it will provide access to the planned 70,000-square-foot magnet lab.

Glenn Berman, the unofficial supervisor of the farm, said 10 percent to 25 percent of the farm would be directly affected by the road.

Farmers grow everything from cabbage to garlic, squash and onions on the plots. Some of them are also used as flower beds.

Linda Nicholson, marketing director of Innovation Park, said the land was surveyed before the route was planned. She said planners decided to build the road through the farm to preserve patriarchal oaks and a pond in the area.

Berman and other farmers are concerned about their farms for several reasons. Among other things, they say the road will bring more visibility to the farm, which will result in increased vandalism. Hendry said he has been talking to lawyers to find out his rights.

But according to Martin Roeder, FSU acting vice president of finance and administration, the land in question is FSU property and any claims made by the farmers would be like objecting to "the construction of a fountain in the middle of Landis Green."

According to Hendry, the farmers have been allowed to use the land for about 25 years under a verbal agreement with Innovation Park.

But the farmers aren't giving up hope. Hendry said "natural law"—a term dating back to Biblical times meaning that when a farmer nurtures his land, he is its rightful caretaker—is still valid today. He said the actions of the local farmers have helped preserve and protect the land. He said it boils down to "God's law vs. state law." And although he said it is probably too late for any type of legal recourse, he hopes to find a provision in the Tallahassee Leon County Comprehensive Growth Plan that will save the land.

Ray Benton, another farmer, said the farm and its supporters comprise a unique community that should not be destroyed.

"I feel personally that I've had a garden for the last four years and it means a lot to me. It's a sanctuary out there," he said. "It's an environment where people cooperate and work with one another. People share their surpluses with one another. There isn't any competition. It would be a terrible loss to the community."

Roeder said the plots will be replaced with nearby land that is under the control of the university.

But regardless, Benton said that no road should be built near the farm.

"Even if the road doesn't destroy currently active land, I am fearful of any pollution caused by runoff from the road and fume-expelled by passing cars," he said.

LANCE WALTON/FLAMBEAU

Asphalt will soon be growing out of this farm.

No surprise

Tallahassee City Commissioners' decision last Thursday to exempt Department of Defense contractor General Dynamics from the city's year-old anti apartheid ordinance should come as no surprise.

In fact, the ordinance's apparatus—and with it any meaning it may have had—began to be dismantled a long time ago.

The beginning of the law's downfall began last April when the commission first began to compromise the intent of the ordinance. It was then that commissioners allowed the city to do business with companies Ford New Holland and Bill Thomas Chevrolet, whose parent companies—Ford and General Motors—have ties to South Africa.

The ordinance says Tallahassee may not do business with companies appearing on the U. S. Business in South Africa's list. But commissioners—basing their vote on City Attorney Jim English's ruling that the ordinance was not applicable to the companies because of their "indirect" ties to South Africa—voted to follow through with the contracts.

The event marks the beginning of the end for the short lived idea—now nothing but a blue print for what Tallahassee's position on the issue of apartheid should be, but isn't.

The whole point to the ordinance was to help the city do its moral duty as a community—put pressure on the South African government to end the institutionalized racism of apartheid.

Why should commissioners really care "how little" a corporation is involved with a government whose minority ruling class is behind the torture of hundreds of political prisoners?

The move which kicked the teeth out of the ordinance came last July, when commissioners reversed an earlier decision to not do business with British Petroleum Gas Company.

British Petroleum Oil—BP Gas' parent corporation—not only has direct ties to South Africa, it has a history of ruthlessly exploiting Third World countries in order to ply its trade.

The commissioners who voted for the motion in the 3-2 decision—Bob Hightower, Debbie Lightsey and Mayor Steve Meisburg—argued they couldn't ask residents to put out the $587,000 yearly that would be saved if the city agreed to deal with BP.

Again the commission compromised the ordinance's intent.

It seems the pocketbooks of Tallahasseeans, or at least those of the commission majority, are more important than helping bring South Africa into the 1990s where, theoretically, racial equality is universally accepted.

If the city sees fit to do business with British Petroleum, what does it mean to have an anti-apartheid ordinance considered—at least on paper—one of "the toughest in the country?"

Not much.

As Dorothy Inman-Crews, the only commissioner to consistently uphold the intent of the ordinance, put it during the BP debate, "either we have an ordinance or we don't." The commission majority never enforced the ordinance so it never truly had one.

Seen in this light, exempting General Dynamics is actually consistent—albeit morally wrong—with earlier rulings.

What does it mean to have an anti-apartheid ordinance which, strict as it is, has not stopped a single corporation with business dealings in South Africa from doing business in Tallahassee?

It means that, just as white South Africa is not ready to fully release its hold on power and control over the black majority, Tallahassee is not ready to help force it to do so.

"FUNNY HOW YOU NEVER SEE JESSE HELMS AND HIS ILK RUNNING AROUND OUT HERE SCREAMING ABOUT HIRING QUOTAS."

LETTERS

And still more response to Hicks

Editor:

Mr. Hicks, as outraged as I was when I read your chauvinist piece of literature, I pity you. Your life must be hell if you are as close-minded, pessimistic, and prejudiced as you portrayed yourself. How sad.

Let me explain something to you since you are obviously misled. Women were not put on this earth to soley serve men and our place is anywhere we choose, be that the home, the office, the White House, etc.

Furthermore, I don't believe that God is punishing us with AIDS. The God I worship is not the same angry avenging God to whom you refer. God not only gave us a beautiful earth, but the independence to make the most of it as well. He also gave us a wonderful diversity of cultures, races, and religions to share and experience. I do not think that it was his intention for people to be egotistical, egocentric, and intolerant of others because of their skin, gender or faith. Perhaps you should review your Bible.

Amy McDonell

Editor:

I can appreciate the zest that you possess in the Bible, but please, from now on, when you want to take the time to put some of us lesser beings in our place, have something valid to say. I firmly believe that all human beings are created equal. Call me crazy but I agree with the Constitution. As far as being a "cuckold", I am not married but I'm sure that not all the men that have this same belief have wives that cheat on them. Next time I would find out what a word means before you use it. Or is that part of your powers as well?

Peter Blades

Editor:

Buddy Hicks' letter to the editor in the Jan. 9 Flambeau was surely a joke! Nothing so cynically sexist, racist, homophobic, or anti-Semetic can still exist in 1991 except as a satire to old Southern, ultra-conservative beliefs. Today's society is much too advanced and sophisticated to allow the perpetuation of such stereotypes as those mentioned in Hicks' letter. The continuance of such beliefs will eventually cause the downfall of our nation for they elicit separation instead of unity, dissention instead of understanding, and strife instead of peace.

Those who profess to be as Christian as Mr. Hicks yet refuse to shed their prejudice have every reason to be God-fearing. Views such as those expressed in Hicks' letter promote hatred of others and hatred has no place neither in today's society nor in God's kingdom.

Tamaira Rivera

Editor:

I strongly urge that the Flambeau seek to employ Buddy Hicks as satirist in residence. His letter printed in the Jan. 9 issue clearly indicates that he has already reached the stature of an Art Buchwald or (and I say this with a tear) a Russell Baker. To be sure, parts of the letter are a bit heavy handed, but I am confident that when faced with a bi-weekly or a tri-weekly task of producing a column, smoothness will occur. I am amazed that he has already shown the rare art of being a satirist who sounds almost serious. Perhaps I have done him a disservice in comparing him with Buchwald and Baker. Indeed, a budding Jonathan Swift is in our midst.

John Priest

Editor:

I enjoyed Mr. Buddy Hicks' recent letter to the Flambeau ("Going to Hell," 1-9-91) which aptly followed in the footsteps of such notable satirists as Jonathan Swift and Flambeau columnist Jason McCarthy. However, in the future, when publishing such humourous works, please don't cut the punch line.

Patty Arnold

Editor:

While I recognize Buddy Hicks' right to his own opinion and his right to express such, I feel compelled to respond to his bold agenda expressed in the letter published January 9.

Mr. Hicks' social and political agenda is by no means typical of Southern Baptists in America. The belligerent tone with which he discusses his opinions makes me question whether in addition to the adjectives "God-fearing" and "Southern Baptist" he might define himself as "Christian" according to a Scriptural—not a social—definition. Regardless, he seems motivated by anger, spite and bitterness, rather than a love for God or a concern for mankind. While, as a Christian and a Southern Baptist, I affirm the truth to which Mr. Hicks alludes—that Jesus Christ is the only solution to man's universal problem of separation from God—I must reject his social and political opinions as frightfully misguided.

My concern is that the Flambeau's readership understand that Mr. Hicks—fictitious (as I suspect) or not—and his suspiciously stereotypical point-of-view are a far cry from what being Southern Baptist is about.

Mark Warnock, President
Baptist Campus Ministry

Editor's note: Due to the overwhelming number of letters received in response to Hicks' letter, the Flambeau will accept no further responses after today.

Why war? Congress can't get it up and Bush is coming way too soon

BY JACK MCCARTHY
STAFF WRITER

COMMENTARY
FOR WHAT IT'S WORTH

Personally, I lean toward the advice a Massachusettes Institute of Technology student newspaper headline offered to our feverish commander-in-chief:

"Bush Pull Out: Like Your Father Should Have."

I would, however, have cheerfully settled for the Congressional resolutions mandating economic sanctions in lieu of Bush's apocalypse now strategy. Neither was to be.

War is the way to peace. This was the Orwellian message the U.S. Congress, in voting to give George Bush his way in the Persian Gulf oil virility war, sent to the men and women in the Gulf who will ultimately pay the price for the 102nd Congress' conspicuous display of institutional impotency. A rational response is barely possible.

You simply have to weep for a country whose political leaders ignore the facts before them and vote instead for a misplaced sense of loyalty to an arrogant imperial president who threatens to go to war with or without them—a president who will pay any price and bear any burden to preserve the rule of corrupt sheiks. The "founding fathers," who liberated this country from a corrupt monarchy, are surely twisting in their graves.

Weep we must for a country with a president who has the arrogance and audacity to send the rich kid who used his family's wealth and power to duck Vietnam—Dan Quayle—to the war front to implore poor and working class kids who will die for that least noble of reasons—profits—to keep their sunny sides up. You don't need Karl Marx to know which way the winds of this class war are blowing.

Gulf Oil Resolution

Unlike the sleepwalking Congress that gave Lyndon Johnson carte blanche to wage war in Vietnam (or more accurately, war on Vietnam) in the form of the "Tonkin Gulf Resolution," this Congress was less supine and more contentious, at times even stirring to listen to.

I especially felt gratitude for Michigan Sen. Donald Riegle for pointing out that the 112 countries of the United Nations have not voted for war. The U.N. Security Council, composed of 12 countries, did. And of those 12, only two have troops in the Gulf.

So much for our "coalition partners."

Yet in the end, the war-at-any-cost faction won out. The president had his Tonkin Gulf, or shall we say Persian Gulf Oil, Resolution. So now it is Congress' war too.

Like LBJ, who used a fabricated attack on an American war ship by North Vietnam to hoodwink the Congress into passing Tonkin Gulf, Bush also resorted to the tried and true, thinly veiled big lie in the cause of prosecuting this unnecessary war. Several weeks ago, CIA Director William Webster testified that sanctions were in fact working. The week of the debate Webster, no doubt a result of administrative pressure, retreated and circulated a letter which took the administration line.

Threat inflation, of course, has been administration strategy all along. For example, last Sunday's St. Petersburg Times, in an excellent exclusive unfortunately ignored by the rest of the media, ran photographs obtained by Soviet satellite reconnassaince of the Saudi Kuwait border area at the time of Iraq's invasion.

The photos suggest the president's contention that Iraq's troops were poised for an invasion of Saudi Arabia was a lie. The article quotes a Reagan administration photographic expert saying as much.

A thousand points of light

A specter is haunting George Bush and the U.S. Congress—a specter of a new generation of American youth courageous enough to challenge a morally bankrupt leadership whose bottom line is the cold cash nexus.

This was the impression left from last Saturday's protest at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, attended by at least 1,000 people. As much as I'd like to avoid resorting to the inevitable references to cliches like "reminiscent of Vietnam era protests," Saturday's protest had a definite Yippie! "Festival of Life" ambience to it. I loved it. Perhaps the '90s are the '60s upside down.

As the hyperbolic propogandist of the '60s so eloquently put it:

"YOUTH MAKES THE REVOLUTION BE STRONG BE BEAUTIFUL."

Profile in cowardice

I hope you didn't think I would end this column without condemning U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, D-Miami, who ignored the fact that 70 percent of his mail on the Persian Gulf urged him to vote to maintain sanctions, and voted for war.

I could get nasty and point out that a la Dan Quayle, rich kid Graham sat out the Vietnam war. Instead, I'll assume the higher ground, and simply point out that Graham has betrayed his constituents. After several weeks of strategic waffling about how he would vote with stirring gibberish like, "The Amerian people aren't ready for war," Graham eventually fell to his knees before the sheiks and Bush.

I would guess if Graham witnessed/heard all of the passing cars, honking in solidarity with the protesters at the downtown vets' memorial, he'd justifiably worry what his political future portends.

Honking in solidarity? Now there's a slogan for the '90s.

NAACP. "The students were the ones who got out in front and protested against the (Vietnam) war. Once again, you're doing what you're supposed to do.

"The urgency for peace is now and we need to stand for it." Linda Owens, director of postsecondary education coordination for the Florida Department of Education, stated the importance of minority scholarships and why they shouldn't be diminished.

"We believe the U.S. Department of Education . . . has created an atmosphere that will discourage minority participation in higher education when we need to do all we can to encourage it," she said.

Owens also said the policy will have a negative effect on public high school students and the dropout rate, and that Commissioner of Education Betty Castor is "concerned" by the "chilling message" sent by this policy.

FAMU Student Government President Daryl Parks also spoke at the rally, saying any war in the Persian Gulf will be fought for the wrong reasons.

"I guess blood isn't worth much compared to oil and money these days," he said. "True, some things are worth dying for, but oil is not one of them."

"I'm sorry (Congress) supported the president," echoed Lynn Jozefczyk, an educational consultant. "I think we should stay out of the whole situation."

Still others said that while they thought a military presence in the oil-rich Middle East was necessary, war wasn't.

"I think there's a lot of other ways in dealing with the problem than killing people," said 37-year-old state government worker Jim Fox outside a small shopping mall on Pensacola Street. "A military blockade would be good. I don't think we should attack ... (Hussein) can be stopped without us taking American lives."

A retired U.S. Air Force lieutenant colonel who served five years in World War II said he is not opposed to initiating a war. But he added that it shouldn't have to be fought for long.

"I wish they would drop the atomic bomb over there so we wouldn't lose an American life," said David Avant, Jr., who said he fought in the European Theater between 1941 and 1945. "The sooner we run them out of there, the better for the whole world. You can't appease a dictator—we learned that in Munich."

Last Saturday, Bush received congressional approval to declare war. Some residents are happy with the OK and say that now is the time to follow the president's direction in the Gulf.

"I support the president in whatever he wants to do," said Chris Collins, a 25-year-old meteorologist who works for a weather service in town.

FSU student Lisa Beasley agreed. She said that although she doesn't want a war, she supports Bush's actions.

"(Bush) is going through all the right channels and doing everything he has to," the 23-year-old music major said.

Others weren't so sure.

"We don't have any business over there," said 23-year-old Lisa Wyartt, who's fiance is currently in the Marine 8th Tank Battalion stationed in Saudi Arabia. "George Bush isn't thinking about how many people will die—he's thinking about winning."

Wyartt, who works at the Paperback Rack, added that she is just as confused about the situation as the soldiers in the desert.

"I don't understand what we're doing over there," she said. "What's sad is that half the guys over there are saying they don't know what they're fighting for. It's sad because too many lives are going to be lost."

Florida A&M University student Tracy Hayes knows first-hand what it's like to have friends and relatives stationed in the desert. Four of her family members are now in the Gulf region.

"A lot of them are young," the 20-year-old business and administration major said. "A lot of them just went in (to get money for their) education, because I have classmates over there too. Hopefully, they'll come back safe, soon."

Wyartt echoed Hayes sentiment.

"The families that are left here are already having trouble paying bills," she said. "Some of those men could be breadwinners. What are they going to do if their breadwinners die in a stupid war?"

Effort

He suggested France's proposal, along with a spate of new peace initiatives from Libya, Yemen and Tunisia, could be counterproductive.

"What they have all tended to do is to somehow take an intransigent Saddam Hussein and offer him more and more, contrary to the process that was agreed to in the Security Council and the resolutions," Pickering said.

It was unclear, however, whether a breach in the U.S. and French positions had opened. The French have always argued for some kind of international peace conference but the differences with the U.S. were usually papered over.

By raising the proposal at the last minute, differences within the international coalition arrayed against Iraq were once again visible.

A U.S. official suggested the move was "typically French," in that France appeared to be acting outside the fold as it tried to send positive signals to Iraq and other Arab states.

It was unclear if the French proposal would be acted on by the Council.

A third PLO member who was serving as a bodyguard to Abu Iyad also was reported killed.

The assassin who killed the three men was still holding el Loul's wife and daughter hostage early Tuesday at least four hours after the killings, according to the officials quoted by the state-run Tunisian news agency.

PLO sources said the assassin was believed to be a member of Abu el Loul's security force, but they said without elaboration the assassination could only have been planned by Israel.

The PLO official confirmed Abu Iyad and Abu el Loul had been killed and said the bodyguard also was believed dead, although another PLO official said the two leaders may have only been gravely wounded.

FSU committee selects land off campus for parking, office space

BY AMY ELLERSON
STAFF WRITER

A president-appointed committee at Florida State University is setting out to expand campus boundaries for more parking, classroom and office space.

FSU President Bernard Sliger formed the land purchasing committee in September after the Florida Legislature allocated $5 million to be used by the university for campus expansion.

The university will begin purchasing land within the next two-to-three months. And by next fall, students and staff at FSU will find more places to park, according to Chair of the Land Acquisitions Committee Fred Standley.

"Florida State is the most densely populated campus in the university system. We have the smallest main campus of any of the universities," Standley said last week. As a result, he added, FSU cannot provide nearly enough parking spaces for its students and staff.

FSU ranks third among Florida's nine state universities in student enrollment—28,000—but has the smallest main campus with only 347 acres. The University of Florida has nearly 3,000 acres, and the University of South Florida has 1,000 acres.

"The parking is absurd on our campus," Standley said, referring to the school's 7,000 parking spaces. "With 4,500 employees, we don't even have enough parking spaces for all of our staff to find a place to park, let alone for our students."

Carl Blackwell, vice chancellor of finance and budget for the State University System, said "there's no doubt" that FSU is Florida's neediest school when it comes to campus space.

"You can look at the growth of the campus and see that they have used most of the space that's available," Blackwell said.

He added that one way to deal with this is to buy additional land and push the campus's boundaries outward.

Tom Knowles, director of the university physical plant, said the land purchasing committee plans to extend FSU's eastern boundary one block from Copeland Street to Macomb Street.

"What we're trying to do is fill in the borders of the university," said Knowles, who is also a member of the committee. "Anyone that walks around campus can see we've used up as much green space as we possibly can."

By buying more land, Knowles said, the university can preserve what's left of FSU's landscape.

The committee's priorities, according to Knowles, are to buy more land for parking and academic space. He said another top priority is to purchase additional land for the University Center, which will wrap around Doak Campbell Stadium.

The state Board of Regents has already approved a list of 22 pieces of land that the committee says it's most interested in. If the list is passed by the state Board of Education this month, the committee will then have to wait for the land to be appraised before starting negotiations. After price agreements are reached, purchasing can begin.

Standley said that he is not sure how many pieces of land the university will get for its $5 million since all of their prices vary.

But Standley did say that nearly every piece of land being considered is nearby, or next to, the campus. He listed parcels of land on Call Street—near the Fine Arts Building—Pensacola Street and Woodward Avenue as possible purchases.

Although the land purchasing committee cannot decide on the specific use of any property it buys, it will take into consideration possible uses for the space, Standley said. Another committee—the university Campus Development Committee—will decide what the purchases will actually be used for.

FSU student charged

A 22-year-old Florida State University law student driving a car in a Dec. 11 accident was arrested after tests proved that his blood-alcohol level was over the legal limit, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said Monday.

John Allan Dickson, of 2020 Continental Ave., turned himself into the Tallahassee Police Department Monday afternoon after a warrant for his arrest was obtained by the police.

In the accident, Dickson's 1987 Ford Bronco overturned, throwing two passengers from the car. One of the passengers, Denise Marie Diaz—another FSU law student—was killed. The other passenger thrown from the car was 22-year-old Kyle McFadden.

Although there was speculation that Dickson was drinking and driving, Kiracofe said no charges were made until the results of blood-alcohol tests were obtained.

"Dickson has been charged with DUI manslaughter and DUI causing serious bodily injury," Kiracofe said.

He was taken to the Leon County Jail and is being held there under a $3,500 bond.

Grocery store robbery

The Food Lion grocery store on Fred George Road was robbed by three armed men early Monday, Kiracofe said.

Around 8 a.m., an employee entering the store met one of the suspects outside the store. The employee was forced at gunpoint to enter the store where all the employees inside were "ordered to lie down on the floor by the robbers who pointed their guns at the employees' heads," said Kiracofe.

The employees were then locked inside the dairy cooler while the manager was forced by the robbers to open the safe.

About the same time, a shopper entered the store, realized that a robbery was taking place, and went to a nearby store to call the police.

Soon after, a police officer arrived as one of the suspects was putting some of the money into a truck parked outside the store. The officer attempted to arrest the man, but the suspect ran back into the store.

Officers behind the store saw a suspect run out the back and into the woods nearby. Shortly after, the suspect was found in a house at 2510 Hastings Drive. A jacket containing money believed to come from the robbery was also found at the home.

The suspect was identified as Ricky Joe Hall of Albany, Ga. Hall, 28, was charged with burglary of a dwelling, armed robbery with a firearm, resisting arrest without violence, and nine counts of false imprisonment, Kiracofe said. Bond has not been set.

All the money from the burglary was recovered, but the other two suspects remain at large.

Radio talk kicks off this season's Finale readings

BY ANN TURKLE
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Each semester it's possible to discern a particular complexion or slant to the popular series of Tuesday night readings at The Grand Finale. This spring, the emphasis seems to be on fiction (even by writers who've read poetry in the past) with a smattering of special events including guest readers and a multimedia collaboration.

Tonight, the series opens with an unusual combination of material but an all too familiar face. Jerome Stern, Florida State University English professor and the readings' most faithful patron, will read several of his radio pieces. Stern will be joined by Ben Green who will read from his forthcoming, non-fiction work on murder-for-hire.

Stern's radios (this name for them) can be heard on both WFSU and Nine-one-one Public Radio. He said he has established the length for them—a predictably two-and-a-half minutes. "When a person gets annoyed, even if they don't want to hear the piece, by the time they decide to change stations, it's over," he explained.

The radios have evolved over the years beginning with Stern's commentaries on a WFSU talk show hosted by then News Director, M.J. Lee. He credits the set pieces that have allowed Stern a new freedom to write as he pleases. He said it's been particularly liberating to realize that the characters he writes don't have to be him—that he can create characters (and voices) of a variety of voices.

Ben Green is a fiction writer who has been repeatedly led down the path of non-fiction publishing. In 1985 he published Finest Kind: a Celebration of Apalachicola Fishing Village, that observed the trials of a working community in the process with the encroaching condominiums and tourists.

Green, then working on a novel, was contracted to write a non-fiction work, Hired: Rich Assignments, about a Vietnam vet who found employment killing to murder his wife through an ad placed in the magazine, Soldier of Fortune. The true story, which involved multiple murders and a million dollar suit against the magazine, will published next fall. Green will read excerpts from this work. He said his goal is still to write fiction, but the financial security offered by such assignments was tempting.

At the January 22nd reading, the "prosers" will take over with both Barbara Emrys and Cindy Clough reading short stories.

What follows is the entire spring readings roster. Clip it and keep it on your refrigerator door. All readings begin at 8 p.m.

Crews' latest sheds fat and worships the Body

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

Body
By Harry Crews
Poseidon Press 240 pgs. $18.95

Few authors revel in the delight and displeasure of the body like Harry Crews. Many authors try to write the physical side of human existence, but no one handles the subject with the flair that Harry Crews does.

The subject of his latest novel, Body, is submerged in the lifestyle that subverts everything but the physical—bodybuilding.

It follows the female bodybuilder, Shereel Dupont, as she vies for the world title at the Cosmos competition in Miami. Shereel is a Waycross, Ga., girl who completely forgoes all of the pleasures of life to violently tear every last ounce of fat from her finely tuned physique.

In his earlier novels, Crews, who lives and teaches in Gainesville, frolics through the fun that the body has to offer. Godless sex, the fruitful lust for alcohol, the carnal lust of rich, fattening foods and every other sado-masochistic experience that brings pleasure to his weird protagonists.

Body represents the first time Crews isn't all for an unthinking existence. He's examining the devastation of life committed to body without the slightest thought for the consequence or the devastation.

His characters suffer, but they always fall prey to this nagging pull of their consciences—the annoying intrusion of the brain upon the domain of body. This novel isn't filled with mindless dolts who ignore the calling of their mind. It's just secondary to the physical. The extreme determination and concentration it takes to destroy and rebuild one's body in the likeness of God is enough to give the power to put useless thoughts like hunger and lust aside.

In effect, the hundreds of Cosmos contestants who appear in Body are mindless automatons—freaks really—running around and posing "psyching out" one another as they suck on orange peels and drinking four ounces of water every millennium.

If there's one thing that Crews has always been good at, it's creating freaks. He literally created a band of sideshow freaks in his debut novel The Gospel Singer, but he follows that up well with with all the yokels at the rattlesnake roundup in A Feast of Snakes and the group of upper-class weirdos in The Knockout Artist.

In some way or another, everyone in Body is a freak. The bodybuilders certainly are—not to mention Shereel's tummy, the Turnipseeds or her "fee-andsy" Nail Head, the manufactured killer Viet Nam veteran.

Many things are the same for Crews in 1990 as they were in 1970. You usually have to take his books with a grain of salt and a good sense of humor, but one thing is completely different. It's now a pleasure to read Crews. In the past, it was easily to move happily along over terse, volatile verse and then trip over some tumorous piece of ill-under-thought garbled writing that rang false in all the worst ways.

Body, although not Crews' best, is a very good read. It seems to point in a direction for the future. There were rumors that Crews gave up the booze. If that's true, then Body could be the end of an overall under-impressive career and the beginning of something that will put Crews where he belongs—with the best of today's writers.

> The hundreds of Cosmos contestants who appear in Body are mindless automatons—freaks really—running around and posing ... as they suck on orange peels and drink four ounces of water every millennium.

Rejuvenated Rattlers come back, take 80-73 victory over Aggies

BY MICHAEL HARRIS
STAFF WRITER

Florida A&M, headed by Reginald Finney, brought out a new look last night at Gaither Gym—one of inspiration, togetherness, fluidity.

However, this new face didn't take form until the second half of the Rattler's 80-73 win over Mid-Eastern Athletic foe North Carolina A&T.

They trailed, 35-30, at the intermission. FAMU Coach Willie Booker must of had magic in the words he spoke in the locker room.

"At halftime, I told them not to stand around," Booker said. "I told them to take their time and pass the ball around, and try to get it down low. Man for man, North Carolina can't handle us once we get inside their zone. I told them all they have to do is to just run the offense."

Booker credited Finney for the team's attitude change.

Reginald Finney's enthusiasm and hard work has caught on, Booker said. "And now the whole team is catching his enthusiasm."

In only his second game, Finney—who said he now feels 100 percent—scored 19 points, blocked three shots and had four steals. His stats, though, only begin to tell the importance of his of role—he dove for balls, crashed the boards, played tenacious man-to-man defense, inspiring the other players. The Rattlers' old passive appearance seems to be defunct.

"In the first half, we were sitting back and playing too passive," Booker said. "In the second half, we took it at them and attacked them, offensively and defensively."

Finney had plenty of support.

Defensively, guards Darrell Williams and Copeland

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

TUESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your practical side comes to the fore now, helping you make impressive gains. In June, a romance will take on special meaning for those of you who have been disappointed recently. The respect of your co-workers, friends and family reinforces your determination to do the right thing next September. Money-making opportunities deserve closer scrutiny. Public acclaim or a special honor will be yours in December 1991.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., actor Lloyd Bridges, singer Chuck Berry, actress Charo.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Much can be perfected and resolved now. Be willing to accept new challenges. A professional relationship can be improved through candid communication. You are the messenger others listen to.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Indulging your whims could prove costly today. Think about the image you want to present. A new partnership seems right. A word of the wise is an important source. Be very discreet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fresh financial opportunities could happen today. Be open to new avenues of personal growth. Make good use of your versatility. Accept compliments with good grace and reciprocate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look for your creative spark today. Your charm is an asset now. Cultivate friendships with people who share your views. A spontaneous gesture could complicate a love affair.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You could be smarting from the results of poor judgment today. Avoid making a major decision. Be sure of the facts. Romance takes on deeper meaning tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There is strength in numbers now; join a cause that focuses on the future. Group gains should be your goal. A chance encounter could lead to a delightful experience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Thought, not action, is your strongest suit today. You will accomplish more by working on your own. Use your power of persuasion with a reluctant family member. Avoid issuing ultimatums to mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make a special effort to complete old projects before starting new ones. Use an indirect approach with a difficult customer. A parent-child relationship is on the mend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep a low profile today. A grievance at place of employment will sort itself out. Do not let a financial disappointment get you down. A loved one's attitude will cheer you greatly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Contact an influential person early in the day. An unexpected check will relieve a tight financial situation. Domestic affairs are in the spotlight. You get a nice stroke of luck this afternoon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A risky business that looked promising pays off handsomely. The need to assert yourself could cost you your sweetheart this evening. Contact your mate to clear the air.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could be out of circulation today. New contacts will agree with your approach. An attempt to explain your motives to someone talented will not turn out as you planned. Count your blessings.

Lady Seminoles win easy over Cards

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Both coaches complained heavily of poor officiating Monday night

The Lady Noles answered Louisville's first-quarter run to go on a eight-point defict and pull within 40-40 at Lady Cardinals' stunned crowd. FSU then went home with a win.

Louisville (11-4 and 2-2) led FSU at 4 half when FSU reigned for six straight points off turnovers. FSU upped its lead to 11 points with just under 10 minutes to go and didn't allow the Lady Cardinals to get any closer. The Lady Seminoles led by as many as 17 points, 81-64, with 2:30 left.

Senior Wanda Burns led FSU with 25 points and went 4-perfect 10-for-10 from the free throw line.

Louisville's physical style of play suited FSU sophomore Christie Dishman, who pounded the boards for 13 rebounds and nine putbacks. Dishman finished the night with 22 points and said she was glad to see a low-scoring game. "I was glad to see it was a low game," Dishman said because we're not low scorers."

FSU teammates Chris Davis, Tracy Walker and Pia Pascual continued to score 19 points and grab 19 rebounds and effectively shut down the pick-and-roll Louisville's big players.

Louisville Coach Bud Childers said that FSU's quickness gave his team problems.

We tried to play straight man to man defense but the shots outside forced us into it," he said.

In accordance with Meadors, Childers referred most of the officials as a "phantom who kept blowing his whistle and looking at the other guy."

Next on the Lady Seminole home stand list is Southeastern Conference power Alabama, which comes to town for a 7 p.m. meeting Wednesday at Tully Gym.

SPORTSWORLD

NEW YORK – The National Football League is considering whether to postpone the Jan. 27 Super Bowl if war breaks out in the Persian Gulf.

The league early this week is expected to release a statement saying that as of now the championship game will proceed as scheduled, but the NFL reserves the right to change plans if circumstances warrant.

Although no one with the league office was willing to discuss the situation publicly, there is obvious concern about the threat of terrorism if fighting begins in the Middle East after the United Nations' Jan. 15 deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait.

"Reginald Finney's enthusiasm has caught on. And now the whole team is catching his enthusiasm."

15 points, dished 12 assists and grabbed 8 rebounds.

"Darrell Davis and Copeland all did outstanding jobs, defensively," Booker said. "We're finally getting and reaching our peak. Now all we have to do is to keep working and maintain our rhythm."

FAMU came out sluggish both offensively and defensively. Although North Carolina outrebounded the Rattlers, 17 to 10, and shot .592 percent from the field, they only took the game five point halftime lead.

The Rattlers took Booker's halftime advice—that of pounding it down low—and center Kelvin Daniels went on a surge, scoring 13 points in the first 6:12 of the half. Daniels finished with 22 points.

"In the second half Davis and Finney were hitting from the outside," Daniels said. "And because of it I was left one-on-one with their big man. And when I'm one on one with anyone, all I have to do is give them a piece of my playground moves and you might as well count it."

FAMU goes on the road for three MEAC games—Morgan St. on Thursday, Coppin St. on Saturday and Howard next Monday.

Deadline passes

Iraqi troops remain in Kuwait; Bush is 'at peace with himself'

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Iraq defied the United Nations deadline for it to withdraw its 500,000 troops from Kuwait by midnight EST Tuesday and the Middle East braced for a threatened attack by an equal number of U.S.-led forces to liberate the tiny, oil-rich emirate.

"We have seen no evidence of withdrawal by Iraq from Kuwait," a State Department official said about 30 minutes after the deadline passed.

There was no sign that attack by U.S.-led forces was imminent, although there were reports that B-52 bombers were being moved into strategic locations in the Middle East. The Pentagon would not confirm the report.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein vowed that he would not pull out despite the U.N. mandate calling for the unconditional withdrawal and the restoration of the exiled Kuwaiti government.

White House spokesperson Marlin Fitzwater said earlier in the week that anything after the midnight deadline would be "borrowed time" as President Bush was ready, if he deemed it necessary, to authorize a military initiative to expel Iraq from Kuwait.

The deadline passed just hours after a last ditch appeal for peace was made by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

"I make, since only appeal to President Saddam Hussein to turn the course of events away from catastrophe and towards a new era of justice and harmony based on the principles of the U.N. Charter," Perez de Cuellar said.

The secretary general said that he could assure Saddam that neither Iraq nor its troops in Kuwait would be attacked by multi-national forces if withdrawal occurs.

World leaders said peace efforts had been exhausted after a French initiative to link the crisis to the Israeli-Palestinian problem failed in the United Nations because of U.S. and Iraqi opposition. Iraq favors a settlement that addresses the plight of Palestinians in Israel's occupied territories.

Perez de Cuellar pledged to make every effort to address the Arab-Israeli conflict "in a comprehensive manner" once the crisis is settled.

The Security Council closed its debate on a possible peace plan.

In another appeal, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak asked Saddam to save the region from war.

"I call upon him in the name of every mother, father and child in Egypt to rid himself of selfishness and make his soul pure for God by saving the word of peace," said Mubarak, who has sent 20,000 troops to the multinational effort.

"I call upon him in the name of every Iraqi family in the land of sisterly Iraq who had a martyr in the Iraqi war with Iran," Mubarak said.

In Washington, President Bush took a solitary walk on the White House grounds and was said "at peace with himself" as he pondered the decision of ordering a military offensive with the multinational force of 680,000 troops.

Fitzwater said Bush was ready to make the tough decisions "that are necessary."

"I think he's ready to send troops and I would say that he is confident in the correctness of our cause and the strength of our coalition," he said.

In Baghdad, Saddam visited his troops at the Experts: war could make recession worse

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST. NEWS EDITOR

Skyrocketing oil prices sure to be expected should war erupt in the Middle East, according to Ray Forrester, a Florida State University economics professor.

"I don't see any positive coming out of the U.S.'s involvement," said Forrester, an expert in the field of economy and international economics. "Politically and economically, I see only trouble for us."

Other economists experts at FSU agreed that a conflict in the Middle East would have a devastating effect on the United States economy, but said that it depends on how long it lasts.

Several economic experts in response to the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq on August 2, immediately predicted that gas prices would skyrocket, according to U.S. economic history expert Edward Knoblet. But afterward the costs of returning will must be paid.

The oil crisis ended America's apparent prosperity, Knoblet said Tuesday. "But in the long run, wars are three times as costly as they appear to be."

Contributing to the cost of transporting thousands of troops and millions of dollars of military equipment to the Middle East is an already powerful serious drain on the economy.

If Iraqi President Saddam Hussein follows through with his threat to torch Kuwait oil fields, as he did in the Persian Gulf War, the price of oil could skyrocket to astronomical levels, Forrester said. After all, oil prices climbed dramatically after the Iranian revolution, he said.

We have a great dependence on more of the cars we've designed our transportation system."

Another FSU economic professor, Lans Courtney, agreed.

"If oil is $2.50 per gallon, then you won't be consumer confidence," Courtney said.

The nation's economy will be crippled if oil prices skyrocket, the nation would produce millions of unemployed, Courtney said.

The military also will be strained if oil prices skyrocket, Forrester said. In addition, there will be unrest and riots in oil-dependent countries, possibly overthrowing governments and paving the way for Islamic fundamentalists to take over.

FAMU holds MLK convocation while world prepares for war

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

[illegible] word at Florida A&M [illegible] convocation on Tuesday celebrating what would have been Martin Luther King [illegible] birthday.

Students and professors pointed out that the United Nations deadline for Iraq to pull [illegible] Kuwait fell on the birthday of a man who advocated non-violence, and the scheduled speaker, Matthew Zimmerman, did not attend the services because of military obligations in Washington D.C.

FAMU history Professor Ted Hemmingway replaced Zimmerman as the speaker and addressed the crowd of more than 2,000 students in Gaither Gymnasium who were excused from their regularly scheduled classes.

"We see some of the ideals King held high about to be betrayed," he said.

Hemmingway, who was instrumental in passing the university's African American history requirement last summer, said delivering the convocation speech was "both gratifying and sobering."

Several different choirs sang and the symphonic band played throughout the ceremony, but the moods of students and speakers were dampened by the U.N. deadline.

Hemmingway said the university and its students are responsible for keeping alive Kings' conviction that every man is somebody.

"Change is the result of personal struggle. It doesn't come otherwise," he told a cheering audience. "You can't wish it. You have to make it happen. Buy one of King's books on the struggle for civil rights before you buy your next gold chain."

If students don't understand King's philosophies and don't take his message to the streets, Hemmingway said they are as guilty as perpetrators of racism as white supremacists.

He added that the way to prevent the continuation of racism is for the university and its students to be "the engine of change" and work with people in poverty stricken areas like the Bond and Bush Street communities.

"We work for the Ku Klux Klan when we oppose each other," he said. "We work for the other people. Martin's legacy is: 'Don't work for the Klan, work for yourself.'"

James Cole, a student who spoke at the convocation echoed Hemmingway's philosophies. He said world leaders such as King and the late Black Muslim Malcolm X cannot be summed up by four word phrases such as "I have a dream" and "By any means necessary."

"We cannot afford to ax down our greatest black figures to phrases," the journalism major said. "I don't care how sweet it looks on a T-shirt or how cool it looks on a pair of jeans."

Frederick Humphries, president of the university made a "special plea" asking students to remember friends and family stationed in the Middle East.

"I ask that you, particularly today, stop no matter where you are," he said. "Take one moment today and pray just one simple prayer that peace will rule the planet."

David Shanks, a 21-year-old political science major, said it was appropriate for students to gather for King's birthday, but that the U.N. deadline should have been on a different day.

"It is a travesty," Shanks said. "It is the biggest insult for the world to pay to a man like King. And personally, I take it as an insult."

front and declared they were ready for battle, according to Cable News Network.

An official spokesperson said Saddam would no sooner give up Kuwait than the United States would give up California and advised Iraqi citizens to sleep peacefully without fear from the American Bomb.

The Gulf region prepared for war.

Security was tightened in Arab states throughout the region and there were reports of citizens hoarding food and other items in many countries in the Middle East, according to Arab news sources.

Security measures at airports, shipping ports, borders and oil installations were tightened and there were reports of residents of Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Egypt buying stocks of rice, flour, batteries and even gas masks.

Officials said there was enough food and medicine in the Arab world to last for months, even if supplies were cut off by war.

There were demonstrations in several countries.

In Baghdad, hundreds of thousands of protesters burned U.S. flags and chanted pro-Saddam slogans. Cairo radio said the demonstrations were well orchestrated and monitored by gun toting members of the ruling Baath party.

In the United States, thousands held rallies, kept vigils and engaged in sit-ins, urging Bush to delay action against Iraq and give U.N. imposed economic sanctions a chance to force Saddam to give up Kuwait.

Troops in the Saudi desert prepared to receive the order for combat.

Capt. Clint Esarey marked the day time ran out for Iraq by dictating a living will to his wife, speaking into a cassette recorder and telling her how he wanted his funeral to be arranged if he should die in combat.

"If I don't make it back, I want to be buried in my military uniform," Esarey, 32, of Indianapolis, Ind., said. "I'm a soldier. It's my life. The uniform is part of me."

"In our minds, the war has started," said Esarey, the father of two adopted daughters. "Today is the day. Training is over with. The mindset is this is the real thing."

Economics

"They might drill in the Keys," he said. "We'll be looking for oil in all the wrong places."

Unlike during World War II, Canterbery said, the United States does not have the resources for large-scale production of armaments and ammunition. In the Vietnam conflict, a war in the Middle East could be rough on the economy, he said.

"This isn't the kind of war that would give us stimulus," he said. "This is going to be the kind of war that could be a major drag on our economy."

Keuchel said political results of a victorious war may outweigh a conflict's effects on the economy. He argued that despite the popular argument that a war would stimulate the economy, domestic problems in the U.S. make it unlikely that a conflict would be of positive economic benefit in the long run.

Keuchel pointed to massive Third World debt to First World money-centered banks and the savings and loan crisis as examples of problems to which the costs of war would be added.

"Spending is spending," Keuchel said. "But there are negative consequences."

Right to know

With its severe restrictions on reporters covering the Middle East crisis, the Pentagon is trying to turn the press into nothing more than its own propaganda machine.

The defense department set a stringent policy last week that allows military officials to do a "security review" on stories and photographs before they are transmitted to anyone, to limit first hand coverage of the war to a select pool of journalists and to control their every move.

Furthermore, the Pentagon has issued a broad set of "Operation Desert Storm Ground Rules" which outline information that "should not be reported because its publication or broadcast could jeopardize operations and endanger lives."

That information includes anything relating to "the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of enemy camouflage, cover, deception, targeting, direct and indirect fire, intelligence collection or security measures". Only general terms like "low" or "fast" can be used in describing military methods and tactics; no specific numbers of troops or equipment being deployed may be released.

The most disturbing of these ground rules is this: Damage and casualties can be described only as "light," "moderate" or "heavy," and details of major battle damage or personnel losses of specific U.S. or coalition units cannot be reported until officially released by the military.

This is outright censorship, and the public and press alike should be outraged.

Paranoid Pentagon officials are trying to prevent a backlash of public opinion similar to what was experienced during the Vietnam War. In that era, the press was pretty much given free rein on the battlefield. While the public criticized daily reports of body counts, the government blamed the press for turning public opinion against the war.

In other words, the truth hurts.

But no matter how painful, the American public is entitled to nothing less than true and accurate reporting. There are 415,000 American troops in the Middle East, and their friends and relatives back home deserve to know what's going on. Furthermore, billions of tax dollars are going toward the war effort. The U.S. government should be accountable for every life and every cent.

The role of the press is to act as a watchdog on the government. Our duty is to keep the public informed and report, in an unbiased manner, monumental events. It's understandable that military officials don't want a bunch of reporters running around loose on the front lines. Thousands of lives are at stake. But the restrictions placed on reporters go far beyond safety concerns.

It's your right to know what the government's doing, and our right to report it. But those rights—both yours and ours—are being censored by the government.

There's an old cliche that we're fond of in the Flambeau, newsroom: "If the press didn't tell you, who would?"

Who would?

Readers divided about war

Editor:

It has been only five months since the UN imposed sanctions against Iraq. We need to give them longer to work before even considering sacrificing our most precious resource (lives) for our most finite source (oil). War as a response to aggression at best is a short-term resolution; it is not the answer. Instead, we need to find a real solution to our dependence on the Middle East for oil. Rather than spending millions of dollars a day on a military build-up, those millions could be spent on research for alternative energy sources.

I've heard many arguments as to why we must stop Saddam Hussein: he will soon have nuclear capabilities (we were able to avoid their use with the USSR—and they, too, invaded neighboring countries); he has committed atrocities against his own people (as have the governments of China, South Africa and El Salvador to name a few—and aren't we "friendly" with those governments?); and, we can't let him control the world's oil supply (this supply will soon be exhausted—what will we do then?).

As part of President Bush's "New World Order" we must start with new solutions. War has been tried for millennia. This time, let's give peace a chance.

Iraq under Saddam Hussein's leadership has a long history of aggression, destruction, cruelty and crimes against humanity, and it is clear to us that we, the people of Tallahassee, must support our President and our Congress in their decision to free Kuwait.

Saturday, there was a war protest outside the Vietnam Memorial. Everybody has the right to voice their own opinions, but what kind of signal is this sending our troops and other families? Many of our soldiers went into the military to get money for college, learn some discipline, and perhaps learn a trade. In other words, to improve their lives. I am sure many of the soldiers would not have enlisted had they known this conflict would arise. I also know for a fact that many do not want to be in Saudi Arabia. They have to be there because the government requires it. I'm sure their relatives do not want them over there. But, fact is fact. They are there, and they need our support. Their families and friends are here, and they need our support. Instead of having these protests, why not gather to show support for them, regardless of what the government is requiring them to accomplish. Letters to Congress and the President would be just as effective, and will not give the troops the feelings of unappreciativeness. So you actually think the President is going to pull the troops because a number (a minority) of people are gathering to protest? I think not!

Editor:

FSU colleagues, I urge you to act now if you wish to voice your opinions regarding the impending war with Iraq. DO NOT wait until the shooting starts.

I am doing so. I am very opposed to American children and resource being sacrificed for a dubious cause and I continue to voice my precis now to all who will listen. However, if a war begins then I will cease my opposition as long as doing so will jeopardize the war effort.

Indeed, if war comes I believe that every American should do all she or he can to help in the effort—especially help for those who are sacrificing the most: Military families. During a state of war "business as usual" should cease until our children come home.

So I urge everyone who either opposes or supports war to contact Congress TODAY and express your opinion. Otherwise you are abdicating your rights and responsibilities as citizens.

Experts: analogy of Hussein to Hitler is flawed, dangerous

BY DOUG MARTIN
STAFF WRITER

> 'Iraq does not propose a threat to our very existence in the way that Nazi Germany did.'
>
> —Alan Steinweis
> FSU history professor

President George Bush has described Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein as "worse than Hitler" to help justify his Persian Gulf policy. But most local experts on both the Middle East and Nazi Germany say the analogy is excessive and misleading.

"Saddam Hussein is certainly a nasty man, but he's no Hitler," said Monte Palmer, a Florida State University political science professor and Middle East specialist.

"I find that analogy invalid and also offensive," agreed Alan Steinweis, a Florida State history professor who teaches classes on modern Germany.

Steinweis said the image is invalid because in World War II Germany was the most powerful military power in the world, not a Third World country like Iraq. And he said he finds the image offensive because it trivializes the systematic program of genocide Hitler carried out against Jews, Gypsies and Slavs in Europe.

Most experts cited this aspect as a key distinction between Hitler and Hussein.

His gassing of the Kurdish minority in Iraq "is not the same," said Richard Rubenstein, an FSU religion professor and an expert on genocide.

Rubenstein said Hussein's use of poison gas on the Kurds, which killed about 5,000 people, was not an institutional, systematic extermination of a nation like Hitler's concentration camps. Instead, he said, it was intended to terrorize the rest of the Kurdish population.

"Hitler had no interest in terrorizing," said Rubenstein.

Palmer agreed with this view of Hussein's use of poison gas on the Kurds.

"The Kurds had been in revolt," said Palmer, who has lived in and spends a great deal of time in the Middle East.

Both Rubenstein and Palmer characterized Saddam as a classic tyrant, someone whose main interest is retaining power. Because of Hussein's authority by force, the Iraqi citizens have few, if any, freedoms.

"They are free to agree with Saddam Hussein," said Palmer.

But however oppressive Hussein's regime is, experts agree it does not measure up to Hitler's Germany in scale or atrocity.

"Iraq does not propose a threat to our very existence in the way that Nazi Germany did," said Steinweis. "The U.S. could obliterate Iraq if it wanted to."

"The use of the Hitler image raises other issues for scholars."

Steinweis said a lot of American Jews are concerned with the survival of the state of Israel. He said they are not offended by the use of the Hitler image because Hussein has threatened to attack Israel if attacked by United Nations forces in Saudi Arabia.

But Steinweis said many Germans are offended by the use of the Hitler-Hussein analogy.

"The people of what was West Germany have spent a lot of time coming to terms with their own past," said Steinweis.

Something the use of this type of symbol is dangerous, Rubenstein said. It is important to conceive of Hussein as a human willing to use any means at his disposal.

"We change the plane of combat to one that has magic and ritual connotations," said Rubenstein of the use of symbols to demonize an enemy as an evil force. "We're eventually going to have to come to terms with the people of Iraq."

international scale and cannot begin to protect itself from the evils of Iraq under Saddam Hussein. Someone much larger must intervene and prevent Iraq from invading Kuwait or any other of the countries in the Middle East. It is our moral duty to protect the human rights of every individual and to control one madman from possessing the economic or territorial power to rule the world. This is not just about oil, although it is an important issue. How many of you drove to the peace vigil at the Vietnam Memorial? Oil is of immeasurable importance to the economic world today. But this is about good vs. evil. President Bush and his supporters are not anti-peace; they are anti-apathy. They will not stand idly by and watch Saddam Hussein continue to destroy lives and countries. You say "Give Peace a Chance." I say we have given peace a chance since Aug. 2. FAMU Student Senate approves money to send delegates to coalition congress

BY GUY McCARTHY
FLAMBEAU WRITER

After nearly 45 minutes of debate Monday night, the Florida A&M University Student Senate voted to appropriate $3,000 to send 15 student senators to the National Coalition of Black College Student Governments Conference in Montgomery, Ala.

According to Senate Secretary Tracey Thomas, the final vote on the appropriations bill was 24 in favor, two against and three abstentions.

The debate turned on the issue of how much money should be allocated for senate representation at the coalition's February conference. Student Sen. Shaundra Sullivan contended that $2,000 was a reasonable amount in light of budget constraints. She pointed out, "We can send 10 representatives and save $1,000 for other programs."

"The reason I opposed the $3,000 appropriation was because I wasn't sure of how much money we had in our account," Sullivan said. "I didn't want us to be short when other organizations come to us for funds."

Sen. Theo Hamiter Jr. argued in favor of allotting the full $3,000 solicited by coalition spokesperson Daniel Boylen II.

"We should send as many FAMU representatives as possible," Hamiter said. "The conference will further empower our legislature through contacts and networking with our peers at historically black institutions."

Hamiter said the FAMU Student Senate has come a long way, but so far most of its contacts have been with traditionally white institutions.

"By pooling our resources we should be able to work on projects with a national scope, like lobbying the secretary of education," Hamiter said.

The idea for a coalition congress for traditionally black institutions originated last September, according to FAMU junior Keshia Walker, who is serving as program committee chair for the coalition.

"During conversations with student government representatives and campus officials at other schools we realized we had a lot of common interests," Walker said. "The purpose of the congress is to set up a coalition between historically black colleges and universities, to help combat the social, political and economic problems that are threatening our campuses today."

In addition to the senate delegation, FAMU will be represented at the conference by members of the student government executive cabinet and several at-large campus organization leaders, according to Walker. A total of 25 FAMU student representatives will attend the congress, which will host at least 200 delegates from other schools, she said.

Additional funds for FAMU's participation are being solicited from the student government executive branch, the office of student activities and the athletics department, said Walker.

DePauw Chamber Symphony comes to town

The DePauw University Chamber Symphony will perform a free concert tonight at 8 p.m. in the Opperman Hall in the Florida State School of Music (corner of Copeland and Call Streets) as part of their January tour of the southeastern United States. Featured will be short works by Copland, Bernstein, Mozart, Beethoven, Ravel, Stravinsky and Henry Cowell.

Love Letters sent to Tallahassee

BY KEITH TRALINS
STAFF WRITER

It's as old as history itself, and is one of the most exciting topics around. People talk about it constantly, and millions watch it or listen to stories about it each year.

No, I'm not talking about the Super Bowl; I'm talking about the love story.

A love story of a different kind will take the stage tonight, as A.R. Gurney's Love Letters performs at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center.

Love Letters is the tender tale of two would-be romancers that follows their relationship as it carries them from second grade all the way up to middle age. The beauty of the show lies in its simple staging technique—the two actors sitting at a table, telling their story only by reading the letters that they have received from one another.

Love Letters was first performed at the New York Public Library, when A.R. Gurney read the play instead of a speech. It was an instant hit, renowned for its unique staging and dazzling cast. Soon after, it opened Off-Broadway, and after a positive seven-month run there moved to Broadway, where it had a very successful three-month engagement.

Betsy Palmer in Love Letters

Perhaps the main reason for its success was the use of a wide variety of film and stage stars who would only come in to perform the show for a week or two at a time. Because of the simple staging, the play was very easy for people to come in with little or no knowledge of the play. The only requirement was that the two cast members be close to the same age, which led to an infinite number of casting possibilities.

Taking on the roles of Melissa Gardner and Andrew Makepeace Lloyd III in this production in Tallahassee are two very notable stars on their own right, Betsy Palmer and Robert Reed. Betsy Palmer, host of "Candid Camera," has had guest roles on "Murder, She Wrote" and currently stars as Aunt Virginia on CBS' "Knot's Landing." Horror buffs will remember her as Jason's mother in Friday the 13th.

Robert Reed, known to most of us as Mr. Brady from "The Brady Bunch," has been seen on Broadway in Dahlias Barefoot In The Park and Deathtrap. Reed has also been nominated for several Emmy awards, including one for his performance in "Roots."

Love Letters starring Betsy Palmer and Robert Reed shows tonight at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $24. The Civic Center is offering a buy-one-ticket, get-one-free special offer, available only at the Civic Center box office.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Group influences will be strong in the months just ahead. You may decide to subordinate your own desires in order to help others. New public recognition comes in April. Give free rein to your creativity in May. The summer months are great for mixing and mingling. A budding romance could turn serious by November. Family reunions and holiday celebrations benefit from your active involvement.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: pitcher Dizzy Dean, opera star Marilyn Horne, director John Carpenter, singer Ronnie Milsap.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A foreigner could enlighten you about an important facet of your business. Use this knowledge to boost profits. Teamwork is essential. Work out any differences with your loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Although you like to kid around, you never reveal your secret thoughts. Spending time alone will help you extricate yourself from a difficult situation. A voice from your past inspires you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): [illegible] spiritual [illegible] Communication breakdown may [illegible] several days [illegible]

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stop being so critical of others! Taking [illegible] drive people away. Do something nice for someone who has fallen on hard times. [illegible] entertainment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be careful not to [illegible] on impulse today. Hasty words could lead to bitter regrets. Keep a low profile around testy co-workers. A letter or phone call lifts your spirits tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give a co-worker a second chance and you will make a new friend. If your personal spending is getting out of hand, devise a budget. Set a good example for family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you demand too much of yourself or others, you will only cause unnecessary grief. Take time out for some fun. It will do you — and your loved ones — a world of good.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pay more attention to details and you will be able to help a friend in need. A romance begun today could become permanent. Do not let this person slip through your fingers!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A newspaper could provide new career leads. Hard work and determination bring lasting success. Group activities are favored this evening. You have fun without spending too much money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): [illegible] Follow your heart in romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): [illegible]

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): [illegible] Both work activities and home projects prove very satisfying. Get together with good friends and discuss the future. You may plan a vacation together.

Vitale clones make Top 20

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Through great powers of telepathy, the ability to indefatigably watch TV, our writers have intensely scouted most of the nation's elite basketball teams—that is we know as much as Dick Vitale knows. So, hence, we display our self importance—as any good Vitale ego clones would—and give our readers the dreaded Flambeau Top 20.

Rather than being reading mothers and analyzing the poll—for instance, telling readers who's No. 1, who's four or six points back and who jumped 38 spots from the week before—we'll let them figure out these all important details on their own. If you can't read the poll, flip two pages backward and read the Arts section—sports isn't your thing.

The voters are: Staff Writers Michael Harris, Sue Mullins and Jack Clifford; Assistant Sports Editor Rich McCrary; and Sports Editor Paul Shirer.

Flambeau Top 20

Each team's name is followed by record, total points received and last week's ranking. First-place votes are in parentheses after team's name.

1. UNLV (4)	11-0	99	1
2. Arkansas (1)	15-1	96	2
3. Ohio State	14-0	86	3

U.S.-led forces launch massive air attack on Iraqi military targets

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—U.S.-led aircraft, with Kuwait planes taking part in the effort to liberate their nation, attacked Iraqi targets in both Iraq and Kuwait Wednesday night in a massive air campaign intended to drive Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait and destroy his chemical and nuclear capabilities.

There was no immediate word on U.S. or allied casualties or whether any aircraft were lost in the raids against a variety of targets, but Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said that "preliminary reports we have received confirms the success of the operation and that includes the possibility of casualties. It's very very encouraging. The operation appears to have gone very well."

"The preliminary reports are very positive," added Cheney.

And Gen. Colin Powell, chairperson of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said that "the response of the Iraqi forces has been limited."

In past recent U.S. military actions, early reports of successes and early reports of details have proven inaccurate.

The raids of what has now become Operation Desert Storm—launched from Saudi Arabia and from some among six aircraft carriers in the Persian Gulf and Red Sea—were aimed at cutting off Saddam's ability to communicate with his forces and at eliminating his chemical weapons capability and nuclear facilities. Those facilities were believed on the verge of being able to assemble a crude nuclear device.

Neither leader, appearing in a packed Pentagon briefing room, would provide a detailed look at specifics of the operation that was just two and a half hours old when they started, other than to say that hundreds of flights of allied aircraft were involved.

Planes from the United States, England, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait took part in the raids with F-15E "Strike Eagle" night fighters thundering off a central Saudi airbase. Kuwait's air force managed to get several of their planes out of the country as Iraqi forces moved in Aug. 2.

While no details on specific targets was provided, they included anti-aircraft radar and missile sites, command and communication facilities and Iraq's chemical and nuclear facilities. Chemical and nuclear facilities in Iraq are located in and near the towns of Basra, Samarra, Byji, Irbil and Mosol.

In addition to targets around Baghdad, the warplanes were believed to have attacked a Scud missile site in western Iraq that threatened Israel.

Cheney said he believed reports of

A Tallahassee peace rally was everything but peaceful Wednesday as more than 200 anti-war protesters and counter-demonstrators faced off in front of the Vietnam Veterans War Memorial across from the state Capitol.

A fight broke out when counter-demonstrators set up a large stereo system and played "Don't give us a reason," a song by Hank Williams Jr. praising U.S. presence in the Middle East.

The first punch was allegedly thrown by a counter-demonstrator after a peace activist climbed on the sound system stage.

The melee took place before the U.S. declared war on Iraq Wednesday night.

"I think it just really illustrates the difference between the two sides," said Russell DeGrove, an anti-war protester involved in the scuffle. "It's just funny when I hear the people for this war get upset over people."

DeGrove, who was taken away by two Tallahassee Police Department officers and later released on his own recognizance, said the trouble started when a counter-demonstrator pushed him off a stereo speaker and punched his mouth.

Police shootout

A man driving a truck shot at two Tallahassee police officers Wednesday morning, according to Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Mark Meadows.

The shot missed the officers and the suspect was eventually caught and arrested, Meadows said Wednesday afternoon.

According to Meadows, the incident occurred at 12:18 a.m. on West Orange Avenue. The two officers, John Avery and Stan Hoover, were monitoring traffic with radar when the suspect, David Leon Miller, allegedly slowed his truck, shot at the officers and drove on.

After a chase ending at Thompson Street, the suspect allegedly jumped out of his truck with a pistol in his hand. While trying to elude the officers, Miller allegedly turned twice to shoot at Avery, but was deterred both times by shots fired first by Avery. Neither of Avery's .357 caliber revolver shots struck Miller, Meadows said.

The suspect ran into woods bordering Country Club Drive, and the officers lost contact with him. Brix, a police dog called in to track the suspect, found the man hiding within 200 yards of where the officers had last seen him, Meadows said.

Miller, 24, was arrested and charged with two counts of attempted first degree murder, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and discharging a firearm from a vehicle. He was also wanted on previous charges of disorderly intoxication, violation of probation, theft and burglary to a structure.

Miller was taken to the Leon County Jail. Bond has not yet been set.

But counter-demonstrators disagreed with DeGrove's side of the story, saying it was DeGrove who instigated the fight. The counter-demonstrator involved in the dispute left before he could be interviewed.

"They came and were on our private property," said Florida State University junior Christina DiVitto, an organizer of the counter demonstration. "They're supposed to be peace-advocating people and here they are starting fights."

Counter-demonstrators at the rally waved American flags at passing cars and carried signs that read "No More Jane Fonda" and "Support Our Soldiers." Many of them accused anti-war protesters of being "un-American."

"I think they're out here holding up peace signs because it's in style. It looks like something out of the 1960s," said Amy Henegar, a member of FSU College Republicans. Henegar, who was clad in red, white and blue, added that she thinks anti-war protesters are sending "bad vibes" to American soldiers stationed in the Persian Gulf.

But Barry Emerson, a former soldier in the 101st U.S. Airborne Division in Ft. Campbell, Ky., said he is protesting against the war because he disagrees with the government's policy, not because he is un-American.

"If I am un-American, it's in the sense that I'm an earthling before I'm an American," Emerson said.

Tallahassee resident Michael Weddington said the counter-demonstrators were advocating killing by supporting the war in the Middle East.

"I just think that they're misguided," said Weddington, a peace advocate during the Vietnam War. "It's sad to see people get killed, but it's even sadder to kill other people."

Anti-war protesters at the demonstration carried signs ranging from "Elvis is alive and well in Iraq—Don't bomb!" to "Chop and kill in suits of green is feeding Bush's war machine."

At one point, Weddington got into a heated argument with counter-demonstrator James Sargeant, who later gave a speech in suppport of American soldiers in the Middle East. Sargeant said he became angry when Weddington called the soldiers "murderers."

"When our soldiers came back (from Vietnam) they were treated like animals. I think soldiers would like to believe that the U.S. supports them and that they're not being demonstrated against," said Sargeant, an FSU student.

Retired U.S. Army Capt. Merv Libby attended Wednesday's rally, but said he was divided.

"I'm 100 percent against our government policy, but I'm 110 percent for our troops," said Libby, who fought in the Vietnam War for two years. He said he did not disagree with the views of anti-war protesters during the 1960s, but that he did disagree with some of their militant techniques.

"I've been spit on and had shit thrown in my face, (after returning from Vietnam,)" Libby said. He added that anti-war demonstrations during the 1960s hurt morale among American troops.

Anti-war protesters and counter-demonstrators engaged in shouting matches on-and-off during the rally. One protester, who attended various peace rallies in the past month, said Wednesday's demonstration was the most hostile.

"Everyone's real tense because they know it's going down," the protester said. "Everyone's just really upset."

The two groups lined up and shouted back and forth at each other when counter-demonstrators began singing to Lee Greenwood's country and western song, "Proud to be an American."

"You ain't got a clue. Think about this," 18-year old Dusty Brock said as he pointed to a sign which read "Support our Soldiers."

"These (peace advocates) are crazy. They're living in a dream world. If we don't stop Iraq, we're going to be gone," Brock said.

After the shouting match ended, an anti-war protester ran by and unplugged the counter demonstrators' stereo system.

TPD shut down the stereo system after receiving an anonymous complaint. Police said they turned the system off because counter demonstrators did not have a city permit to play their stereo at the site.

"I think it was a really obnoxious thing for these people to drown us out with all of their mega bucks," said Obbie Zendik, an anti-war protester upset about the loud stereo. "There's definitely been a lot of hostility directed toward the peace movement by the counter protesters."

Hypocrisy day

Hypocritical.

That is the only way to describe war hawk President George Bush's proclamation declaring Monday, Jan. 21, as National Sanctity of Human Life day.

Bush has deployed more than 400,000 troops to the Middle East and promised to "kick ass" in this war. American men and women will die; whether the casualty count is one or 1,000, it will be too many. And let's not forget the number of Iraqi troops who will die also. After all, politics aside, a life is a life.

If Bush really gave a hoot about human life, he would have given the sanctions placed against Iraq time to work. Instead, he chose war. And the bottom line is, war takes lives—not preserves them.

Bush is trying to sway Americans to support this war by telling them Saddam is guilty of human rights violations—gassing the rebellious Kurdish minority, among other things. Which is true. But what Bush is neglecting to tell people is that the U.S. is also guilty of human rights violations—backing the Salvadoran government, as well as "allies" in this war like Syria, which has tortured and gassed people also.

But the hypocrisy continues.

The deadline for Saddam to pull out of Kuwait or face the consequences of war fell on what would have been pacifist civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr.'s 62nd birthday. Granted, the deadline was passed by the United Nations, but it was Bush who pushed for the deadline, which fell on the birthday of a man who believed civil disobedience, not violence, is the way to effect social change.

Compounding the matter, Bush's proclamation for human life day—which is really moot now that war is here—falls on the federal holiday honoring King's birthday. Maybe he's suffering from white man's guilt.

Whether it was intentional doesn't matter; Bush is slapping every black American's face. First, there is a grossly disproportionate number of blacks stationed in the Middle East supporting a president who has struck down civil rights legislation and is attempting to dismantle minority scholarships. Simply put, blacks are fighting for a country that has, and continues to, deny their basic constitutional rights.

King is probably rolling over in his grave now, as he should be.

But the hypocrisy doesn't end there.

In addition to proclaiming Monday as National Sanctity of Human Life Day, Bush reiterated his staunch anti-choice stance claiming that ". . . the lives (of both mother and child) must be protected."

By opposing abortion, Bush is indirectly supporting the slaughter of women who would die in botched, bloody, back-alley abortions. He claims he wants to protect unborn "children," but refuses to adequately support federal programs aimed at helping children born to families who can't afford them.

Instead of proclaiming Monday the National Sanctity of Human Life Day, maybe he should have proclaimed it National Hypocrisy day. It would have been more fitting.

LETTERS

Go to your Bible

Editor:

The basic conviction of Prophet Muhammad of Arabia's (PBUH) preaching, and the heart of his prophetic message, is the certainty that he alone, in the midst of a light-headed and thoughtless generation, sees the fateful event which awaits all of those who are now jesting and laughing so carelessly. The threatening storm-cloud which already darkens the horizon, the disaster which seems so near that he regards himself as the "naked messenger" or the courier who arrives in tattered garments to give warning of the castastrophe which is already about to strike, is the last day—the day of judgement and retribution.

Muhammad never stated directly that the judgement would fall upon his own generation, but rather that Allah alone knows when it will fall, and that no one, not even the Prophet, can say whether it is immediately impending.

The Bible teaches us not to pray for that day.

The important thing to Prophet Muhammed (PBUH) is not when the day is coming, but the certainty that it will come. Man should so live, think and act as though that day were already visible to the eye, being more certain of its realty than anything else in the transient world.

A horrible catastrophe to which Muhammad gives various mysterious names—such as a thunderclap, a cry, a crash—will usher in the judgement. Either it will come simutaneously with a trumpet-sound (RWC) which will call men before the judge, or the trumpet-sound (RWC) which will produce it.

I humbly and respectfully request you now go to your Bible and read John 1:1-15.

Clarence Cole, Jr.

You owe me

Editor:

One of my classmates in TSU made a comment the other day that struck me. He said that in the Third World, people seem to think that those from developed countries, especially the United States, owe them something. That is why I decided to write this letter, explaining why I, a woman from the Third World, feel this way. I address it to the average U.S. citizen:

You mostly owe me not because of what you have done, but because of what you have not done.

You owe me because you do nothing when your government embarks in interventionist expeditions in Third World countries, leaving there, besides dead bodies and pain, broken dreams of self-determination and social justice.

You owe me because you feel so comfortable at home with your TV, your stereo and your VCR, that you prefer not to think about those who have nothing but their sorrows. You prefer not to think maybe, because if you do, you would have to admit that, in order to give them the opportunity of a better life, you have to give up your TV or your stereo or your VCR.

You owe me because when you dress as a tourist and go to our countries on vacation, you forget that we are also human beings, and you perceive us as zoo animals, put in there to entertain you.

You owe me because when you eat the tasty bananas from Central America you never remember the thousands of brothers and sisters of mine who have died and still continue dying slowly in the poisoning environments of the banana plantations, owned by U.S. companies.

You owe me because you are part of the problem and not part of the solution.

As you can see, what you owe me cannot be paid with money. What I want from you is your respect, your solidarity and your actions to stop these evils. You don't need to go and fight our struggle with us. The only thing I ask you is not to be silent, speak out, protest, talk to others, write to the newspapers, to your congress people. Do something! After all, it is just a random fact that you are there and we are here. It could have been the reverse.

Moving backwards

Editor:

A research scientists at a Cambridge University lecture on public radio made the following points about Reagan's peacetime morality recently:

About 1980, Reagan at the genesis of the fundamentalists abolished the Presidential Science Advisory Council which had previously governed civilian direction of the scientific community in research. From then on, scientific research and the whole scientific community directed their efforts to the military and as far as medical research went, to incurable genetic diseases instead of toward curing ordinary diseases in the Third World for instance. This put a blot on the morality of the scientific community. They became perverted by serving the military as a god.

It is a mystery as to why fundamentalists directed Reagan to dissolve or abolish this Presidential Science Advisory Council. Aside from that, Bush himself does not even now have advisors in certain areas that former presidents had, except we are now in the nuclear age. Not even to consult the Pentagon. While science advances, the fundamentalists are taking a huge populace backwards in their mentality and literacy.

Why did they pour all the resources, money, personnel and facilities into research on rare diseases when the most common killers in the Third World are diarrhea, influenza, malaria, etc.? What military monstrosity was the object of their desires and attention to take away from civilian causes?

Reagan also significantly altered the social apparatus, busted the unions and stopped housing construction and other social programs which provide the means along with improved education so that the masses will be literate in science to go into the next century. It should be remembered that scientific morality is an obstacle to fascism, militarism, superstition and other evils. Or was the fundamentalist objective to make America a colonialist power to serve an elite few? Where are our social programs now to promote scientific literacy?

terrified they'll forget the line and curve of their children's faces. White boys with short baby-hair and high-school wives left behind watching Oprah and Geraldo on the color TV in a Dothan trailer park; black boys with patient eyes trading NBA cards, thinking of their mothers staring uncooing in church at Jesus on the cross.

"Get those Tigers by the tail!" yells the cheerleader, shaking her butter-colored curls. "Kick their butts."

Wars and rumors of wars

"Kick Saddam's ass," said George Bush. We are at war so George Bush won't look like a wimp. We are at war so multinational oil corporations' profits will not be disrupted. We are at war to protect our colonial interests in the Middle East: the bellicosity of an empire whose day is nearly past.

We are not at war to foster democracy, truth, justice and freedom. If that were so, we would have invaded Kuwait ourselves, toppling its despotic monarchy; we would have turned our backs on the Saud princes until they grant human rights to women; we would have sent the Marines to Lithuania, to Tibet, to China, to South Africa to the West Bank.

Wars and rumors of wars

The Crimson Tide is getting slaughtered by LSU. The Tigers have two guys over seven feet who pass the ball down court like rocket launchers. The fraternity boys have put their little flags down on the bleachers. A few have rolled onto the floor. This is a long game, a lot of time-outs while ESPN sells Michelin tires, Dodge trucks, Valvoline motor oil, Hyundai sedans and NAPA auto parts.

As a culture, we have little sense of irony.

Wars and rumors of wars

Martin Luther King's birthday was a hell of a day to pick as the deadline for war. It is typical of the Bush administration to show such arrogance and stupid insensitivity. But as a preacher commenting on National Public Radio said, "Anyone who doesn't acknowledge the three million homeless in this country can overlook a small fact like Dr. King's birthday."

Lou Harris and The New York Times and Gallup and USA Today and no doubt the Holmes County Advertiser have all done polls showing that half the American people support a war in the Gulf—as long as it doesn't take too long and not too many die. In John Wayne or Sylvester Stallone movies, not too many people die—not the important ones, at least.

We are tragically naive: that's the bad news. The good news is that while half the country supports this macho nonsense, most of the other half does not. People are taking to the streets, insisting that they want no part of this folly, braving insults, braving being called unpatriotic and anti-American and liberal and weak.

Some Americans prefer to take refuge in the smooth, comfortable, unexamined rhetoric of flag waving, "getting behind" the president—just because he is the president, shouting "we're number one!" And some prefer the subtler, more painful bravery of taking the original American thesis at its revolutionary word, challenging out so-called leaders, insisting on liberty of conscience and truth.

Wars and rumors of wars

On the radio news, White House spokesperson Marlin Fitzwater has said that the president is at peace with himself.

Indeed. And the rest of us?

Scud missile launches were "false reports."

The operation—involving some of the most high technology weaponry on Earth—is expected to run for some time, and neither Powell nor Cheney would speculate about whether ground forces would be called in.

Iraq has roughly 540,000 troops in the desert theater and 4,200 tanks. Allied forces totaled 690,000 with more than 100 ships, including six aircraft carriers and 1,800 fixed-wing aircraft.

Cheney said he signed the order setting the attack in motion on Tuesday afternoon but made it subject to the consent of the president.

"No one should doubt our ability and our resolve to carry out our mission and achieve our objectives," said Cheney, who said Iraq's capabilities threaten allied forces in the region.

The attack, at 7 p.m. EST, occurred at 3 a.m. Saudi time at a period when there was no moon—prime hours for U.S. aircraft equipped with night-fighting capability.

Powell and Cheney said the U.S. aircraft came from all services and President Bush, in his address, said the targets included Iraqi tanks, suggesting that Air Force A-10 Thunderbolts and Army AH-64 Apache tank killers were involved.

In addition to F-15Es, the raid was understood to include drone sea-launched Tomahawk cruise missiles fired off the battleships Wisconsin and Missouri in the Persian Gulf. And it was likely the attack included raids by Navy A-6 Intruder bombers. The British have the Tornado fighter and bomber in Saudi Arabia, and the Saudis fly U.S.-built F-15s and the Tornado.

And the F-117A stealth fighter, actually a bomber, was a likely participant in the raids because with drones and other planes drawing Iraqi fire, their anti-radar capability would allow them to slip in undetected and attack key sites. More than 40 of the planes are in Saudi Arabia.

From the front, pool reporters with Air Force units reported back that security was tight at the base where many people were asleep when the first aircraft were launched. Some were awakened by the continuous thunder of the takeoffs and a few ventured from their tents and clustered outside chatting quietly.

"The object was to achieve the ultimate surprise that we could," said one official.

Local strikers hold out as Greyhound dispute continues

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST. NEWS EDITOR

Despite financial difficulties and the uncertainty of waiting, striking Greyhound drivers are "cautiously optimistic" as federal court proceedings against the national bus line begin, according to an unofficial spokesperson for local striking Greyhound employees.

"Things are looking better," said Cheryl Williams, whose husband has been a Greyhound driver for more than 27 years. "The union truly feels it will win."

"Most of us are getting by, but that's about it," said Dexter Cherry, a striking driver who has had to delve into his savings to pay the bills since the strike began. "Everybody's still hanging tough around the country."

After 10-and-a-half months on strike, Greyhound drivers are continuing to protest what they consider an unfair contract and unjust labor practices by the bus line.

More than 6,000 Greyhound drivers across the country—backed by their Amalgamated Transit Union—walked out last March over terms of the company's new contract proposal. Bargaining between company and union officials broke down in May when the bus line said it would not fire replacement drivers—or "scabs"—to make way for the return of union drivers if a settlement was reached.

The 45 Tallahassee-based drivers and their families continue to strike, and strive to pay bills as the protest nears the one-year mark. They trudge up and down the sidewalk next to the station on Tennessee Street every night.

Cherry said that despite the winter months, this year's weather has been relatively pleasant for the Tallahassee strikers—in contrast to other states, where the temperatures often fall below freezing.

> 'Things are looking better. As far as we see, things are going our way."
> —Cheryl Williams

Hostility between the strikers and replacement drivers—heated early in the strike—has simmered somewhat according to Cherry.

"Everything's pretty settled down," Cherry said. "We're just making time."

Williams said the striking employees are having to deal with pay cuts because drivers must find work with smaller bus lines and other types of employment.

"It's been hard on all of us," Williams said. "The pressures are on all of us."

But employees have reason to be hopeful that the strike will not be in vain, according to Williams. The National Labor Relations Board—the federal agency that oversees labor disputes between unions and employers—has begun hearings on allegations that Greyhound Lines unfairly fired striking workers and engaged in other unfair labor practices, among other accusations.

The NLRB has taken Greyhound to court on a charge of illegally declaring contract negotiations at a stalemate and following through with its own proposal. NLRB attorney Phil Bloedorn said shortly after the charge was filed early last

University center is more than 30 million dollars under budget

BY JAN WESNER CHILDS
NEWS EDITOR

Florida State University planners heard some good news about the controversial university/academic center Wednesday: A revised estimate of the project's cost indicates it will be about $30 million under budget.

Vice President for University Advancement Jim Pitts told a university building committee the entire project, including design, infrastructure and buildings, will cost about $76.8 million—considerably less than the $107 million originally expected.

The savings will come because a planned four-story parking garage will not be built, Pitts said. Instead, he said, the university will create new parking lots on two parcels of land adjacent to the stadium site. The land was recently purchased by the Seminole Boosters for $1.75 million.

Pitts said it isn't clear yet whether the university will have to reimburse the boosters for the land, but the school has a $5 million land acquisition fund that can be used for the payment.

"The original feasibility committee said this would be the best place for a parking garage, but of course they didn't know we'd have this land," Pitts said.

The center will feature office space, classrooms and retail areas. It was originally planned as a ribbonlike horseshoe that would wrap around Doak Campbell Stadium, but the plans have been modified and the center will now be series of separate buildings adjacent to the stadium. Planners describe it as a "building block" concept.

Besides the buildings, more seats and new booster skyboxes will be added.

The modified plans, finalized Wednesday by the committee, also include a $2.5 million addition to Coyle E. Moore Athletic Center.

The stadium improvements and Moore renovations will be paid for by private funds and the athletic department, while the rest of the project will be financed by the state.

Parking Services Director Glenn Scanlan said he knew "very little" about the revised plans, but that he doesn't have any problem with the idea of creating parking lots rather than building a garage.

"It would park as many cars, probably," he said.

According to Pitts, the parking lots will hold 2,000 to 3,000 cars. The garage would have accommodated 3,000.

year.

Williams said employees are hopeful that negotiations will lead to a fair contract and, possibly, back pay.

"We're getting all kinds of rumors," she said. "Things are looking better. As far as we see, things are going our way."

Williams said many involved in the union argue that a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition by Greyhound President Fred Currey could result in a partial employee buy-out. And that may result in a possible solution to the crisis, she said.

"We're very optimistic that something's coming down," she said.

Watching days over, Davis leads FAMU

BY MICHAEL HARRIS
STAFF WRITER

Ever since he could hold a basketball, Kenny Davis would watch the big boys play street ball and marvel about how great they were. Yet most of them never got out of Hauthville, the slums of Indianapolis, Ind.

Now, Davis' watching days are over, and he's point guard and leader of the Florida A&M squad. And Davis can say a childhood dream—of the different sort—has been fulfilled.

"When I was young, we young guys played on one side of the court while the older guys played on the other," Davis said. "They were better than me, but they didn't elevate. And here I am, and I'm elevating. Right now, I am as good as they are. They were my goal and my heroes, and I wanted to reach their level."

No, the 6-foot Davis hasn't elevated above the rim all that much. He's usually on the other end of that, feeding off a number alley-oop touch passes to guys like DeLon Turner, Reggie Finney and Kelvin Daniels. What Davis did elevate from is the lifestyle that few would call on the "good" side.

Davis remembers well battling with such products of his poverty-stricken environment—for instance, the "drug issue."

"I had friends and still have friends into drugs and stuff," Davis said. "I'm not into drugs and stuff because of the respect I have for my mom and family. The most disrespectful thing in my life would be to have my family see me locked up. I feared what my family would think of me more than jail itself. Especially cousin Larry."

With his parents separated during his childhood, Davis relied on the leadership of his two older cousins—Tyrone and Larry Tracy. And when Larry disapproved of Davis' actions, he let Davis know it.

Davis learned a lot of life's lessons from his two cousins, and he also learned quite a bit on the basketball court.

"When I was little, someone played a joke on me," Davis said. "I always looked to shoot anytime I got the ball. One day, this guy came up to me and asked me how to spell 'pass,' and I couldn't. It embarrassed me. And in a way it sort of taught me to learn to pass more and not be selfish—on and off the court."

Spelling is not all Davis learned on the basketball courts. Playing with the 'big boys' also taught him to play at a more advanced level than other kids his age. And at 15, his lessons proved to be beneficial. He was picked for the Peace Games in Scarborough Canada, and helped that team beat the Canadians twice.

But Davis' lessons weren't over. In fact, it's because of a leadership breakdown during his junior year in high school that Davis strives to keep improving his game.

Lady Seminoles continue to build newest winning tradition

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

After an 88-65 thrashing of Alabama on Wednesday night, the Lady Seminoles' basketball team can own up to its slogan as Florida State's "newest winning tradition."

"We played great," FSU Coach Marynell Meadors said. "Our defensive game gave us so many opportunities to score."

FSU forced 26 turnovers with a pesky full-court press and relentless hustle.

Alabama falls to 10-6 while FSU won its fifth straight to improve to 10-2. The Lady Seminoles now head into a two-game road test over the long weekend with games against Memphis St. and South Carolina.

After taking a 39-35 halftime lead, the Lady Seminoles exploded in the second period, putting together a 20-8 run. At about this time, Alabama Coach Rick Moody conceded his team's loss.

"They came out and really got after us in the first five or six minutes of the second half," Moody said. "And before I knew it, the game was over."

Alabama shot a respectable 45 percent, but the Crimson Tide, in addition to its numerous turnovers, was out-rebounded under its own board 24 to 13.

"It was a great team defensive effort, and it was just real pretty to watch," Meadors said.

FSU shot nearly 55 percent and outscored Alabama in the second half, 49-30.

Danielle Ryan found her permanent spot in the FSU lineup, scoring a season-high 23 points. The sophomore point guard had started since senior Robin Corn was injured just two games into the season, but Wednesday she said she "realized that I was going to have to step up, and it's going to be my job for the rest of the season, so I'm getting focused."

Ryan will replace Corn for the remainder of the schedule, and Corn will undergo knee surgery Feb. 11, applying for a medical hardship redshirt.

FSU shooting guard Wanda Burns poured in 20 points and dished out six assists, mainly on fast breaks. Teammate Chantelle Dishman hit 7 of 8 from the field to score 14 points and grab eight rebounds while Chris Davis was a perfect 5 for 5 in field goals and hit both of her free throws for the Lady Seminoles.

Power forward Tia Paschal layed in 10 points and handed out five assists for FSU.

The Lady 'Noles return to Tully Gym Jan. 26 to meet Top 25 contender Southern Mississippi.

Rattlerette's first-year coach back in familiar surroundings

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

Claudette Farmer has a recurring association with her alma maters—she's returned to coach for both of them.

Right now, Farmer coaches Florida A&M's women's basketball program, and she has her college alma mater off to a 7-5 start. A year ago, Farmer headed the program at Rickards High, her prep alma mater.

Surprisingly, it's not the level of play that Farmer sees as the main difference between coaching high school and college, rather it's the time she gets to spend on coaching.

"The flexibility in my schedule is the big difference," Farmer said. "I'm not teaching classes like I did at Rickards, so I have more time to devote to coaching."

Another big change that Farmer sees in college players is their attitude.

"Now I'm dealing with players that are a little older," Farmer said. "For the most part, I'm dealing with more mature players."

Although the first-year coach has been successful so far, Farmer says her team is not where she thought they would be.

"Injuries, among other things, have put us behind where I'd like us to be," Farmer said. "I thought we would be about 10-2 right now."

Last season was a rocky one for the Rattlerettes. Mickey Clayton was forced to step down after almost 13 seasons as head coach. He was replaced by Johnnie Williams, who led FAMU to a 12-8 record to finish the season.

The Rattlerettes are 2-1 in the New South Women's Conference, good for third place, but after this week, FAMU will know if it's a contender or a pretender.

FAMU takes on conference-leader Miami, 8-7 and 2-0, tonight at 7 p.m. at Gaither Gym. The Hurricanes present a big test for the Rattlerettes, according to Farmer.

"Miami is a very talented ball club, and they have played a tough schedule," Farmer said. "They are very strong and will present a great challenge for us."

Senior Donyale Ferguson leads FAMU, averaging 17.1 points and 4.67 assists. However, Farmer believes the 5-foot-8 guard needs to stay in control.

"Donyale is an outstanding athlete, but she tends to play a little out of control sometimes," Farmer said. "We have tried to get her into a more structured mode of play."

Ferguson's found support from Theodora Allen, who averages 14 points and seven rebounds a game.

PHI ETA SIGMA

Offers scholarships and awards to members

Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society will this year allocate $42,000 in graduate and undergraduate scholarships and awards to selected members across the nation. The $2000 graduate scholarships are for the first year of full-time graduate or professional study, and the $500 undergraduate awards are for full-time study as well.

Any eligible senior member of Phi Eta Sigma may apply for one of the graduate scholarships. For the undergraduate award, however, the applicant must be nominated by the local chapter. Any eligible member of Phi Eta Sigma who is interested in applying for one of the scholarships should contact Emilie Morlock at the Honors and Scholars House (located at 933 W. Park Ave Ph. 644-1841).

Selections for the awards and scholarships will be on the basis of the student's scholastic record, involvement in Phi Eta Sigma, evidence of creative ability, potential for success in chosen field, and character.

The local chapter DEADLINE for nominations for the undergraduate awards and for the applications for the graduate scholarships is

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Put your abundant energy to the best possible use. Diversify your interests and investments, beginning in March. June is the ideal time to consider buying a home. Use the "dog days" of summer to plot career moves. In September, enroll in graduate courses or special seminars to boost your earning potential. You may be ready to make a romantic commitment by November. December is terrific for family reunions.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Betty White, actor James Earl Jones, puppeteer Shari Lewis, American patriot Benjamin Franklin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A secret ally could be a source of funding now. You have what it takes and others know it! Team up for group projects. Make a major purchase on the installment plan.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do what must be done at home; you can easily catch up with neglected tasks. Spending time alone with your thoughts recharges your batteries. Romance looks rosy. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your friendly, versatile nature will serve you well today. Be helpful to higher ups and you will win kudos, extra dollars. Do not be afraid to take business risks. Play the field in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Launching a new project will require hard work and long hours. Mate or partner is understanding. Cupid's arrows could fly on the job site. Be sure to duck if you are not free!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Impulsive deeds or words could upset romance or cause a financial loss. Think things through and leave nothing to chance. You have what it takes to outwit a competitor. Dig in your heels!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The tides of home or business affairs are turbulent now. Calm measures keep you from being swept away. You gain fresh insights from meeting new people. Widen your circle of friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Sharing with others will win you strong support. Others clamor to climb aboard your success train. Joint accounts can serve a useful purpose. Pay more attention to domestic issues.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): To advance your career, keep the channels of communication wide-open. A conservative person plays a major role in your success. Sidestep any discussion about politics or religion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family discord will require infinite patience. Hear someone out before offering your opinion. Protect your reputation for meeting deadlines. Afternoon brings exciting news. Romance sizzles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New employment and financial opportunities arise through travel or correspondence. Be receptive to a surprising message. A job situation changes. Helping your co-workers means helping yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): By being patient and less demanding of a young person, you will be able to establish better rapport. Taking an analytical approach to a problem makes an excellent impression.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Changing your career or lifestyle will make you more productive. Seek the active cooperation of your co-workers and family members. Spur-of-the-moment invitations are favored

"In my junior year of high school, I was expected to lead my team to the divisionals," Davis said. "I was the team captain and leader. I was expected to make the team perform. Instead of performing, I played out of control some and wasn't prepared to take on the responsibility of leading the team. I let the team down and was benched. After that, I told myself, 'never again.'"

In last Saturday's game against South Carolina, Davis showed he meant it when he said, "never again." He hit a foul shot in the last three seconds to ice a victory. It was just the way he liked it.

"I like when the pressure is on," Davis said. "When it comes down to it, if the team needs to score or something, I want to do it. I want to be the man who carries the load. And if I fail, I don't mind taking the responsibility."

Going into his first game for FAMU, Davis wanted to make an immediate impact. It didn't take long before he realized that his 180-pound frame is not strong enough to hold the team up by himself.

"When I first got down here, I wanted to show people that FAMU wasn't a powder-puff," Davis said. "But in my first game, it didn't work out that way. After I missed my first shot, (FAMU Coach Willie) Booker took me out of the game. I realize now, though, that it was the bad shot that Booker was upset about, not my shooting."

Davis isn't hesitant about his capabilities now. When he does look confused, it's because he's playing dumb for an opponent in the midst of making a no look pass or a deceiving move.

"On the court, I analyze the situation and the predicament of the game," Davis said. "I look to pass first to the hot shooter, and if it's not open, I take it myself. I like to shoot last because passing and getting others involved is what I like to do most. Until crunch time that is."

Davis averages 13.1 points, 5.5 assists and 3.58 steals a game, and he believes he can still improve.

"I can improve my game still," Davis said. "I haven't played my best yet. To come out with fifteen points and 10 assists is not enough."

Although he's elevating to new heights, Davis doesn't forget the heroes on the courts back home.

"I would like to go back some day," Davis said. "I want to help the kids in my neighborhood and teach them about life."

Iraq attacks Israel

Iraq fires Scud missiles; Israel doesn't retaliate

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Iraq, under a continuous air barrage by U.S.-led forces, fired missiles into Israel early Friday in an attack that threatened to bring the Jewish state into the Persian Gulf war as it entered its second day. Saudi Arabia also came under missile attack by Iraqi Scud missiles.

Iraq has threatened repeatedly to strike at Israel if attacked, and Israel has said it would retaliate, an outcome U.S. officials fear could cause the defection of Arab members of the coalition seeking Iraq's ouster from Kuwait.

In Washington, Zalman Shoval, Israeli ambassador to the United States, refused comment on whether Israel would strike back, saying only that it "reserves the right to respond in any way it would deem fit."

He said the Iraqi Scud missles, armed with conventional warheads, caused "considerable" property damage and six or seven injuries, none serious.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater issued a statement saying that "the United States has been in touch with the government of Israel to express its outrage over the missile attacks by Iraq" and that the administration was "continuing its efforts to eliminate this threat."

The missile attacks interrupted what had been 24 hours of good news from allied officials, who reported that bombing raids beginning Thursday against Iraq and occupied Kuwait had met with little resistance and much success.

Allied casualties were reported to be light. Preliminary reports said one U.S. F-18C was shot down, killing a Marine pilot, and a British fighter with a crew of two was missing. Kuwait said one of its planes also was shot down.

In Washington late Thursday, the Pentagon said Lt. Cmdr. Michael S. Speicher, 33, a pilot assigned to the USS Saratoga, was the pilot whose plane was shot down during the initial air strikes. The Pentagon did not release a hometown, since Speicher is listed as missing in action.

More than 1,200 sorties had been mounted, and U.S. officials said Operation Desert Storm would continue until Iraqi President Saddam Hussein complies with U.N. resolutions and withdraws from Kuwait, which he invaded Aug. 2.

Allied ground troops in Saudi Arabia were poised at the Kuwait border, but no infantry or armored exchanges had begun.

Israel's government radio said missiles began exploding in Israel shortly after 2 a.m. (7 p.m. EST Thursday).

A Pentagon official said one Scud missile also was intercepted by a U.S.-made Patriot air defense missile in eastern Saudi Arabia, near Dhahran, the massive Saudi air base being used by the United States and other allies.

The successful destruction of the Scud represents the first time an air defense system has knocked down a ballistic missile, said the official, who requested anonymity.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said a "handful" of Scuds hit Israel in the first wave. He could not confirm any target or whether the missiles contained chemical or biological warheads.

A senior Pentagon official said he was "relatively certain" that permanent Scud sites in Iraq were knocked out by allied bombings. He said he believed the missiles used against Israel were launched from mobile sites in Iraq said to be maintained underground.

Shoval, Israel's U.S. ambassador, said Israel decided against launching a pre-emptive strike of its own against the Iraqi missiles to support American's political aims in the crisis, and added, "Thank God, the

Tallahasseans stand behind Bush's decision to declare war in Gulf

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Tallahasseans will never forget where they were when President George Bush addressed the nation Wednesday night and proclaimed that war had begun.

Residents informally polled Thursday said feelings ranging from "It's about time" to "Holy s—t" were on their minds after the announcement. But the majority of people—whether they were originally against or for war—agreed on one thing: now is the time for the nation to stand united, support the troops in the Middle East and do what is necessary to make this a short-lived war.

"I cursed and cried," said Lavonia Mitchell, an 18-year-old Florida A&M University student.

Mitchell said she participated in prayer vigils at her sorority house last week, but now that war is here her protesting days are over because some members of her family are in the Middle East.

"It has already started," said Mitchell, a broadcast journalism major standing outside the Foote Hilyer administration building. "You can't take it back. But if it's like this, get it over with as soon as possible and get the people back. Instead of praying for this (not to be a war), I'm praying for my family to be back."

Tanya Covington, a FAMU student who marched in a Monday protest to the state Capitol, said she was at a basketball game when she heard the nation is at war. Like Mitchell, she said the time for protesting is over.

"The first thing I thought is 'Our black men are dying,'" the economics major said. "Now that we've already started, I want us to get in and get out. It's too late to be saying, 'Let's have peace.' It's too late. It just doesn't make any sense."

The majority of people polled said the U.S. should continue bombing Iraq and no battles should be fought on land.

"We need to go in there, bomb them, get Saddam and kill him to create world peace," William Rogers, a 32-year-old Tallahassee resident, said.

Kyle, a 34-year-old man purchasing gas at the Fina station at the intersection of Mahan Drive and Capital Circle, agreed.

"It was time to s—t or get off the pot," Kyle, who refused to state his last name, said. "We need to go in there and just bomb. Because if it goes on long, it will be a waste of everything—money and lives."

Kelly Peters, director of FSU's Center for Participant Education, said she will continue protesting the war because it is being fought for the wrong reasons.

"I will keep my adamant stance of opposing Bush and his fellow elitist war hawks," she said. "I don't think a lot of the troops understand what the hell is going on."

Peters, who said the war is being fought for oil companies' interests, isn't the only anti-war activist sticking to the philosophy that there is still a chance for peace.

"I was shocked, disappointed and real sad when I heard it (Wednesday) night," said Angel Johnson, a FAMU student shopping at Winn Dixie on South Monroe Street. "I wish Bush would try to negotiate. I didn't think he'd actually let our troops go over there for oil.

"I don't think it's worth it. I really don't think Saddam Hussein will back down, but I think Bush should pull out. I think (Bush) has an ego problem."

George Jackson, an employee of the Whataburger on North Monroe Street, also said he is against the war.

Kinko's threatened by bomb bluff

BY KEITH TRALINS
STAFF WRITER

A small shopping center on the corner of Tennessee and Dewey streets was subject to a bomb scare Thursday afternoon around 2 after an anonymous caller announced that a bomb had been planted in the complex.

The threat turned out to be a false alarm.

"He just said that he planted a bomb in the building, and that we should believe him," said Phillip Mullenix, an employee at Kinko's Copy Center who received the call.

Kinko's production manager, Rex Adams, called the police and evacuated everyone from the complex, which also houses the Rubyfruit Bookstore and Pocket Emporium.

The Tallahassee Police Department and the Leon County-Tallahassee Fire Department searched the area for 20 to 25 minutes and determined that no bomb had been planted.

The investigation "was a little bit easier, because there is a limited area open to public access," said TPD Sgt. Leroy Peck. "There were certain places to look. Trash cans, types of canmisters, anywhere a package could be deposited.

"We have one (suspect), but we can't confirm it."

Peck said the bomb threat probably wasn't related to war in the Mideast.

"The business owner believes it's a gentleman who stole a vehicle from him earlier and is currently being prosecuted," he said.

The evacuees watched from the McDonald's restaurant across the parking lot. Consisting mostly of students and employees of the businesses, they seemed more annoyed with the threat than scared.

"Whoever it is is really disrupting my day," said one unidentified bystander.

Adams disagreed.

"Strange times. Scary considering the climate," he said.

At Home in the Universe

What is our relationship to a universe comprised of 100 billion galaxies? What is our role in the drama of its creation and development, and how can we feel "at home" in such a vast and hostile place? Dr. Hans Plendl (Prof. of Physics, FSU) explores possible answers to these and other questions of cosmic concern.

Urban League president to speak at FSU's MLK convocation today

FLAMBEAU STAFF REPORTS

National Urban League President John E. Jacob will speak today at Florida State University's annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Commemoration Convocation.

Rev. Ernest Farrel, chapter president of the Tallahassee Urban League, thinks his organization will benefit from Jacob's appearance.

"I'd think somebody would listen to what he says, and hopefully it'll have an impact on our organization," Farrel said. "He's a very good speaker."

Jacob has been traveling recently and was unavailable for comment this week, according to his secretary.

Jacob has been president of the National Urban League for nine years and has been involved with the organization since 1965, working in San Diego and Washington, D.C.

At a separate luncheon today, the 1991 Martin Luther King Jr. Distinguished Scholar Award will be presented to FSU history Professor Joe M. Richardson, according to Freddie Groomes, FSU's human resources director. The award is given to honor outstanding service to the university and its students in keeping with the ideals of the late civil rights leader.

The convocation ceremony will begin at 11 a.m. today in Ruby Diamond Auditorium. For more information, call 644-5283.

Reaction

"I think its going to ruin the world," said the 22-year-old man, standing at the BP station on the corner Magnolia Drive and Lafayette Street, clad in a Nelson Mandela shirt. "It will be the end of the Earth."

Many people driving in cars were listening to National Public Radio to stay informed on the latest events, while pledges and brothers at Florida State University fraternity houses were glued to Cable News Network.

But not everyone is following the news closely.

"I don't know anything about this and I prefer to keep it that way," said a woman unloading groceries bought at Winn Dixie in the Magnolia Park Courtyard. "I'm just not keeping up with it."

Many people said that although Operation Desert Storm protesters have the right to freedom of speech, they should think twice before marching and holding 'Give Peace a Chance' signs.

Jackie Pepper, a Miami resident visiting her daughter in Monticello, said that although the war protesters believe they are doing the right thing, she thinks otherwise.

"I don't like it. This is getting back to the Vietnam mentality and this is not Vietnam," said Pepper, who was also gassing her car at the Fina Station. "A lot of them don't know what they should know about (the situation) before protesting."

Hank Phillingim, a 22-year-old FSU student, said the 400,000-plus troops in the Middle East need to know Americans respect them.

"The last message we need to send over there is that we don't want them there," the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity brother said. He added that everybody wants peace but, "There seems no other way to accomplish it, but to force Saddam out."

Members of the fraternity, located at 461 Park Ave., hung a sign that read, "Phuck Hussein--Give Him a Napalm Sandwich," Thursday afternoon to counter anti-war protesters.

"We were sitting drinking a few beers and I thought it was a good idea at the time," said David Sanders, who designed the banner. "People need to realize we need to back the forces more. We need more support, a more positive attitude. The (soldiers') morale can't be very high if people back here don't support them."

Sanders said profanity in the sign was intentionally misspelled so people passing the house wouldn't be offended. However, the sign did offend Lambda Chi Alpha house mother Martha Wood.

"I thought it was disgraceful," said Wood, who has served the fraternity as house mother for more than 22 years and lived through three wars. "I don't approve of the way they worded it."

Sigma Alpha Epsilon painted its cement lion in front of the fraternity house red, white and blue to show its support of the troops.

"We want to keep the support up for this before it becomes another Vietnam," said fraternity brother Stephen Busbee. "The best thing we can do now is stand behind the soldiers."

Thirty-year-old Army reservist Vivian Scott agrees. The mother of two, who has been in the reserves for 12 years, said she received a letter a week ago informing her she may be deployed to the Middle East. Although she doesn't want to leave her children behind, she said it is her duty to go.

"If the president made a decision to go to war, it's a good move and we have to back him. War has already started so the only thing we can do is support these guys," said Scott. "We shouldn't be fighting. There needs to be peace here."

Attack

casualties were not more numerous."

Shoval called the strike "an unprovoked" attack against "purely civilian" targets that threatened the lives of both Hebrews and Arabs.

An Israeli Embassy official in Washington who requested anonymity said eight missiles exploded in Israel: two in Tel Aviv, two in Haifa, three on unpopulated areas and one in an unknown location.

The missiles were armed with conventional warheads, embassy spokesperson Hani Miletski said.

Israelis were warned to don gas masks and stay in sealed rooms. About an hour and 15 minutes later, civil defense officials said residents could remove the masks but should stay inside the sealed rooms. Saddam threatened last year to use chemical weapons against Israel.

The air attack was the first against Israel since the 1973 Yom Kippur War.

On the Iraqi front, allied officials said the U.S.-led air attack on Saddam's forces was conducted on several levels, from B-52 bombers assaulting positions occupied by Iraq's elite Republican Guards to the dropping of propaganda leaflets.

The raids continued steadily during the first 24 hours of the war, and Fitzwater ruled out any pause. "We don't think there is any need for a pause for Saddam to change his mind," he said. "If at any point he wants to change course here, all he has to do is surrender and comply with all the U.N. resolutions."

Will we ever know what really happened on Jan. 16, 1991?

BY JACK MCCARTHY
STAFF WRITER

The long awaited, war, might come showdown between recently acquired political allies George Bush and Saddam Hussein has begun. Most endings of political marriages of convenience, while often messy, rarely get to this point. A cynic might call it the world's messiest divorce.

After day one, U.S.-allied air power, as expected, controls the air over Iraq. And at home the Pentagon rules the air waves.

The result: an over-optimistic, sanitized portrayal of the ugly reality of war. For example, on the first night of the bombing campaign, CNN's hyperventilating correspondent Bernard Shaw pronounced from the Al-Rashid hotel that the 18,000 tons of bombs being dropped on Iraq had been "surgical strikes," landing only on military targets. To his credit, veteran war correspondent Peter Arnett qualified Shaw's absurd statement: "Bernie, we won't know that for sure until tomorrow."

Tommorrow has arrived (Thursday) and the false euphoric fog of an overnight victory appears to have lifted. By Thursday afternoon there was even talk that Saddam's air force, pronounced dead several times, may still live, and that a "delayed" counterattack by Saddam may be imminent. Saddam also appeared on Iraqi television not long after it was announced that all communications had been severed.

More ominously, the dreaded ground war in Kuwait, where a majority of the casualties on both sides are expected to occur, appears on the horizon. If American B-52s don't force Iraq's dug-in ground forces to quit sooner instead of later, our worst fears of a World War I meatgrinder confrontation may yet come to pass. So Johnny and Mohammad get your guns. The final battle for the glory of your leaders is upon you.

If American B-52s don't force Iraq's dug-in gound forces to quit sooner instead of later, our worst fears of a World War I meatgrinder confrontation may yet come pass. So Johnny and Mohammed get your guns.

One Iranian's view

The following interview was conducted on Jan. 15. Hussein Barhani, is an economics doctoral student at Florida State University. Barhani, is Iranian, and for very obvious reasons, not inclined to have any sympathy toward the person of Iraq's Saddam Hussein. Barhani lost a nephew and many friends in the Iran-Iraq war and for this reason brings a unique perspective on the war between the U.S. and Iraq.

Q: What are your thoughts and feelings about Saddam Hussein and the possibility of war between the U.S. and Iraq?

A: Frustration and fear. The real victims of all wars are the people who didn't start it—the civilians and young soldiers. I was so sad when I saw interviews with these American soldiers. They were so young. It is truly sad.

As for Saddam, millions of Iranians and Iraqis suffered greatly as a result of the miscalculations of Saddam Hussein, and now it's about to happen again.

Q: How will Iran respond to a war?

A: Iran will probably remain neutral. Iran has had enough of war and wants no part of it. The pragmatic faction is dominant in the country now, so I think Iran will watch them fight it out.

Q: How is it that the Arab countries, and some would say the U.S., which supported Saddam's attack on Iran, are now poised to go to war with him?

A: After the war with Iran, Iraq's economy was shattered—a lot of debt, and a huge army to support. At a meeting with the Arab countries who helped him during the war, he demanded they forgive his debt and pay him for the sacrifice. When they didn't give him everything he asked, that's when it all fell apart. From an economic point of view, Saddam was in dire straits, and he may be right that the Arab countries owed him.

Another important factor is that before he invaded Kuwait, the U.S. and Great Britain were accusing him of trying to get a nuclear trigger. It's possible that he thought they were all conspiring against him, which led to his decision to take Kuwait.

Q: Can Iraq put up a good fight against the U.S. and its allies?

A: War is a dynamic process. When a country is attacked it becomes motivated to fight. When Iraq attacked Iran, we were in chaos. But the country quickly came together in unity and surprised the aggressor. Everything changed. This same process could occur with a U.S. attack.

Another question is how will the Arab masses respond. Most Arab regimes in the coalition are unpopular. The Arab world justifiably feels there is a double standard applied to the Palestinians. That is why war is such a risk. The final test will come when there is hand-to-hand fighting, which I'm sure will eventually happen. It will be very bloody.

Q: Do you think sanctions would have worked?

A: Frankly, I feel there was a rush to war. There was no real effort to negotiate, only ultimatums, and the Arabs are good at negotiating. Once it became a war between Bush and Saddam, negotiations were not possible. It's all very sad.

Q: Let's talk about a post-war Middle East. As I see it, the "winners" of this conflict will be Israel, Syria and Iran. How do you see it?

A: I think this is probably true. Iraq's military capabilities will be diminished, if not destroyed, and Syria and Iran should fill the power vacuum. But the big problem will still be the Palestinian question. This cannot be avoided any longer. In this sense Israel may not be as big a winner as most think.

A: Do you have any final comments?

Q: Just that I am sad and frustrated for the people of the region—the real victims of the war.

Environmentalists upset about clear-cutting off Tram Road

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST NEWS EDITOR

Timber harvesters and environmentalists in Tallahassee are at loggerheads once again—this time over a large tract of longleaf pines just south of the city limits.

The St. Joe Paper Co., which owns the land, has been clear cutting what was once 200 acres of pines since March. Local environmental activists say the land's wildlife has been damaged and the logging should stop.

"Wildlife can't live in these tree farms," said Tallahassee Earth First! member Mike Schoelen, who speculated that endangered red cockaded woodpeckers and many other kinds of wildlife live on the the St. Joe property. "Who knows what endless number of species are out there? They don't need all those trees."

An official for St. Joe argued that clear-cutting the forested area—which lies between Old St. Augustine Road and Tram Road off Capital Circle—will ultimately be positive for wildlife in the area and is the best method for replacing longleaf pines.

"Diversity increases during the first three of four years after a clear cut," said Clay Smallwood, a land management manager with the company, based in Port St. Joe.

Smallwood also pointed out that the company has a permit.

According to Scott Ross, a Leon County environmental inspector, St. Joe officials got a permit in March to log approximately 200 acres of the 1,000 acre lot.

The company is the largest landowner in North Florida. Smallwood said it uses the land off Tram Road as both a tree farm and a grazing space for cattle owned by the company. Wood logged on the site will be used for paper, plywood and chip saw wood, he said.

An employee with Paul White Logging Company, which has contracted with St. Joe, said four logging crews are working the area. One crew could be seen Thursday working land just north of Tram Road with skidders, loaders and chainsaws. Except for a few thin trees and triangular stacks of cut timber, the area is barren.

SG blocks printing of CPE catalog because of photo

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University Student Body President Trey Traviesa halted printing of the Center for Participant Education's catalog this week when he found out the publication would contain a picture by controversial photographer Robert Mappelthorpe.

The picture of a man in a suit exposing his genitals would have appeared on page 3 of the publication, along with a picture of a woman nude from the waist down.

According to Cory Williams, chief of staff for the student body president, a student complained about the page to Traviesa. After looking at the pictures, Trey called the Tallahassee Democrat—where the catalogs were to be printed—and ordered the printing stopped.

"Trey's job . . . is to administer over the agencies and do what he thinks is right," Williams said Thursday.

Traviesa couldn't be reached for comment.

Williams said the SG constitution gives Traviesa administrative power over the student agencies, but he would not cite the exact statutes. He said they would be made public Tuesday "when everything's finalized."

Kelly Peters

According to Peters, Traviesa has no authority over how funds are spent once they are allotted to student organizations.

David Stern, associate director of CPE and a former student senator, said no such statutes exist.

"He has no power to censor any student publications. He doesn't have the constitutional authority or statutes to legitimize his position," he said.

Williams said Trey was not acting out of personal views but in what he thought would be in the best interests of the students.

"This is different than an exhibit in an art gallery, in that in an art gallery a person knows beforehand what he will see," said Williams. "With this the students are not necessarily seeing the pictures voluntarily."

Williams said pictures by Mapplethorpe, which were the focus of a recent obscenity trial in Cincinnatti, may have sexist and racist overtones that would offend some students.

CPE Director Kelly Peters said Traviesa's actions are unlawful, according to the Florida Administrative Code.

"It is not necessary for CPE to go through this review before publication," Peters said.

According to Peters, Traviesa has no authority over how funds are spent once they are alloted to student organizations.

Peters said classes and activities sponsored by CPE will be delayed because of the printing hold up.

The catalog layout was designed by the Critical Arts Ensemble, a local performance art group. Rick Dominguez, a member of the ensemble, said the group wanted to draw attention to the pictures locally.

"We need to open up to these sort of issues in the cultural frontier. Up north in New York and Cincinatti is where these issues (censorhip) have been fought," Dominguez said. "The problem is that people are focusing directly on the physical representations instead of looking at the overall picture."

"The effect isn't intended to just shock people, but to make you open to analysis and critique."

Williams said a five student committee will be formed Tuesday to decide whether the pictures should be printed. The committee will be made up of one person each from the Black Student Union and the Women's Center because members of both groups have complained about the pictures. CPE will choose the other three committee members from a list of six nominees. The committee will make it's decision Friday.

"The students will be selected on the basis of best being able to represent the student body. They'll be informed students selected from the various student agencies," said Williams.

Representatives from the Women's Center could not be reached for comment Thursday. BSU Director Ben Crump said he had not seen the pictures and did not know who from BSU had complained.

Friends of Paul Martino, local AIDS activist, mourn loss

BY BERNARD GRAHAM
STAFF WRITER

Paul Martino, a local crusader against AIDS, died Tuesday night of pulmonary failure.

Martino, 43, had worked relentlessly to find a way to eradicate Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, said Virginia Robson.

"As long as Tallahassee has recognized that AIDS has been a problem, Paul has been in the middle of finding a solution to the problem," said Robson, executive director of Tallahassee AIDS Support Services. "Paul has been in this since the very beginning."

Martino was a founding member of TASS and the local chapter of the AIDS Coalition To Unleash Power, or ACT UP. He had tested HIV-positive about a year ago but continued to battle the disease, according to a close friend.

"Finding out increased his political activity," Robert Allers said. "He was very angry, frustated and frightened. He turned all those emotions into positive political action."

Before his death, Martino was fighting a proposal by the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services to require that names of all HIV positive individuals be reported to the state and their previous sexual partners be notified.

Rob Nixon, Martino's partner and housemate for 11 years, said Martino was strongly opposed to the HRS proposals. Nixon said that he and his partner considered the plans detrimental.

"When HRS starts collecting names, it drives people underground," Nixon said. "They don't get tested because they fear they may end up on some list. There can be no other reason for having this list except for blame, punishment and quite possibly quarantine."

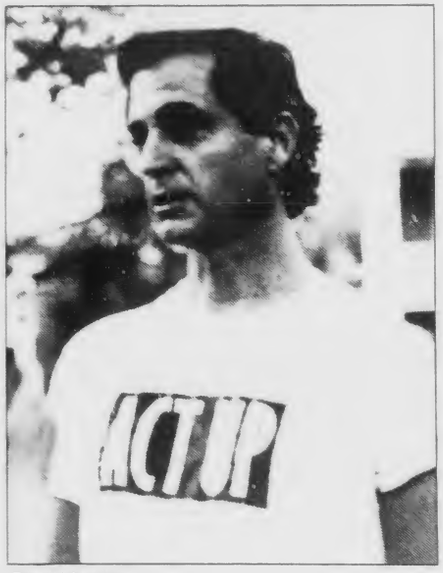
Martino is cited as a dedicated activist by his colleagues and friends.

"He was quite a leader in Tallahassee in terms of being an AIDS activist," said Linda Gray, a fellow ACT UP Tallahassee member. "He was a very courageous and committed person who was not afraid to speak out and lead by his own example."

According to Nixon, Martino had been battling the bureaucracy surrounding the AIDS issue for more than five years. Martino felt the United States government was not addressing the AIDS epidemic, Nixon said.

Anger and desperation led him to help organize the local ACT-UP chapter, said Martino in a May 14, 1990, Florida Flambeau article.

There was a sense growing ... that seven years into the epidemic nothing had been done by the federal government. The programs were excluding people. There was a recognition that among other things, studies were being conducted by people who had no idea how gay men are dying. Too many people were dying."



Paul Martino

As more friends died of AIDS complications, Martino became angrier.

"Paul felt the sense of being overwhelmed and frustrated by everything connected to the AIDS crisis," Nixon said. "When many people would tend to throw up their hands and say 'There's nothing I can do about it,' Paul would not let it stop him and he always found something he could do about it."

Donations are being accepted for the Paul Martino Memorial Fund for Patient Care at TASS, P.O. Box 14365, Tallahassee, 32317 or send money to ACT-UP Tallahassee, P.O. Box 13541, Tallahassee, 32317-3641.

A memorial service will be held Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Miccosukee Land Co-op Community Center on Miccosukee Rd., one mile past Crump Rd. on the right.

Kids in crime

Local police broke up two separate rings of juvenile thieves Thursday who together have committed 14 burglaries, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson said Thursday afternoon.

The first gang of thieves, made up of three 12-year-old boys, was rounded up after a confession by one of the boys. The boy was caught breaking into a car on Teton Trail around midnight Wednesday. The boy confessed responsibility for a total of 10 burglaries—implicating his two accomplices in the process, Simpson said.

The three boys were charged with 10 counts of burglary and the two accomplices were released to their parents. The first boy was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon and resisting arrest. He was taken to the Juvenile Detention Center, Simpson said.

The second group of boys was arrested after a convenience store worker noticed a boy with a $100 bill and some silver coins. The boy and two accomplices were tracked down and arrested around 4:30 p.m. Thursday. The boys, ages 11, 13 and 15, had allegedly burglarized three houses and stolen three bicycles. All three boys were arrested and charged with four counts each of burglary and grand theft, Simpson said. Since all of the boys were minors, none of their names can be released.

Smallwood said clear-cutting is probably the best method for logging longleaf pines. Because longleafs grow better with shade, numerous seedlings are planted right after clear-cutting so the trees can grow at the same rate and provide adequate protection from the sun, Smallwood said.

He added that burning remains after clear-cutting makes the ground healthy for new seedlings. Second growth and older trees increase wildlife, he said.

But Schoelen disagreed.

"Clear-cutting destroys the ground cover," he said of the undergrowth which fosters various forms of wildlife. "They'll never come back. ... It's just a monoculture that's virtually sterile."

Schoelen said that despite the company's legal right to log the property, the trees—at least some of them—should be saved.

"Some of those trees are 24 inches in diameter," Schoelen said. "They're second growth."

Easy traveling tips for European trips

BY MICHAEL McCARTHY
FLAMBEAU WRITER

After spending four weeks in Paris and three weeks traveling through Europe by train with my girlfriend, I learned a few things most travelbooks don't tell you—because if they did you might have second thoughts. Here are a few rules I learned the hard way. Yet, if there's one thing for certain, nothing follows the rules you've been told.

Never believe someone who says you don't need a reservation. While American ticket sellers try to tack on extra costs, sometimes it's impossible to buy anything from European agents. When I was trying to reserve beds on a Spanish train, the man wouldn't let me. "There will be plenty of beds open in first class," he said.

We sat in chairs from Barcelona to Madrid.

When we wanted to reserve a cabin on the ferry from Cork, Ireland, to Le Havre, France, we were told: "You don't need a reservation, there will be plenty of cabins." We arrived at the dock and found hundreds of students wanting a cabin. A handful of cabins were open, and I think we were able to stay in one because of my Irish name. All the other students spent the night huddled on the deck.

Don't take night trains. Travel while you sleep is the attraction of night trains. Yet, unless you have a private room, you will worry about the stranger sleeping in the other bunk. If you do fall sleep, an attendant will knock on the door for your ticket. We always ended up sleeping for a day once we got to our destination, so we never gained any time.

Your coach on the train will always be the farthest from the station. You would think that if you walked all the way out to the front of the train to board it, you should be the closest to the station when you arrive at your destination. No such luck.

Forget the lessons about ordering wine: learn 'bathtub, sink, shower, toilet' so that you can make sure your room has what you want.

Don't buy bus tickets in Rome. If you feel guilty, give the money to the Pope or buy one ticket and never validate it. Half the time, so many people will be jammed in the bus, you can't reach the machine to punch your ticket anyway. If an official checks, act confused and validate your ticket. Use the subway next.

Ride the Rome subway at night. No one sells tickets after 6 or 7 p.m., so how can they blame you if you don't have a ticket? If you're nervous, wait for a guard to walk by, explain to him that you don't have change, and he'll probably wave you through.

All buses in England have the same number. They all have different rules, but they all go by the same number. Ask a local for help.

Don't follow a sign that says "Tous Directions." It's French for all directions: all but the one you want.

Learn the country's language. Forget the lessons about ordering wine: learn "bathtub, sink, shower, toilet" so that you can make sure your room has what you want.

Forget your own language. I saw a Frenchman get a free bus ride from Portsmith to London because the bus driver couldn't understand that the man wanted to buy a ticket.

Bring lunch on Spanish trains. Unless you like chewing ham that's streched out tight as rawhide, bring something edible with you.

And, if you forget everything else, always put money aside to use the bathroom. After standing in the Rome train station and discovering we didn't have enough money to both eat and go to the bathroom, I discovered it wasn't the ideals of democracy that first sent Europeans to the New World. Our forefathers came to America for free public restrooms.

Polack and Irishman do Europe ... almost

BY JACK MCCARTHY
STAFF WRITER

When asked, "Have you done any traveling abroad," I get slightly embarrassed.

So would you if you were in my "traveling shoes." The reason I get embarrased is that my one and only "Trip abroad" was something of a joke, if not a fiasco, and worth remembering only because of its humor value.

Ah yes, I remember it well. It was the summer of the year of our graduation from high school. My best friend Gary Paulzak and I, got it into our heads one falling down drunk night at Jerry Anania's bar (where I also was a bartender) to tour Europe for a whole year.

Fat Jerry Anania, nicknamed "Primo," after the obese heavyweight fighter Primo Carnera, who gave Joe Louis a run for his money one near-miracle night at Madison Square Garden, ridiculed us for the whole year before we left.

Everytime we came into the bar, Primo would chortle, flash his taunting, hideous grin our way and wisecrack to one of the regulars, like Dick Connelly, something along the lines of, "Hey Connelly, look who's coming. It's the travelin' Irishman and his sidekick, the travelin' Polack. Did you know they're going to Europe for a year? Jesus Christ, can't you see these two jokers in Europe?"

We would get real humiliated because all the guys at the bar, and even our girlfriends, Suzie and Joann, would laugh at Primo's taunts. Our responses rarely, if ever, transcended the intellectual heights of, "F k you Primo." All of which made everyone laugh even more. Oh well, let the ignoramouses laugh, we would weakly respond. Let them laugh when we're living it up in Europe next Christmas.

With our departure date a day away, Suzie and Joann threw a party for us in the back room of Primo's bar, where we proceeded to get roaring drunk. Primo did his usual schtick and his minions at the bar laughed it up with him, and at us—which, at this point, didn't bother Paulzak or me.

Finally, "The traveling Irishman and his Polack sidekick," were in England. Let the tour begin. It wasn't but a few days into "The Tour," before the insipid process of "homesickness," took hold. Before you could say European vacation, we were on the phone asking Suzie and Joann what was happening in the hometown on New Year's Eve. "Uh, yeah, it

Start to plan now for your Spring Break

BY KEITH TRALINS

It's the second week of classes, which means it's time to buckle down, get back into the habit of studying. Time to read, time to learn. Time to plan for spring break.

Yes, that's right, time to plan for the college student's annual trek to the sun and fun capitals of the world. Sure, the break is still a month or two away—but no better time than the present to start planning.

According to Larry Tepe from Adventures In Travel, the time to plan ahead for spring break comes very early for an obvious reason.

America's funniest come to FSU in search of humor

BY SPENCER FLEURY
STAFF WRITER

Bigass rat rubber chickens and the Grinch? Mean gasses, funny people. Starmakers are coming to town.

Producers from ABC TV's hit show "America's Funniest People" will be scouring Tallahassee and Thomasville this weekend, searching for flickerings of funniness to appear on their program.

For those unfamiliar with the show, it works something like this: unknown comics send in homemade videos showcasing their talents to ABC. There, countless videotapes compete with one another for the opportunity to appear on TV alongside comic geniuses hosts Dave Coulier and Arleen Sorkin.

Another motivation may be the $10,000 weekly prize for the funniest.

"The show is built on a very immediate basis," said Bill Hersey, the show's senior creative consultant. "We have three to 10 crews throughout the country looking for talent."

The Tallahassee area was a very deliberate choice for Hersey, who does not usually accompany the crews on their talent searches.

"I picked Tallahassee because of the size of the city—it's not a small town and it's not a sprawling metropolis—and because it's a college town," Hersey said. "I thought the population would be interested."

The show's needs are not very specific, according to Hersey, and they are always looking for something new.

"We're looking for anything that's funny," Hersey said. "Not necessarily professional performances, though. We want people having fun doing something funny," preferably something that identifies Tallahassee.

"It's America laughing at itself," he said.

"America's Funniest People" camera crews will be in Tallahassee today at Florida State University in the Union East Court Yard from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., tomorrow at Alfred B. Maclay State Gardens in the recreational area (3540 Thomasville Rd.) from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Monday at Governor's Square Mall in the Center Square from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"For any other time, [planning] is six to eight weeks. For spring break, it's as soon as the school year starts," said Tepe. "Because everyone and his brother is on vacation at the same time."

Hope Liley of Ask Mr. Foster Travel Agency brings up another good reason to plan now—all of their ski packages for spring break have already disappeared. But the hot spot seems to be the Bahamas, Jamaica and Mexico this year.

According to Liley, Ask Mr. Foster packages are competitive with other agency's travel packages.

"For the same price anywhere else, we're including meals, entertainment, just about everything ... except alcohol," she said.

According to Tepe, the average vacation package for spring break should run about $400 to $500, "depending on where you stay."

Other big vacation packages this year are cruises. Platinum Cruise and Tour is offering week long vacations that include a three-day, two-night cruise and hotel accommodations for $165, a reasonable price, according to agent Tricia Gould.

"It's pretty reasonable. For people that have never been down there, it's a good opportunity," she said.

The war in the Persian Gulf doesn't seem to be having an affect on vacation goer's plans, though.

"It's their vacation time, and their going to get it," said Liley.

So, if you're planning on going away, start making those travel plans now. And remember those hot spots: the Bahamas, Mexico, and Jamaica.

"I guess maybe they're tired of going to Daytona Beach," said Tepe.

Brit from page 7

was a bad idea to travel during the winter. We'll come home for New Year's Eve and return to Europe during the summer."

"Yeah, right," they said.

To make this long, embarrassing story a bit shorter, we stayed drunk in England for two weeks and returned home two days before the New Year. The hardest part of course, was walking into Primo's bar on New Year's Eve and hear him yell at the top of his considerable lungs:

"Holy s t, it's the f g traveling twins ..."

Happy New Year and F k you Primo.

Dark Shadows: the third coming of Barnabas Collins

BY MARTIN ALLEN
STAFF WRITER

Somewhere out there in TV land, someone will be watching the tube on Friday night and, provided that it isn't pre-empted by the war, they might catch the first regular episode of NBC's revival of the '60s cult soap opera, Dark Shadows.

It would be perfectly understandable if they then had a momentary blackout and thought they had been transported back to 1966. Such is the nature of this production. Many parts of the show have been lifted almost line-for-line or scene-for-scene from the original daytime serial or its big-budget semi-cousin, House of Dark Shadows released in mid-1970, while the daytime version was still on the air.

The series is produced by Dan Curtis, who was a starving nobody until he hit on the idea of a gothic soap opera. He sold it to ABC in 1966 and produced over 1,200 episodes until the show ran out of gas in 1971. Curtis did a few other things in the horror genre, most notably the original Night Stalker TV-movie, but didn't hit the big-time again until The Winds of War.

This time around, he seems content with merely dusting off the shooting script of the movie and figuring out how much of it he can get away with in today's TV market. Add a few dashes of the old series and the final product is like a mix of celluloid leftovers.

The result produces a curious sort of effect. The viewer who is familiar with the material will probably find himself able to mouth words with the actors on-screen, and trying to identify which scene was stolen from each version. The fact that this version is on film makes the images much easier to watch repeatedly, as compared to the video version with its primitive look and often under-rehearsed actors.

Unfortunately, many of the action scenes fail to sustain the pace of the theatrical version, despite being shot with a much bigger budget and state-of-the-art equipment. It's too damn dark for one thing. The night scenes are almost impossible to see and there's all together too much use of the gauze-filter in the daylight shots. C'mon, Barbara Steele doesn't look that bad.

And there's another thing. Almost everybody else in the show looks too good to be real. In the original series, the actors conveyed a sense of wholesome all-American appeal and looked more like your next-door neighbors than some fashion plate. Ben Cross, who plays the family vampire Barnabas Collins, is about six-foot-two and quite imposing in the role—violent, easily provoked, yet disgusted with some of the things his affliction forces him to do.

While many of the action scenes may not be what they could be, one thing that doesn't suffer is the pace of the story. When Tuesday's second half of the pilot ended, the storyline had already eaten up about six month's worth of the TV original. As long as they maintain this sort of crisp pace, the producers shouldn't have to worry about viewer complaints that have afflicted some other prime time soaps of late.

Barnabas has already begun to make serious moves on Victoria Winters, the new governess for the Collin's problem child, David. Barnabas is convinced that Victoria is the re-incarnation of his lost fiancee Josette who threw herself over a cliff rather than face the horror of what he had become.

Meanwhile, Dr. Julia Hoffman has begun her attempts to cure Barnabas through modern science. Yeah, it's a hokey mix of the supernatural and psuedo-scientific gobble-de-gook, but it made for some clever shots of vampire blood samples boiling up and exploding in the morning sun.

One of the strengths of the original series was its tendency to steal material from every source around. Dark Shadows borrowed elements from the old Universal Studios monster team-ups and nearly plagiarized books like Richard Matheson's I Am Legend published in 1957—the first book to treat vampirism as a purely medical condition.

For the new version, in addition to ripping off its own history, the producers have added some of the raw sex appeal that can be found in the latest wave of vampire lore, a la Anne Rice and the later films by Hammer studios.

Scheduled for an 11-week run, the new Dark Shadows promises to take us on a voyage back to the past in more ways than one. Future episodes will involve Victoria being sent back in time to become her previous self, Josette DuPree in 1795. From there we will begin to learn the origins of the various family curses as well as how Barnabas became a vampire in the first place.

Glossy, fun to watch, not to be taken seriously. But also not to be missed. At least now you don't have to run home from school in order to watch it.

Dark Shadows airs Friday nights on NBC. As always, it is a Dan Curtis production.

Williams awakens in dramatic role

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

At the end of Awakenings, Dr. Malcolm Sayer stands in front of a group of hospital patrons and staff. He's supposed to explain why his "miracle" treatment for a group of post-encephalitic patients didn't work.

He, of course, can give very few facts about why it didn't work, but he does know one thing. Everyone in that room, including himself, is wasting their lives. Sayer says everyone takes the chance to walk, talk and live for granted. He says: we've forgotten the simple things.

Penny Marshall's Awakenings is about Sayer's (Robin Williams) quest—an act of love, really—to awaken 15 patients who have been in a catatonic state for decades. These people are helpless, stuck in wheelchairs and shoved in the corner—out of the way.

Sayer is the first person to realize these people are awake and alive, just physically unable to move or communicate. Sayer tries an experimental drug, L-DOPA, on a patient named Leonard Lowe (Robert DeNiro). Miraculously, he awakens from his 30-year sleep to an entirely new world, unaware that he has been away. He walks around like a wide-eyed child trying to soak up everything around him.

What Sayer doesn't realize, though, is that Lowe's awakening is triggering his own.

Awakenings, based on the true-to-life book by Dr. Oliver Sacks, is a rare film that teaches about life's preciousness. It's impossible to watch a film like this without wondering why you complain about the smallest of things in your daily life. There's something fresh and innocent about the film. It dares to look at life in a new way. Awakenings harkens back to the studio films of the '40s and the '50s, but it's also different. It stares life in the eye and faces facts, but it still looks for the simplest of pleasures.

This is one of the best-acted films to come out in 1990. Williams puts in his best performance as an actor, playing the doctor who is more comfortable in the research lab with his worms and plants.

There's a scene where he's talking with the newly awakened Lowe. Lowe asks him why he lives such a lonely life and Sayer says that he really doesn't understand people: They're too unpredictable.

But it's this unpredictability that he comes to appreciate at the end of the film. He comes to realize that to actually live life, he has to enjoy that unpredictability. People aren't something to observe under the sterile eye of the microscope. You have to interact to enjoy their company.

Up to this point, Williams was called upon to combine a little bit of serious acting with his marquee-draw comedy act. But in Awakenings Williams plays the straight man. He never cracks a joke and he never slips out of character. In fact, for the first time in his film career, Williams isn't playing himself on the screen. He transforms himself into Dr. Malcolm Sayer.

When you first see DeNiro on the screen, he's in a wheelchair, eyes and body motionless like a statue.

Williams and DeNiro in Awakenings

COMMENTARY

MIND REELS

In fact, if his face wasn't so recognizable, you wouldn't be able to tell that he wasn't catatonic.

We've come to expect DeNiro to thoroughly research his role and then become the person he is portraying. DeNiro does this, but when he wakes up, he puts such a touch of innocence (I can't believe The Bronx has become such a wonderful place!) on the role that's it's hard to believe he ever played all the angry characters that he has.

DeNiro isn't the only actor who does this. Each and every post-encephalitic patient is like this. Much research and practice went into getting these characters correct, down to the last detail. And when they all awaken, there's such a feeling of innocence and awe on the screen that it's infective.

With only her second feature, Marshall has put together an impressive resume as a director. Her first film, Big, was a comedy much along the same lines. It was also about taking life a day at a time. But Awakenings is a much more powerful film, drawing from everyday life. Everything in this film teaches something—and that's important.

It's not everyday that a film comes along that can teach you that life is more than a day-to-day struggle for money. It teaches that life, however short it is, has to be lived, not taken for granted.

Awakenings* is playing at the Parkway Five and Oak Lake Six. For more information and showtimes call 877-4480 and 893-0468 respectively.

A Positive Point About Breast Cancer.

Now we can see it before you can feel it. When it's no bigger than the dot on this page.

And when it's 90% curable. With the best chance of saving the breast.

The trick is catching it early. And that's exactly what a mammogram can do.

A mammogram is a simple x-ray that's simply the best news yet for detecting breast cancer. And saving lives.

If you're over 35, ask your doctor about mammography.

Give yourself the chance of a lifetime.™

COMMENTARY

This millenium, Zontor has revealed himself in the form of Jack Nance's fake head.

Zontor's veal: sounds like a lot of bull

BY C. ADOLPH MOORES
STAFF WRITER

A peculiar thing happened to me over this past holiday season. An occurance I reflect upon as partial luck and partial curse. While accidently mixing some poor blotter acid with veal and Five Alive, a metaphysical entity engulfed my spirit, a psychic alter-ego if you will, giving me the power to foresee the future.

He is Zontor; I, his messenger. So, putting this newfound energy to the most proper use, we will reveal to you, at no substantial charge:

ZONTOR AND ADOLPH'S FILM REVIEWS OF THE FUTURE.

Pigs Over Baghdad—Gala musical based on the allied pork bombing of Iraq's capital city. Although the 13th such "Gulf War" film of the past year, this delightful ensemble features the re-animated corpse of Ethel Merman, Rita Moreno and Irene Cara. Watch for Anthony Newley as Saddam Hussein with his whimsical rendition of Anything Goes, as he and his people realize the benefits of a western-influenced porkfat diet.

Cosmetic Counter Cowboy—Dick Clark and Cher star as two wayward septagenerians who rob beauty products from town to town in order to keep their youthful appearance. Film's stark realism on cosmetic abuse may startle some, but film offers no apologizes. Also with Lena Horne, Dinah Shore and George Hamilton as the other members of the gang.

Field Hockey Of Dreams—A women's field hockey team begins to hear strange voices from the adjoining softball diamond telling them to "wear pumps and he will come." Debra Winger, Holly Hunter, Bea Arthur, Tyne Daly and Amy Madigan star in this lesbian fantasy.

Three Men and Junkie—Nope, the kid ended up not being raised well by those three nimrods and turned to smack for solace. Film deals with the child's rehab experiences and chronic nausea which may or may not be drug influenced.

The Madonnadra Strain—An evil scientist uses a mutant strain of DNA extracted from Madonna's underarm to systematically change prepubescent schoolgirls into talentless, self-absorbed whores. John Carradine gives a sinister performance as the villain.

Christ, Am I Fat And Untalented—Roseanne Barr's introspective docudrama on her illustrious film and television career is a testament to historical filmmaking. The contributing interviews include Delta Burke, Nell Carter, Dom DeLouise, William Conrad and the entire cast of Babes.

Lethal Weapon 9—Mel Gibson rolls over a car and hurts his hip. Danny Glover contemplates retirement.

Amazon Woman On The Verge Of A Career Change—Grace Jones, Sybil Danning and Brigitte Nielson star in this zany "B" comedy about three burly gals combing the streets of Burbank for Dino DeLaurentis. Strong sexual content and brief nudity.

Rockjaw and Baldy—Cop buddy picture featuring the crime fighting duo of Clint Eastwood and Sinead O'Connor (her debut) as they track down an international drug lord played by Richard Simmons. Carol Channing co-stars as the gruff LA Police Chief who is a tad fed up with the techniques of the two detectives. With Adam Ant, Flea and Tommy LaSorda.

Sodomy's Child—John Ritter stars in this touching melodrama about the first infant born of anal sex. Anne Archer and Drew Barrymore round out the stellar cast.

What Price Minneapolis?—Director/writer/star Prince plans to purchase the Minnesota town but soon realizes the Twins would look silly in purple sequined jumpsuits. Morris Day, Apollonia, Kim Basinger and Sheila E.

Beanboxer—Through a clerical error in the transference of the Van De Kamps Bean Empire, Claus Van Damme becomes full beneficiary and CEO. He then sets out to stomp the death out of the Campbell's executives who are working on a revolutionary sauce idea.

No Mutha' Whitey—Spike Lee joint about a militant black youth who discovers he is the illegitimate son of Donna Reed. Tense, controversial drama that packs a whallop. Joey Lee, Eddie Murphy and Barbara Billingsly costar with the director.

Blazing Buttballs—Mel Brooks' comedy which takes advantage of the NC-17 rating to bring this madcap parody of a porno film crew during the shooting of a new adult feature. Usual Nazi dance numbers highlight this farcical zanines with a hilarious performance by John Lovitz as "The Putzmeister."

The rancid veal effects have begun to wear off and Zontor grows weak. He promises to return when I can secure more supplies. "Klaatu Barrada Nikto" my friends.

Innerarity wants to score and does in FAMU's win

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

Polly wanna score?

Polly Innerarity center for the Florida A&M women's basketball team, sure wanted to score Thursday night. The 6-foot-2 junior scored 22 points to lead FAMU to a 73-65 win over Miami at Gaither Gym.

FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer was impressed with Innerarity's play, but she still see's room for improvement.

"Polly played a very good game tonight," Farmer said. "She missed a few easy baskets inside, but Polly is definitely headed in the right direction."

The Rattlerettes, 8-5 and 3-1 in the New South Women's Athletic Conference, "really" wanted to come out victorious against the Lady Hurricanes, 8-8 and 2-1, according to Farmer.

"This was just a great win for our program," Farmer said. "I heard the players talking that they really wanted to win this game. They wanted this win more than anything."

It didn't look good at the beginning of the game for FAMU as Miami jumped to a quick 7-2 lead with four minutes gone.

A big concern for Farmer was that her star freshman, Theodora Allen, picked up two fouls in the first two minutes.

"Theodora was just a little slow tonight, she seemed to be just a second off of her usual speed," Farmer said. "She seemed to get out of the flow in the first half, but she also came back to hit some big baskets at the end."

After falling behind 11-8, the Rattlerettes scored eight straight points to take a five point lead with 10 minutes remaining in the first half.

The Lady Hurricanes made a run late in the first half, cutting the lead to one point, but the outside shooting of FAMU's Sherall Bass and Sherrie Barnes spurred the Rattlerettes to a 35-32 halftime lead.

FAMU guard Shelly Boston is second in the nation with a 5.2 steals per game average. She had three last night.

FAMU and Miami battled closely for much of the second half with the Rattlerettes lead wavering between two and four points most of the time.

With 11:45 remaining, however, the Innerarity show began.

Innerarity scored FAMU's next 13 points, helping the Rattlerettes to stretch the lead to as many as eight points at times.

Miami came back to take a 63-61 lead with three minutes remaining, but the Rattlerettes responded with a 10-0 run to put the game away.

The Rattlerettes host Florida International Saturday at 7 p.m. at Gaither Gym.

Streaking Seminoles prepare to take on ranked opponents

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

Sporting a three-game winning streak, Florida State now faces a murderer's row part of it's schedule.

The Seminoles take on No. 21 South Carolina Saturday and return to Tallahassee to meet second-ranked Arakansas on Monday—but that's not the end of it, according to FSU Coach Pat Kennedy.

"We really have a tough four-game stretch," Kennedy said. "After taking on South Carolina and Arkansas, we must go on the road to take on Memphis State and Virginia Tech."

The Seminoles, 8-5 overall and 2-2 in the Metro Conference, travel to Columbia to take on South Carolina, 13-3 and 3-1, Saturday at 1 p.m.

The Gamecocks are off to one of their better starts ever thanks primarily to three players—Jo Jo English, Joe Rhett and Jeff Roulston.

English, a 6-foot-4 junior, leads the Gamecocks with 15.7 points per game.

"English has performed very well at the off-guard position for them," Kennedy said. "He is a very dangerous shooter and is hitting 52 percent of his 3-point attempts."

Rhett, a 6-foot-8 junior, is coming back from a serious heart ailment which sidelined him all of last year. He is playing with a pacemaker. Rhett is averaging 14.3 points and 6.1 rebounds per game, both second best on the team.

"Rhett is very tough on the inside," Kennedy said. "He has been a very steady performer."

Surprisingly, the biggest concern for the Seminoles may be Roulston, the Gamecocks' center. The 7-foot junior is leading the team with 6.6 rebounds per game to go along with his 9.1 points a contest. Roulston was named the Metro Player of the Week last week.

"Roulston has improved tremendously," Kennedy said. "He is blocking shots, rebounding and is even starting to score a lot more."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 18, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You thrive on competition and controversy. A personal decision you make in February will have far-reaching results. New unions will be forged in March and April. Count on your social life to accelerate greatly by May. Conquer a tendency to procrastinate and your career will take a quantum leap next August. Your ability to solve a domestic crisis in November will salvage an important relationship. December will bring long awaited professional recognition!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Cary Grant and Kevin Costner, comedian Danny Kaye, author A.A. Milne.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You receive unexpected good news. Your relationship with a co-worker fluctuates. Putting in longer hours fattens your paycheck, but may jeopardize domestic harmony. Strike a better balance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A close relationship intensifies, two minds think as one. You sense what will happen next. Now is the time to make important connections. Do not take romantic partner for granted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Self reliance gives you the edge. A regretful gesture helps you win back a friend. Heed your instincts tonight. Bowing out of a social event could be a smart move.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A major purchase could have drawbacks. Bow to the feelings of an authority figure. Keep a low profile and protect your reputation. A romantic encounter is best postponed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Meetings with the top brass could lead to progress. Good fortune lies in new business undertakings, especially those involving overseas clients. A personal relationship is tested.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): During an enlightening discussion, you express yourself well. Do not be disturbed if someone disagrees with your conclusions. Time will prove you right! Donate to charity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Big things are developing on the work front. Be alert for a chance to join forces with someone powerful. Real estate is a sound investment now. Greater give-and-take will improve romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your presence is in great demand today. A wish comes true, thanks to close friends or sympathetic higher ups. A personal relationship will benefit from your being more nurturing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A snazzy new outfit may be what you need today. Happily, you enter a period of increased prosperity! Do not be afraid to take some risks. A pet project gets the green light.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Success will come quicker if you are not too aggressive. Let others show their hands first. Although you may underestimate it, there is much at stake. Play your cards close to your vest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get on the inside track by talking with VIPs. A savvy question will help you score important points. Conduct your own research and you will know when to make your move. Socialize tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not get left out of the shuffle at work. Speak up if you want something! A very talented individual wants to be on your team. Welcome this person with open arms.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Saturday, Florida State's women's basketball team takes on Memphis States in a Metro Conference game at Memphis, Tenn. The Lady Seminoles, 10-2 overall and 3-0 in the league, have won five straight. The Lady Tigers are 4-10 and 2-2.

A Run for Children will take place Saturday starting at Dick Howser Stadium. A 1K run for fun begins at 8:30 a.m. and a 5k run begins at 9 a.m. Cash awards will be given to the top three finishers in the 5k run for both the Masters male and female divisions. First place is $125, second place is $75 and third place is $50. There will also be nine different age groups representing all ages. Registration is $6 for the 1K run and $8 for the 5k run, which includes a T-shirt given away upon entrance. For no T-shirt, registration is $2 and $3.

FSU's rowing club meets at 6 p.m. today at room 323 in the new union. Contact Julie Alvarez at 224-3273 for more information.

FAMU guard Darrell Williams gets these two points the easy way

When the Razorbacks come to town Monday at 7 p.m., they will bring a fast-paced, up-and-down-the-court, high-scoring attack. Arkansas is led by its guard tandem of Lee Mayberry and Todd Day.

"When you talk about Mayberry and Day, you're talking about the best backcourt in the nation," Kennedy said. "We will have to slow them down in order to win."

Arkansas also has a tough inside game with center Oliver Miller leading the way.

"If we can neutralize their guards, I think we can neutralize Miller as well," Kennedy said.

"Rodney Dobard and the rest of our inside players will have to be at their best against them."

Charlie Ward, a 6-foot-1 freshman, gets his third start of the season at point guard. It's his play which has led the Seminoles in their current winning streak, according to Kennedy.

"Charlie has been the difference for us," Kennedy said. "He is an explosive point guard who can score and create opportunities for the other players."

One player that has benefited from Ward's play is FSU center Rodney Dobard. Dobard averages 10.1 points and 5.5 rebounds per game since returning from a foot injury.

WAR IN THE GULF

Bush: 'America is angry' about treatment of POWs

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

With U.S.-led forces claiming air superiority in the skies over Iraq, world leaders condemned Monday Saddam Hussein's use of captured pilots as human shields and propaganda tools.

President George Bush urged that the men "be treated properly, that they be given the treatment that is accorded to them under the international conventions. And they are not being (treated properly) and America is angry about this . . ."

With the Persian Gulf war ending its fifth day, U.S. military officials said they were still aggressively trying to pinpoint and destroy Iraq's remaining Scud missile launchers which have attacked Israel and Saudi Arabia. So far those attacks have caused no deaths and little damage.

Air Force Maj. Gen. Burton Moore, briefing reporters in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, said the United States lost another plane—a Navy F-14 Tomcat with two aboard—in recent attacks. So far, nine U.S. planes have been downed with one confirmed dead and 14 missing. Other allied combat losses include five planes and nine missing.

U.S. military officials continued to be very upbeat about the allied successes in the air and the lack of effective Iraqi responses. In his briefing, Moore said another two Iraqi aircraft had been shot down for a total of 17 during 8,100 allied sorties since the war began Thursday morning.

In an interview on Cable News Network, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Saddam has "been unable to do very much because we've in effect established

Some local Jews say Israel should retaliate against Iraq

BY AMY ELLERSON
STAFF WRITER

Scott Wayne, director of the Florida State University Jewish Student Union, says he'd like to see Israel "get involved in the (Persian Gulf) war and bomb the hell out of Iraq."

According to Wayne, Israel has the right to retaliate against Iraq for launching two missile attacks on the country last week without provocation.

"I think they should have attacked in full force after the first attack, even with nuclear weapons. Israel was just a bystander," Wayne said Monday evening. "It's just not fair that the citizens of Israel have to be walking around with gas masks when they're not even in the war."

Many Jews in Tallahassee have friends and relatives in Israel, and they reacted with shock and dismay to news of Iraq's missile attacks over the past few days. But their views on the situation varied considerably.

Wayne said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is trying to draw Israel into the war so that he can link it to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The U.S.-led coalition against Iraq is made up of many Arab nations. Some fear that if Israel enters in to the war against Iraq, the coalition's Arab members will join forces with Hussein.

But Wayne said the war is not a "Palestinian issue."

"(Hussein) did not take over Kuwait for the Palestinians. He took it over for his own greedy purposes," Wayne said. "Saddam Hussein needs to be killed and his followers need to be killed, because that's the only way this is going to be put down."

> 'I want them to stay out of it even if they get racked a couple of times, because I don't want to see the coalition jeopardized.'
> —Erwin Cohen

But not all agreed with Wayne's assessment.

Erwin Cohen, an FSU parent visiting from Orlando, said Israel should stay out of the war.

"I want them to stay out of it even if they get racked a couple of times, because I don't want to see the coalition jeopardized," Cohen said. "It would be best for Israel in the long run to let the coalition fight the Iraqis."

Mark Resnick, a recent FSU graduate in philosophy, also pointed to the coalition as reason enough for Israel to stay out of the war.

"It would be too dangerous for Israel to react without the cooperation of the coalition. But that's not to say Israel shouldn't get its best reward for being attacked," Resnick said.

He added that if the coalition's Arab partners turn against Israel, they should be banned from the coalition and "placed in the same batch as Saddam Hussein."

FSU junior Stacy Martin said she also feels that Israel should stay out of the war. She fears that if Israel were to enter into the coalition and split the organization apart, World War III could erupt.

But Martin said Israel has a right to retaliate against Iraq.

"They have not been involved in anything over the last five months. They're innocent, basically," she said. "I have a lot of respect for them holding back so far."

Jonathan Lyons, a substitute teacher in Tallahassee, agreed. He would like to see Israel "flatten Iraq."

"Any nation that fails to protect its own people is negligent to its citizens," Lyons said.

He added that the U.S. is responsible for the Iraqi attacks on Israel since Saddam warned he would try to draw Israel into the conflict.

"I feel it was stupidity and shortsidedness on the part of our government," Lyons said. "I feel Israel will react to the cries of their people if more lives are lost."

Steven Mindlin, president of the Shamrei Torah congregation in Tallahassee, said he is surprised that Israel did not retaliate.

Student supreme court to decide CPE catalog issue

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University Center For Participant Education Director Kelly Peters has decided to let the Student Supreme Court decide whether Student Body President Trey Traviesa can stop printing of the group's catalog.

CPE filed charges Saturday against Traviesa, who blocked printing of the catalog because it features a Courbet picture of a naked woman and a Mapplethorpe photo of a black man dressed in a suit with his genitals exposed.

Some students reportedly complained about the pictures, and printing at the Tallahassee Democrat was stopped last week after a phone call by the SG comptroller's office.

"Trey is overstepping [his] jurisdiction once again," Peters said Monday. "It's the senate's job to decide whether or not to freeze a student agency budget or carry out a line-item freeze, and they can only do that when there has been a violation of the finance code. Trey has no case."

Traviesa could not be reached for comment Monday.

Local vets feel for troops stationed in Persian Gulf

BY KRIS ELVIN
STAFF WRITER

Mark Loeffler spent four years in the Navy during the Vietnam War and another 15 putting his life back together.

Now, he hopes the troops fighting in the Middle East won't have to go through what he did.

"I think Bush is trigger happy and we don't belong there," he said. "I fought my own war and I don't want to fight another."

Loeffler said Vietnam was a nightmare for him for 17 years.

"We lost too many brothers and sisters in Vietnam. . . . It still upsets me," he said crying.

While Loeffler is against the war, opinions on whether the U.S. is doing the right thing in the Persian Gulf seem evenly split among local veterans. But almost all interviewed said they fully support the men and women stationed there.

"I'm totally 100-percent committed to the troops," said Chaplain Bob Flanagan of American Legion Post No. 13. "As far as whether or not going to war is right or wrong, I can't make a decision because I don't have all the information available to the president."

Flanagan said that although he is not necessarily in favor of military action as a solution to all conflicts, he knew the crisis in the Middle East would inevitably escalate into war.

"I would think that once you exhaust all diplomatic options, that there's probably no other choice but to go to war," said the Vietnam-era vet.

The overwhelming support of troop members in the Middle East echoes some of the anger by vets who were treated badly after coming home from Vietnam.

Many of the vets also said Congress should allow the military almost free rein in the Gulf war.

"(Legislators) need to let the Army do what it does and not hold them back like in Vietnam," said Post 13 Commander Robert Van Alstine, a Vietnam vet.

Alstine said people in his organization seem to have differing opinions about the conflict, although the state commander has come out officially in favor of Bush's policies.

"It's kind of a mixed feeling," he said. "A lot of them feel we shouldn't be over there but since we are, a lot of them feel we need to let the Army do what they need to do."

Middle East.

"War doesn't work," he said. "War doesn't solve any problems. War is a failure of policy."

Deaton said the U.S. could do more to conserve energy, instead of relying on foreign oil and the benevolence of Middle Eastern rulers.

"We needn't resort to war. We needn't be blackmailed by anybody in terms of controlling the international oil," he said.

Economics was the No. 1 reason cited by vets who supported sending the military to the Persian Gulf. Orvie Jones, who served in both the Korean and Vietnam wars, said the economic backlash Saddam Hussein created when he invaded Kuwait could hurt the entire world.

"It's more than the oil," he said. "The economic condition of the world depends upon the oil in that area, and if it gets into the hands of someone like Saddam Hussein then the entire world's economic situation would probably hurt."

Others downplay the idea of a world oil crisis. Florida State University Associate Professor Bill Brubaker, who is a Korean War-era veteran, said there is no real oil shortage and that innocent troops should not pay the price for bureaucratic bickering.

"I'd love for President Bush and Saddam Hussein to duke it out on the sands in a private conflict," he said.

Merv Libby, who served in the Special Forces during Vietnam, remembers the horror of war while sitting at the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial.

Merv Libby, a Special Forces Vietnam vet and a member of the Tallahassee Peace Coalition, said although he is critical of Bush's policies he supports the American troops.

"I'm 100 percent, 1,000 percent, for our troops—I'm just not sure our leadership is doing the right thing," he said.

Libby said that when he went to Vietnam, serving in the military was the patriotic thing to do—he didn't question the reasons behind the war. Now, he says politicians are not as quick to commit American troops to war because of the fallout over Vietnam.

"At least now we're questioning the validity (of war) a lot more than we did in the past," Libby said.

The overwhelming support of troop members in the Middle East echoes some of the anger by vets who were treated badly after coming home from Vietnam. Those who served in the military emphasized that the men and women in the Gulf are human.

Rick Clevenger, president of the Vietnam Veterans Big Bend Chapter 96 and an infantry member who was stationed in Quan Loi, said that like civilians, the troops in the Middle East probably have mixed feelings about the war.

"There's got to be a lot of people who are ready to kick ass and there's got to be a lot of people who are scared s—less," he said.

Hard choice, good move

Israel made a surprisingly selfless move over the weekend by not retaliating after Iraqi missiles hit civilian targets in several Israeli cities.

For that, the world owes Israel its gratitude.

A retaliation would have been justified. Millions saw the fear generated by the missiles on television, with reporters donning gas masks while sirens wailed in the background. A handful of Israelis were injured, and several suffocated from improperly using their masks. That the damage wasn't greater is a miracle. Had the missiles carried chemical warheads, or exploded in more populated metropolitan centers, it easily could have been.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ordered the unprovoked and brutal attack in hopes of drawing the Jewish state into the war, thus straining the coalition united against Iraq. Arab states allied with the U.S.—already uncomfortable with that situation—would think twice about fighting alongside Israel against a sister Arab state. Worse, some Arab states could even side with Iraq and dangerously widen the war.

But Israel didn't take the bait. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir showed great courage in restraining Israel's air force despite tremendous domestic pressure.

There were probably some practical considerations behind his decision. An air attack on Israel's part would have done little good considering the pummeling already underway by U.S.-led forces. And if the war did widen as a result of Israeli participation, the country would stand to lose more than just a handful of its citizens.

Still, the idea of retalitiating must have been a hard one to put down. By swallowing its pride, Israel showed good judgment and great strength.

Whether Israel can continue to exercise restraint is a different matter. Should Iraq attack again, and that prospect seems likely, retaliatory action seems certain. Where that could lead is anyone's guess.

Hopefully, Israel will carefully consider the consequences as much as it has so far.

False advertising

Editor:

My first reaction to the flier from the Center for Professional Development (CPD), advertising HUM 3930r, was that its title "Masterpieces of Freedom" is an oxymoron second only to Doonesbury's "holy war," the "grandaddy of oxymorons."

"A masterpiece" is defined on the flier by Professor Laurin Wollan as "any supreme accomplishment from a book to a piece of art which engages us ... It challenges us to see and understand what the human mind, heart, and spirit have done and to aspire to such standards ourselves."

Human mind, heart, and spirit? The list of works to be studied in the course ranges from Sophocles' Antigone through Polybius' The Histories, Shakespeare's Julius Ceasar, Racine's Bernice, Milton's Aeropagitica, Locke's Treatise on Civil Affair, Adam Smith's The Wealth of Nations and the Bill of Rights. All white-male-authored texts. (And, as far as I can tell, to be taught by white males, with the one exception of a token woman.) Presumably, those of us who aren't Caucasian or male are, once again, to be conned into accepting masculinist ideologies as "universal" human values.

And are we to assume that the "masters" are still, especially after the eras of American liberation movements, in a position to define "freedom"? What about the voices of women, African-Americans and other "Others"? Are they once again to be silenced and marginalized? It might be well for students to know that *mistress*pieces and *slave*pieces also define freedom, often in ways subversive to the "master" narratives. Or are Virginia Woolf's A Room of One's Own and Martin Luther King's Letter from Birmingham Jail, for example, perhaps not in the category of "supreme accomplishment"? For what reasons and by whose criteria?

As a professor of feminism, gender theory and women-authored texts, I am certainly not about to censor anyone's right to select, however exclusively, course material and ideologies. And I recognize from the list of course instructors colleagues and ideological contexts, hence rejecting any notion of universalism. Thus, I presume that students will come away from the lectures with at least some awareness of the restricted scope and significance of the term "freedom" as it is defined in these texts, certainly less than "human" or universal.

The most I can ask, I guess, is truth in advertising. Perhaps the CPD could see its way to dropping the ambiguous and misleading term "masterpieces" in future courses of this ilk. "Male-authored Literature"—like "Women in Literature" or "African-American Literature"—would seem to be more definitive and less hegemonic.

Woefully mistaken

Editor:

In view of the current, drastic budget cuts that are affecting the State University System, we may certainly expect to find efforts toward a reappraisal of the role of state universities on the part of our new administration as well as the legislature. This may or may not be a good thing. Recently there have been hints that Florida's universities—at least FSU and UF—might at last burst their bonds of mediocrity and attain genuine national stature. I hasten to add that this does not mean that in many respects FSU and UF are not nationally competitive institutions, but I do mean that we are fooling ourselves if we believe our universities are on a par with schools such as Berkeley or the University of Virginia). Academic excellence requires money, however, and that is in short supply. It also requires an institutional expectation of academic excellence, both in the classroom and in research—and in fact this attitude may ultimately be more important than money.

Which is why I read with some dismay the recent piece by Browning Brooks entitled "Students share ideas with Chiles" (Democrat, Jan. 14,). In that article it was reported that Chiles wants to "root out inefficiencies that steal from teaching," to use the governor's words, a laudable goal if properly understood. But if by this is meant the elimination of opportunities for research, that is, if the governor (like so many Floridians, alas) believes good teaching is to be equated with a heavy teaching load that obstructs research, this is rather a dangerous mentality. Classroom teaching, though it is the responsibility of a professor most obvious to the public and especially to students and parents, represents only a fraction of the effort and industry required for truly good teaching. It is little use if a professor teaches all day long if what he has to say is poorly informed or if his intellectual skills have been blunted by inactivity. If a student's education is to be worthwhile, his lecturers must be thoroughly up-to-date and indeed on the cutting edge of scholarship. Otherwise what one has is a degree mill, an academic factory whose function is to churn out student bodies tagged and labeled with some meaningless certification.

Brooks' article concludes by citing Chiles' view that Florida's universities are elitist, an assertion so patently absurd that I find it difficult to believe the governor actually made it. And he goes on to say of higher education in Florida that "we have to determine who our customer is—and right now, it's not our students." If by this the governor means that Florida's universities could be doing a better job of educating the state's young men and women – and serving future of the state at large—he is right. We need desperately to open our universities to more and more students; we also need desperately to give our students a more challenging and rigorous academic experience (which may actually mean that fewer of them finish, or at least fewer of them finish in four years, but these are other issues). But if the governor believes that students are best served by jettisoning research and scholarship, that is, by gutting quality, he is woefully mistaken.

SOFIA, Bulgaria—Bulgarian security agents Monday overpowered a man who commandeered a Soviet airliner by claiming to be carrying a bomb, making a peaceful end to a hijacking that endangered more than 160 passengers and crew, officials said.

Security officials at the airport in Bourgas said the hijacker had hoped to reach Turkey and was subdued when he opened the door of the Aeroflot aircraft after being convinced the plane had landed in the Turkish city of Istanbul.

The carton with which he threatened to blow up the aircraft actually contained bottles of an unidentified scented liquid, believed to be aftershave lotion, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Mincho Ninchov, the director of the Bourgas airport, and Jordan Ornankov, a spokesperson for the Bulgarian Interior Ministry in Sofia, confirmed that security forces concluded the hijacking without violence and that the suspect was in custody.

"The security forces intervened but did not use firearms," said Ornankov, declining to give further details.

The suspect is expected to be extradited to the Soviet Union.

WASHINGTON—As combat continued in the Persian Gulf, Americans on the homefront paused Monday to remember the nation's foremost apostle of non-violence, Martin Luther King. But the war was never far from mind.

Across the nation, federal and most state offices—with some exceptions, such as New Hampshire and Arizona—were closed. Prayer breakfasts, vigils and small memorial marches were held in numerous communities.

Coretta Scott King widow of the civil rights' martyr set the tone for many of the gatherings when she opened weekend observances to a capacity crowd of 700 people Sunday at King's old pastorate, Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta.

In a "State of the Dream" speech, Mrs. King reaffirmed her late husband's plea for a world where ambassadors, not missiles, settle international disputes.

And, as he spoke out against the war in Vietnam, then sapping energy from the struggle for civil rights, Mrs. King criticized the Persian Gulf war, which is diverting resources for the fight against poverty and racism.

"Let us be clear that we are not fighting for democracy, for there is no genuine democracy in the Persian Gulf," Mrs. King said. "This war is yet another misguided attempt to make the United States the world's policeman."

At the same time, King praised Israel for its restraint in not militarily responding to Iraqi missile attacks.

"It takes courage and wisdom to refuse to be sucked into the cycle of retaliation, and I hope and pray that Israel will be able to continue to exercise restraint," she said.

BRISTOL, R.I.—The manager of a Domino's Pizza shop allegedly went too far with the company motto "nobody delivers better."

Arthur Singleton, 26, of East Providence was arrested Saturday night on charges he dealt marijuana out of the shop and even had bags of the drugs brought to customers' doors.

"According to our information, some people would call up and actually order marijuana over the phone with Singleton and he would put marijuana in the pizza boxes and have it delivered," Detective Lt. Terrence Mullen said.

"Our information is that one of the reasons he was selling marijuana is that he wanted to purchase the Domino's store," Mullen said.

Singleton was charged with possessing marijuana with intent to deliver and distributing marijuana to a minor. The latter charge carries a sentence of 15 years to life in prison and a fine of up to $500,000, police said.

Richardson wins FSU's King Distinguished Scholar Award

Dr. Joe M. Richardson, a professor of history, received the 1991 Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Distinguished Scholar Award at a Jan. 18 luncheon.

The award is presented each year, in conjunction with the annual convocation at FSU honoring King's birthday, to a faculty member for outstanding service to students and the university in keeping with the ideals of the late civil rights leader.

Richardson

Last year Richardson won FSU Excellence in Teaching awards at the college and university levels. He also has received Outstanding Teacher awards from Phi Eta Sigma (1990) and Phi Alpha Theta (1968).

The Missouri native has written numerous articles and books on African-American history, and serves on the board of editors of Florida Historical Quarterly and Explorations of Ethnic Studies.

Richardson, 56, has been on the FSU faculty since 1964, first as an assistant professor, 1964-68; then as an associate professor, 1968-71; and as a full professor since 1971. He earned his M.A. in 1959 and Ph.D. in 1963, both at FSU, and did postdoctoral work at Johns Hopkins University in 1968. He completed his B.A. degree in 1958 at Southwest Missouri State.

He has served on several departmental and universitywide panels, including the Committee on Minority Students, Multicultural Screening Committee, Foundation Grants Advisory Committee and University Library Committee.

Lt. Ron Baxley named FSU's top cop

Lt. Ron Baxley has been selected by his peers as Florida State University Police Department "Officer of the Year" for 1990-91.

Baxley, 47, serves as a uniform operations commander and has completed 25 years of university police service. He also is working on a degree in criminology at FSU.

Currently, Baxley is serving with the U.S. Army 160th Military Police Unit in Saudi Arabia.

In presenting the award, University Police Chief William Tanner said Baxley "possesses those qualities of professionalism which have significantly contributed to the accomplishment of the department. His dedication and loyalty are exemplified in the performance of his duties and responsibilities."

New dean of students appointed at Florida State University

Dr. Barbara M. Varchol has been appointed dean of students at Florida State University.

FSU Vice President for Student Affairs Jon Dalton said when announcing the appointment, "So many people were impressed with Dr. Varchol's extensive experience in student affairs administration at several universities, her commitment to student development and her enthusiasm."

Before coming to FSU, Varchol had served as assistant dean of students at Indiana University since 1984, and prior to that as the dean for student affairs at Vanderbilt University for five years. She served as an adjunct professor of education at both institutions. She also was dean of student personnel services for four years and dean of women for two years at Kutztown College in Pennsylvania, and assistant dean of students at George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn., for two years.

She is a graduate of Trenton (N.J.) State College (B.S., English, Speech and Theater, 1961) and of Indiana (M.S., Student Personnel, 1964; Ed.D., Higher Education, 1971).

"I was particularly impressed with her leadership role in the development of Indiana University's new code of ethics and that institution's orientation course on ethics and values," Dalton said.

In the FSU Dean of Students Office, Varchol directs programs including Activities and Organizations, Orientation, Women's Concerns, the Center for Alcohol and Drug Education, Disabled Student Services, Judicial Affairs, International Student Services and Programs, Leadership Training, Veterans Affairs, Non-Traditional Student Services and the Withdrawal Office.

Varchol, 50, replaces Dr. James Hayes, who had served as FSU dean of students since 1979. He is now dean of students at Herkimer County Community College in Herkimer, N.Y.

Georgia civic leader to receive honorary doctorate from FSU

Georgia businesswoman and historical preservation advocate Marguerite Neel Williams will be presented an honorary doctorate of humane letters from Florida State University on Wednesday, Jan. 23.

Williams will be honored for her lifelong contributions as a civic leader, preservationist, arts patron and friend of FSU during a ceremony at 2:30 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. A public reception will follow in the Beth Moor Lounge, Longmire Building.

The Thomasville resident is the widow of Thomas Lyle Williams Jr., who was president of the Maybelline Co., which was founded by Thomas Sr. in 1917.

Williams volunteered in numerous congressional and presidential campaigns. She was a delegate to the first Republican National Conference for Women in 1953 and to the 1976 Republican National Convention.

Williams has been recognized for her historical preservation work by the Georgia Trust for Historic Preservation and the Thomasville-Thomas County Chamber of Commerce, which named her "Woman of the Year" in 1976. She is chairman emeritus of the Thomasville Cultural Center and a member of the U.S. Department of State Fine Arts Committee. She also is a trustee of the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

A longtime friend of the university, she made a gift in honor of her late husband to establish the Thomas Lyle Williams Jr. Eminent Scholar Chair in Management Information Systems in the FSU College of Business in 1982. Williams has been a Golden Chief, and a member of the FSU Foundation Investment Committee and the University Center Advance Team at FSU.

Her son, Thomas III, is currently president of FSU's Seminole Boosters.

Military family crisis service wins grant

Dr. Charles Figley, a Vietnam combat veteran and nationally known expert in stress and traumatology, has received a Vietnam Veterans Aid Foundation grant to help support a Florida State University counseling center for military families in crisis.

The Los Angeles-based VVAF has provided a $25,000 grant for the project.

Figley, a psychologist and professor of social work who directs the FSU Marriage and Family Therapy Center, set up the free counseling service in December for families of military personnel stationed in the Middle East.

"These families are now experiencing what Vietnam vet families experienced during the mid-1960s — double stress," Figley said. "First, they had to deal with the stress of having a family member in a war zone. Second, they had to deal with people opposed to the war while viewing them as part of the problem."

Figley explained that his counselors are utilizing lessons learned about stress resulting from the Vietnam War and other stressful events.

"By providing this program, we hope to develop the most effective methods possible to help these families and disseminate our findings to other professionals interested in helping this population," he said.

Figley noted that no free, ongoing psychosocial services designed to specifically meet the needs of Desert Sword families — many facing problems never incurred before by military families, such as both parents being called to active duty and severe drops in family income — have been available until now.

Besides granting more than $130,000 to veterans service organizations around the country, the VVAF also has created the Veteran Support Bracelet to raise funds for the programs.

For additional information call the VVAF at 800-366-8823 or the FSU Marriage and Family Therapy Center at 904-644-1588.

FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY PATENT SEMINAR

Learn the dos and don'ts of patenting your inventions as Dr. Mike Devine, associate vice president for research at Florida State University, presents "FSU Patent Policy and Procedures." The seminar begins at 3 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 22 in the Supercomputer Computations Research Institute Seminar Room in the Dirac Science Library.

The seminar will cover such topics as the benefits of patenting inventions, the basics of patent law and FSU patenting procedure.

UNIVERSITY TEACHING & ADVISING AWARDS

Wednesday, Jan. 23 is the deadline for students to nominate their favorite teacher or adviser for one of the University Teaching and Advising Awards to be presented during Spring Honors Week.

The awards recognize excellence in undergraduate teaching and advising and are funded by the Florida Legislature.

Nomination forms, available in all departmental and dean's offices, should be sent to: University Teaching and Advising Awards Committee, President's Office R-10, 211 Westcott Building, Florida State University, Tallahassee, Florida 32306.

1991 DISTINGUISHED PROFESSOR AWARD

Nominations for the Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor award should be received by Friday, March 1, 1991. The address is: Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor Committee, Office of the President, 211 Westcott.

Nominations should come from individual faculty members, not from departments, schools or colleges, or other administrative units.

Nominations should be accompanied by complete curriculum vitae, evidence of scholarly excellence such as copies of major reviews or current publications and letters of recommendation from individuals both within and outside the University. It is important to emphasize the national and/or international reputation of the nominee.

Nominations received from faculty members from the previous year will be reconsidered automatically, but supporting materials should be updated.

The Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor is chosen from the ranks of those teaching at Florida State University. The screening committee will make its recommendations on the basis of major contributions to teaching, research or creative endeavors, which have been made by the faculty member during his/her career at Florida State University.

To be eligible for this award, the faculty member must be a tenured professor, have been at the University for at least 10 years, and above all, have achieved true distinction in his/her discipline or profession. Although scholarly distinction is the primary qualification, evidence of quality teaching (including the directing of graduate research and service to the University and the academic community at large) should be emphasized.

The Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor Committee will consider the nominations and make its recommendations to the President, who will appoint the Distinguished Professor.

air superiority over Iraq. We've done a significant amount of damage to his strategic military capability. We're continuing to do that and now we're beginning to work on his forces inside Kuwait itself."

Cheney also said he was convinced the allies "had a very significant impact" on Saddam's capability to produce nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. But he would not say the task—one of the prime early objectives of the U.S. forces—was complete until he could see all the information.

The mood among the military men and women on the ground in Saudi Arabia was equally optimistic, especially after the continued success of U.S. Patriot missiles at shooting down incoming Scud rockets.

"We picked 'em up and knocked them out of the skies," said 1st Lt. Quinton McCorvey, 26, of Pensacola, a former strong safety on the Alabama A&M football team. "Actually, I knocked it down. I'm a former athlete, so I've definitely been on some highs. But last night took me quite high."

"Biggest interception of his life," added Capt. Joe Deantona, 28, of Scranton, Pa.

But the enthusiasm over the war effort was dampened by Iraq's use of captured allied pilots—first by parading seven of them on Iraqi television to give probably forced statements and then by announcing they would be used as human shields presumably at nuclear and chemical plant sites.

"Because the scientific and civilian centers are being targeted by the hostile air forces, it has been decided to deploy the captured enemy pilots, who number more than 20, around such centers," an Iraqi spokesperson said in a Baghdad Radio dispatch monitored in Cairo.

U.S. and other leaders immediately protested the threat as a war crime and a violation of accords signed in Geneva on the treatment of prisoners of war.

British Prime Minister John Major told the House of Commons, "such action would be inhuman, illegal and totally contrary to the Third Geneva Convention."

The French Foreign Ministry proclaimed "indignation" over the act and called in the Iraqi ambassador to lodge an official protest.

Expressing deep anger, Bush said Saddam's threat would not change the U.S. conduct of the war. "I've said that when he brutally held hostages that numbered up into the thousands and it's not going to make a difference," Bush said.

"The fact that Israel took at least one hit and has not yet retaliated shows a tremendous amount of strength and sensitivity," Mindlin said. "Hussein is trying to turn this into an Israeli-Arab war by drawing Israel into it . . . and so far Israel has not taken the bait."

Wayne said the Tallahassee Police Department recently told him it was concerned about bomb threats against the Jewish Student Union. Although Wayne is not very worried about terrorism on the local level, he is concerned about international terrorism.

"The Jewish people don't go off the deep end like the Arabs do . . . and threaten to kill innocent people. We are a more humane culture than the Arabs are. Some of them are real evil," Wayne said, adding that his views are not necessarily those of the JSU.

Stanley Garfein, the rabbi at Tallahassee's Temple Israel, said the synagogue has increased security to guard against possible bomb threats and vandalism.

The Supreme Court will decide whether to grant CPE's request that Traviesa "desist from all activities" that would prevent printing of the 14,000 catalogs, according to CPE's counsel, Michael Greif.

"We're asking Trey to do his duty under the laws of the (SG) constitution," said Greif, former president of the student chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. "There are no legal grounds for him to do what he is doing. He's taking action on his opinions, but he doesn't have the necessary power to execute those opinions."

SG Attorney General George Fernandez, who will represent Traviesa, said the student body president has the power to supervise student agencies.

Fernandez said "there are other problems concerning the procedure in printing the catalog," but he didn't know any specifics because he hadn't studied the case yet.

If the court rules in favor of CPE, printing of the 64-page catalogs will continue.

As of press time Monday, a hearing date hadn't been set. But one supreme court justice said it might take place today. CPE has requested the hearing be held as soon as possible so the catalog, originally scheduled to come out Jan. 17, won't be delayed any longer.

Traviesa has scheduled a five-member student committee to convene today to determine if the controversial pictures should be printed.

Djar Horn, director of the FSU Women's Center, will sit on the committee. She opposes the pictures because, she said, they perpetuate myths about two traditionally oppressed groups, blacks and women. But she said CPE, not SG, should take the responsibility for the printing.

"It's hard enough fighting sexism and racism," said Horn. "I think it's irresponsible for them to run those pictures. They could have chosen other groups if they want to prove their point . . . (But) as a committee we should let CPE take the backlash of the pictures. It shouldn't be up to student government to decide.

"With freedom of speech comes the need to be sensitive to other peoples."

Swifty robbed . . . again

The Suwanee Swifty store at 3618 Apalachee Parkway was robbed Sunday night—the second such robbery in two weeks.

The similarity between this and another robbery at the same location Jan. 8 suggests that the two crimes were committed by the same people, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson said Monday.

"It does happen quite a lot that the same store will be hit twice or three times," Simpson said.

In both instances, two men entered the store, one walked to the register as if to purchase something, pulled a handgun and took money from the cash register.

David Green Jr., a Suwanee Swifty employee, was working behind the counter during the Jan. 8 incident. He believes that both robberies were committed by the same men.

"This time sounded exactly like the other time. I believe it is the same people," Green said.

There haven't been any arrests for either incident.

Man shot in both legs

A man was shot and robbed Saturday night outside Monroe's Poolroom at 421 N. Macomb Street in Frenchtown, Kiracofe said.

The victim was approached by two men, one of whom was carrying a handgun, at 7:05 Saturday night. The assailants demanded his money, but before the man could give them all of it, he was shot once in each leg, Kiracofe said.

The victim was taken to Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center and treated for his wounds.

Police have descriptions of the men, but no arrests have been made.

Apartment robbery

Three armed men broke into an apartment at 1614 McCaskill Street Saturday and tied up the residents and stole a gun, Kiracofe said.

The two people in the apartment, a 22-year-old woman and a 17-year-old boy, answered a knock on the door when three armed men entered the apartment.

The two victims were taken into a bedroom and tied up with electrical wire. The three men took a watch, some other jewelry, and a .380 caliber pistol. The three men then left the apartment, Kiracofe said.

The suspects are believed to be driving a grey 1986 Nissan Maxima with tinted windows and a temporary tag, Kiracofe said. The victims gave police descriptions of the three suspects, but no arrests have been made.

Parrotheads to waste away at Buffett's Margaritaville tonight

BY KEITH TRALINS
STAFF WRITER

Florida's troubadour has arrived.

Tonight at 8, Jimmy Buffett—the king of good times—brings his offerings to the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center.

In these turbulent times, Buffett has become a panacea for troubled minds.

"I think he's a fantastic entertainer," said Nicole Fleisher, a senior at Florida State University. "I chill out to his music. I think that he's an incentive for non-stressful life without ulcers."

Buffet acknowledges his latent relaxation power on the inside cover of his latest album, Feeding Frenzy.

"As the cards have fallen I see myself playing the jester to the light speed court of current events," writes Buffett.

Born on Christmas Day, 1946, in Mobile, Ala., Buffett spent the earlier part of his life in the deep South. After traveling around and experimenting, Buffett moved to the Florida Keys in 1972 and has never looked back.

Musically, Buffett has become both a chart success and a party success with his songs, "Cheeseburger In Paradise," "Margaritaville" and "Volcano," along with a list of other successes. Buffett has also topped the New York Times Best Sellers list with his Tales From Margaritaville, an anthology of short stories that contained "fictional facts and factual fictions."

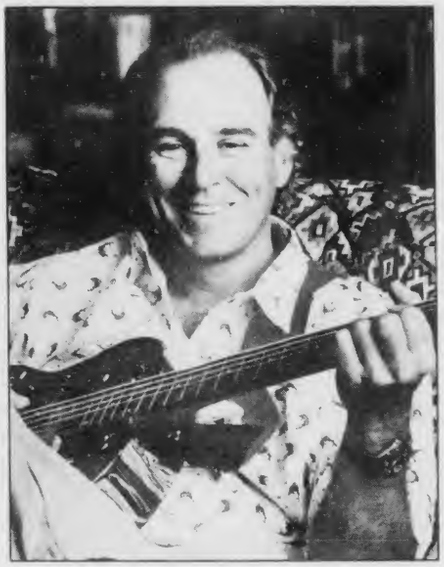
Buffett is on the Billboard charts with Feeding Frenzy, a live album that will probably resemble tonight's concert. It's his first live album in 13 years.

Through it all, Buffett's fans (or Parrotheads) have stuck with him, enjoying his music for what it is.

"It's kick-back, relaxing music," said Jill Kneeland, a freshman at FSU.

But Kneeland does have a complaint about tonight's concert.

"His music reminds me of the Keys," she said. "I think that his concert should be outside, by the water or in a park, with people in bathing suits and shorts, not inside the civic center."



Jimmy Buffett

Still, people in Tallahassee are getting ready to enjoy Jimmy Buffett any way they can. Several local clubs and bars are having pre-concert parties. Whatever the preparation, Tallahasseans will show up in force tonight to forget about life for a while and hear the volcano blow.

Jimmy Buffett plays tonight at 8 at the Civic Center. For more information call 487-1691.

Ebony fashion show brings scholarship money to FAMU

BY BERNARD GRAHAM
STAFF WRITER

The catchword for the 33rd Annual Ebony Fashion Fair is uniqueness.

"It is the most professional fashion show in America," said Bernard Hendricks, director of student activities at Florida A&M University and co-chair for the fashion show. "To have a show of that prestige and of that nature to come to this community is unique."

The Ebony Fashion Fair, with all of its style, flair and finesse, hits town tonight at FAMU's Charles Winter Wood Theatre. The traveling fashion show has long been a must-see for many people.

The show is coordinated by Ebony magazine and directed by Eunice W. Johnson, wife of Ebony's chief executive officer and publisher, John H. Johnson.

The fashion fair has excited the crowd at FAMU for more than 20 years, Hendricks said.

The show features ten female models and two male models displaying more than 200 fabulous designs accompanied with an array of fascinating accessories. The garments are designed by such well-known designers as Yves Saint Laurent, Bob Mackie and Christian Dior.

> 'It is the most professional show in America.' —Bernard Hendricks

The wardrobe of fashions are breathtaking and exciting, according to co-chair Carolyn Bullard.

"If you could go backstage, and right at that moment buy it, you probably would," said Bullard, a telecommunication services specialist at FAMU. "Some of the more conservative elegant dresses I would love to put on and wear during an evening out."

Not only will the audience be dazzled by the beauty, elegance and professionalism of the fashion fair, but proceeds from the show will benefit FAMU students.

Each organization or individual that sells 100 tickets to the program will receive a $250 scholarship to award to any student. For each additional 100 tickets sold, another $250 scholarship will be given.

Organizations and individuals selling 50 tickets will receive $100 scholarships.

Hendricks said that last year four $250 scholarships were given and five $100 scholarships were awarded by FAMU's student government association.

A sellout is expected, according to Hendricks. He said the show should leave the audience pleased.

"People who enjoy modeling and fashions will get their money's worth," Hendricks said. "Every model will give you an air of ahh and ooh."

Tickets for tonight's Ebony Fashion Fair are $12 for students and $20 for others. Tickets can be purchased at the FAMU Office of Student Activities or call 599-3400. The program is at 8 p.m. at FAMU's Charles Winter Wood Theatre.

Vincent and Theo: a film of rare emotion and humanity

BY FRANK YOUNG
STAFF WRITER

Robert Altman begins his film Vincent and Theo with a scene of heartbreaking, deeply ironic closure, drawn from real life. We see the record-breaking Christie's auction in which one of Vincent Van Gogh's oil paintings of sunflowers is calmly, casually touted for over 19 million pounds. It's documentary proof of that classic observation that our greatest artists are rarely hailed while they're alive. It would have been beyond Van Gogh's wildest dreams—or concerns—to have his work demand even a fraction of that outrageous price.

Any other filmmaker might have made this scene their emotional and symbolic thesis-statement. Altman merely presents it as the cold, hard truth. And though the minutae of a person's life can't be captured in a biography with complete veracity, Altman's film tries to get as close to the truth as it can.

He isn't interested in following the old tack of romanticizing art and artists. This is one of the most complete, satisfying and down-to-earth movies ever made about the fragile, evasive nature of art. It's also the finest piece of filmmaking Altman has done since the 1970s.

In pursuing a double-biography of Vincent Van Gogh and his younger brother Theo, Altman and screenwriter Julian Mitchell succeed in walking a perilously thin line between two distant, yet equally tormented, personalities. This film has a sharp edge of life; few of its characters are embodiments or cliches.

As the film opens, Altman segues from the harshly captured document of the auction—filmed straight off the TV screen—to an early, decisive moment in the lives of the Van Gogh brothers, in which the lines of their separate existences are drawn. Altman keeps the auctioneer's jaded drone, as the bids grow in size, in the background of this first fictionalized scene: a keen touch that gradually guides us into the director's vast, tangible filmic world.

At first, Vincent and Theo could not be less alike, and their mutual empathy is slender. Vincent (played with great force and originality by Tim Roth) is an intractable, rebellious bohemian, casting aside his family's civil aspirations for the squalor of the artist's garret. His face and clothes are smeared with filth, and his brown teeth defiantly chew on a battered pipe.

Theo (Paul Rhys) is the perfect picture of the bourgeois: immaculately dressed, disdainful of anything that falls beyond social conventions. Although it's his money that finances his brother's mad desire to paint, Theo can't conceal his disgust with the world his brother has chosen, nor his exasperation with Vincent's stubborness.

Paul Rhys (Theo) and Tim Roth (Vincent) star in Vincent and Theo, an original portrait of the brothers Van Gogh, by Robert Altman.

Yet there is a great deal of love between the brothers, and Altman's film is a celebration of that love. For behind their separate facades, the two Van Goghs are much alike.

Theo is as uncomfortable in the repressive, mannered society of the late 1800s as his brother. Working as a floorman in a Paris art gallery, Theo is unable to market Vincent's raw, unprecedented work to his customers, who only want art that conforms to standards of realism. Theo has only contempt for these placid works of decoration, and he comes to see the rage and passion of Vincent's hand as the work of genius.

He still finds Vincent's confrontational, irresponsible behavior agonizing; even the brothers' closest moments are marked by discord.

The brothers' physical lives drift in and out of contact, but through the brief passage of years, they become irrevocably bonded in spirit. Vincent's wanderings take him from Antwerp to Paris to Arles, where he slowly loses his tenuous hold on sanity while rooming with his equally brilliant artist-friend, Paul Gaugin (beautifully played by Wladimir Yordanoff.)

Theo is made manager of one of the gallery's branch offices, and follows the inexorable patterns of bourgeois life: he weds and sires a son. But this is a burden to him, and it's clear that his relationship with Vincent is the guiding force in his life. (All the women in this film are depicted as conniving shrews with limited personalities; this is the film's only major failing.)

For all the grief Vincent's self-destructive behavior brings him, Theo gets a charge from his brother's creativity. His interest in life comes from this vicarious bond.

Just as Vincent is tortured by mental problems, Theo is crippled by a comsumptive case of syphillis. After Vincent's self-inflicted death, Theo gives up on the farce of his life; he perishes shortly after Vincent.

different yet identical personalities of Vincent and Theo, Altman and Mitchell each a portrait of rare wholeness and richness. Their desire for realism extends into the settings of the film. It is made clear that the Europe of the 19th century, for all its creative brilliance, was not very livable, and as small and frustrating a place as the world of 1991. A tangible sensation of clammy, stuffy rooms, asphyxiating clothes, dreary streets and foreboding urbanity suffuses the film, and places us squarely in its environment.

Though too many of the female characters are unpleasantly shrill, most of the film's figures are remarkably well developed and portrayed. Tim Roth's Vincent is a jarring, believable figure. Ironically, Roth bears some resemblance to Kirk Douglas, who played a more robust Vincent in Vincent Mitchell's 1956 Van Gogh film, Lust For Life. To each of Vincent's seemingly foolish or bull-headed actions, Roth brings a counter-measure of humanity; driven solely by his need to create, he can't help but ignore the limitations of "proper behavior."

In the potentially thankless role of Theo, Paul Rhys also endows his character with sympathy. Though his performance is delicate, verging on effeminacy, Rhys' presence becomes a vital part of the film. In a few sequences in which the film focuses solely on Vincent, Rhys' presence is missed. Roth and Rhys are a rare match: two stylistically different actors who perfectly merge.

Director Altman has never seemed so much in control of his work. He's still curiously fond of the techniques that badly date his earlier work, particularly his use of the zoom lens, which cheapens the drama of film. This may be his best film; it's a triumphant comeback from his string of uncertain projects in the 1980s.

Given the atrophy of contemporary American moviemaking, it's heartening to see an American director is sure of himself and so bold in his technique. Vincent and Theo is made with a passion that comes close to Van Gogh's own; it's a film of rare emotion and humanity.

Vincent and Theo* plays at the Cinema Twin in the Tallahassee Mall; call 385-9000 for showtimes.

Tim Roth stars as the legendary painter in Vincent and Theo.

ANDY WALTON/FLAMBEAU

High-scoring Hogs run past Seminoles

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

For a moment there, it seemed like it just might happen—that Florida State could beat No. 2 Arkansas.

But as usual, experience and patience won out over youthful enthusiasm as the Razorbacks beat the Seminoles, 109-92, Monday night in front of 10,443 at the Civic Center.

Arkansas jumped on top early, hitting its first three 3-point attempts to take an 11-4 lead—it was the Razorbacks' early success from the floor which was the key to the game, according to FSU Coach Pat Kennedy.

"Arkansas was very focused," Kennedy said. "They hit their open shots early and really put us in a hole."

The Razorbacks, 18-1, extended the lead to 37-20 with 9:50 remaining in the first half thanks in part to a suffocating full-court press which the Seminoles, 9-6, had trouble handling.

"Arkansas plays a 94-feet defense," Kennedy said. "They press you full court, and do a very good job of disrupting your defense."

Trailing by 17 points, FSU sophomore Chuck Graham took over. The 6-foot-3 Graham scored 10 straight points, including two thunderous slam dunks, to help spark the Seminoles in their rally.

FSU got into a running game with Arkansas, and thrived in it for awhile. The Seminoles closed the gap from 17 points to five points at halftime, trailing 62-57.

Even though the Seminoles seemed to be playing the Razorbacks evenly in the fast-paced game, Kennedy felt his team getting into that type of game which lost it for FSU.

"Tonight's game was going to be won with tempo," Kennedy said. "Our only chance was to slow them down early, and we couldn't do it. We played their kind of game."

The first 20 minutes may have been the Seminoles' best offensive half of the season. FSU shot a torrid 60.5 percent from the field on 23-of-38 shooting.

The Seminoles had three players in double figures at halftime, Graham with 14 points, Douglas Edwards with 16 and Michael Polite with 10.

As good as FSU was, Arkansas was just as impressive, offensively. The Hogs hit 22 of 38 field goals, including 7-of-10 shooting from 3-point range.

Junior forward Todd Day led Arkansas with 16 points in the first half. Ron Huery had 13 points and Arlyn Bowers had 12 at the half.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Those who are self-employed should do especially well in the coming months. If your regular job is not fulfilling, you may want to explore free-lancing. Only hard work and dedication will bring you the financial success you envision. Romance will move into high gear both in early fall and during the winter holidays. Reach out to an in-law or stepchild who feels alienated. Your conciliatory approach mends a rift.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: boxer George Foreman, pioneer filmmaker D.W. Griffith, author Joseph Wambaugh, actress Linda Blair

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Set a limit on spending and stick to it! Do not stop to shop. Your expertise lies in performing tasks that others find too difficult. A telephone call brings welcome financial news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put the finishing touches on a domestic project or business venture. A talk with associates proves gratifying. Close ranks. A media event could trigger good luck. Romance is sweet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go for life's finer things. Splurge on something for yourself or a special someone. Your popularity soars in festive surroundings. Stay in touch with people who share your interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It may be difficult for you to stay on track at work. Ignore outside distractions and gabby pals while you take care of business. A talk with a loved one lifts home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep ahead of the competition by pushing projects of a long-term nature. Go all-out to impress newcomers! Use your special talents to improve your community. Enlist the neighbors.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You make some interesting connections today if you travel. You sense who is in a position to really help you! Pooling your resources could lead to a bonanza. Reinvest profits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look for new ways to handle tedious tasks. Varying your routine will restore enthusiasm. Finish old projects before launching new ones. Attend seminars to keep up with developments in your field.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stress practicality and tradition when talking with higher-ups. Meditation helps solve a perplexing personal problem. Postpone social plans in favor of business obligations. Romance must wait.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may need a favor this morning. Be sure to repay it as soon as possible. Meeting someone new could be the high point of your day. You realize how popular you are!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You capture higher-ups' interest and favor with ease. Meet with someone who can pull strings. A dream could come true! Do not wait too long. Correct timing is essential.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Original ideas abound! Jot them down for future use. Be careful when choosing confidants lest someone try to cash in on your ideas. An unexpected gift or letter gives fresh hope for romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although you may be a bit bored by today's slow pace, you will benefit from the extra rest. Someone you doubted shows you the importance of trust. A new alliance looks promising.

FSU has improved between playing one and two

BY PAUL SHIRER
SPORTS EDITOR

To believe a Florida State victory over Arkansas was possible Monday night bordered along the world of fantasy. But the Seminoles' 17 point loss to the second ranked Razorbacks, at least, provided a progress gauge since the disaster in the desert—not the one in Saudi Arabia, rather FSU's 32 point shellacking taken Dec. 22 at UNLV.

FSU Coach Pat Kennedy says the difference is day and night." Kennedy has a good claim on so the stats seem to show it.

First off, the Seminoles have found their collective shooting eyes. Hitting just 38 percent of its shots vs. UNLV, FSU jumped that number up to 50 percent against Arkansas (including a 61 percent performance in the first half).

Only one FSU player, Aubry Boyd—managed double figures at Las Vegas; five had at least 10 points Monday. Forward Douglas Edwards made up the most dramatic difference, being snubbed for just seven points vs. UNLV and posting up a game high 24 against the Razorbacks.

The Seminoles' biggest stride may have come in the rebounding department. After getting outboarded 50-34 against the Runnin' Rebels, FSU reversed the edge Monday with a 34-30 advantage over Arkansas. Of course, the Razorbacks didn't need to do much board work, considering they shot 63 percent from the field and forced 21 turnovers.

The difference was there Monday night, or so, at least, it seemed. Certain intangibles, however, leave FSU's progress in question. The most obvious—is Arkansas as good as UNLV in the first place?

The Razorbacks, 18-1, are certainly the only comparable team to the 13-0 Runnin' Rebels—who some believe should take a spot in the NBA's West Division. Arkansas' only loss, after all, came early in the season, and since then, Nolan Richardson's crew has sailed smoothly.

Who better to play hypothetical prognosticator than Kennedy, whose team has faced both teams? Kennedy believes the difference in a UNLV-Arkansas matchup would be the Runnin' Rebels' defensive standout Stacey Augmon.

So, UNLV's perhaps slightly better, but the difference Monday night in FSU is no more than slight.

Still yet to figure in, however, is the fact that the Razorbacks' game was in Tallahassee, the UNVL game away. Here again, though, a light of improvement seems to shine on FSU. No doubt, the Seminoles are a different team at home, but the 17 point margin of defeat vs. Arkansas was deceiving—FSU was down just two points at the half, and they kept it around 12 points most of the second half.

So, is there a verdict? It seems, yes, FSU is certainly a better team than just one month ago. And, yes, it seems only in some wild fantasy could it beat Arkansas.

The second half was all Arkansas. Lee Mayberry hit a 3-pointer to open up the half, and the Seminoles would never get any closer than 11 points.

Arkansas switched from its man-to-man defense to a matchup zone after building a double-digit lead, and that change was the key to the Razorbacks' victory, according to Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson.

We changed to our matchup zone after we got our lead back up again," Richardson said. "After that, they had a hard time catching us."

The Seminoles went cold in the second half, hitting only 18 of 34 attempts from the field. Meanwhile, the Razorbacks were right on target, making an incredible 17 of 24 from the floor.

"If we could have hit our shots, we would have been okay," FSU guard Charlie Ward said. "We played well in the first half, but they changed up the defense in the second half and really hurt us."

Day led all scorers with 30 points and added 9 rebounds to lead the Razorbacks. Huery finished with 17 points, and Mayberry and Bowers each finished with 16 points.

FSU's Douglas Edwards crossed the 20-point plateau for the fourth time this season with 24 points Monday night against Arkansas. The sophomore forward also had 10 rebounds.

Edwards led the Seminoles with 24 points and 10 rebounds, while Aubry Boyd had 16 points. Ward finished with 13 points and seven steals.

While the loss ended FSU's four-game winning streak, the weekend was anything but a total loss.

The Seminoles beat No. 22 South Carolina on Saturday, 81-80 in over time to move into a second place tie at 3-2 in the Metro Conference.

"We came into this game looking for the upset," Ward said. "But this loss is not going to stop our momentum or our confidence."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

The Florida State women's basketball team beat South Carolina, 69-60, Monday night to take sole first place in the Metro Conference. The Lady Seminoles, 12-2 and 5-0, also moved into the Top 25 for the first time this season at No. 25.

The Florida A&M women's basketball team dropped a 65-61 decision to Florida International on Saturday. The Lady Rattlers dropped to 8-6 overall and 0-4 in the New South Women's Athletic Conference.

FSU's Water Ski Club meets at 8 p.m. Thursday in room 118 of the Bellamy Building. For more information, call Brett Reynolds at 575-9554.

Israel bombed again; Iraq burns oil fields

See related story, page 7

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Iraq launched its third and bloodiest missile attack against Israel Tuesday night. U.S. Patriot anti-missile missiles were sent to thwart the attack, but at least one Iraqi Scud hit a residential area of Tel Aviv, causing dozens of casualties.

There was no immediate word whether Israel would retaliate for the continued Iraqi attacks, but chief army spokesperson Nachman Shai said, "We have patience."

In other developments related to war in the gulf, Iraqi forces set oil installations in southern Kuwait ablaze, military officials said Tuesday.

The plume of smoke rising from the Al Wafra oil field could reduce the effectiveness of weaponry guided with television cameras and lasers and might affect infrared scanners pilots and weapons officers use to direct their "smart bombs" to their targets, military experts said.

The number of conventionally armed Scuds fired by Iraq was not known. Shai told Israel Radio that two Patriots were launched, but it was unknown whether any of the incoming missiles had been intercepted.

Local Arabs have mixed reactions to Mideast war

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST. NEWS EDITOR

Kuwaiti resident Hazem Tamimi is convinced that war is not the answer to the crisis in the Middle East.

"I don't see war as the only solution," said Tamimi, a Tallahassee Community College student. "What's the use in saving Kuwait after killing thousands of people?"

But Saudi Arabian resident Mostafa Eshmaii, a Florida State University student, disagreed.

"If we didn't do it now, later he's going to be stronger," Eshmaii said about Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

The disagreement between Tamimi and Eshmaii underscores a split among Arabs that has widened since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. Now, seven days into war in the Persian Gulf, current and former residents of Arab nations living in Tallahassee continue to express a variety of opinions concerning the Persian Gulf conflict.

Tamimi is a Palestinian whose father owned a print shop in Kuwait City and was killed by Iraqi troops about a month after the invasion. Despite that, he said the United States and its allies should have given economic sanctions more of a chance to work before making the decision to attack Iraq.

"Iraq was almost totally dependent on outside countries," Tamimi pointed out.

Tamimi argues that Arab-Israeli differences are at the heart of the Middle East conflict, and that any peace to result from the war is contingent upon settling them.

SG, CPE still at odds over controversial photos in catalog

BY JOEL ARNOLD
AND AMY ELLERSON
STAFF WRITERS

The question of whether Florida State University's Center for Participant Education can print controversial photographs in its new catalog is still undecided, even after a student supreme court hearing and a special committee meeting Tuesday.

The final decision will be left up to Vice President of Student Affairs Jon Dalton, who will base his verdict on the opinion of a six member student committee reviewing the issue.

Although the Flambeau was previously told that Student Body President Trey Traviesa blocked printing of the catalogs last week, Dalton was the one who officially stopped the printing.

The conflict arose when employees at the Tallahassee Democrat, where the catalog was being printed, called the FSU purchasing department to ask if the pictures had been OK'd. Purchasing department employees, in turn, called Dalton to ask about the photos—one by Courbet featuring a naked white woman and one by Mapplethorpe of a black man dressed in a suit with his genitals exposed.

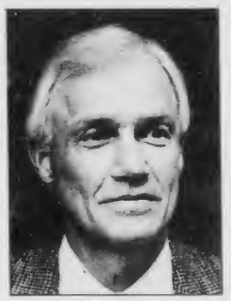
Some students had also complained about the photos, to be printed on the third page of the catalog.

After conferring with Traviesa, Dalton ordered the printing stopped because he was concerned about violating Florida obscenity laws and university standards.

Traviesa set up the ad hoc student committee to decide whether the pictures should be printed. Although Dalton will have the final decision, he said he will weigh the committee's recommendation heavily.

The committee met Tuesday and will give Traviesa their verdict Thursday. He will hand it over to Dalton.

"I think the appropriate thing to do would be to wait for their decision," Dalton said Tuesday. "Important issues are brought up for the university community. Since this is student money I think there needs to be a student review."



'Important issues are brought up for the university community. Since this is student money I think there needs to be a student review.'

High speed chase

The driver of a stolen car was arrested Monday night after a high speed car chase involving several officers, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Mark Meadows said Tuesday.

A police officer sighted the suspect, Gary Mordica of 837 Griffin St., driving a white 1981 Buick around 11 Monday night. The officer recognized the car as being reported stolen and called for backup.

Before backup arrived, 20-year-old Mordica led the officer on a chase to the parking lot of Andrew's Coin Laundry on Jackson Bluff Road, Meadows said.

After backup arrived, Mordica allegedly tried to ram two police cars in his path, but both cars were able to avoid Mordica's car. Mordica drove to the Keith Street area before jumping out of his car and attempting to escape on foot, Meadows said.

"Officer Greg Armstrong and his K-9 partner, Brix, were called to the area and tracked the suspect to a nearby location where he was placed under arrest," Meadows said.

Mordica refused to give his name or any other information when arrested, but police learned his identity after taking him to jail, Meadows said.

Mordica was charged with two counts of aggravated assault on a law enforcement officer with a motor vehicle, grand theft auto, resisting arrest without violence, fleeing and attempting to elude a police officer, reckless driving, and driving while license suspended or revoked, Meadows said.

Mordica is being held on $6,300 bond at the Leon County Jail.

Second suspect found

The second suspect wanted in connection with a Jan. 14 robbery of a Food Lion grocery store was arrested in Bainbridge, Ga. yesterday, TPD spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said.

Bainbridge police served the suspect, Ramon Alphonso "Money" Roberts, with a search warrant Tuesday after the TPD notified them of a possible link between Roberts and the robbery.

TPD had arrested one of the suspects--Ricky Joe Hall--and charged him with armed robbery with a firearm and 15 counts of kidnapping after the Jan. 14 robbery. Hall was being held at the Leon County Jail.

After searching Roberts' house, Bainbridge police discovered his left hand had been injured. An X-ray showed what appeared to be a bullet still lodged in Roberts' hand, Kiracofe said.

"Investigators theorized that one of the suspects must have been accidentally shot during the robbery when employees reported hearing what sounded like a gunshot as they were being herded into the dairy cooler," Kiracofe said.

Bainbridge police arrested Roberts and charged him with armed robbery with a firearm. According to Kiracofe, Roberts may also face charges of kidnapping. Bainbridge officials turned Roberts over to the TPD. He is being held without bond at the Leon County Jail.

"If you don't link the two issues, then you don't want to solve the Middle East problem," Tamimi said. "We have to have an international peace conference.

"Saddam would not have bombed Israel if Israel was not occupying Arab land. If Israel enters the war, Arab countries will back Hussein."

Mostaffa agreed. He added that he respects Israel for its restraint in countering Scud missile attacks on Tel Aviv and other cities—a prospect that may not hold out much longer as Iraq launched its third, and most devastating, missile attack on Tel Aviv Tuesday.

"I really admire that," Eshman said. "I hope they never retaliate for the sake of not making the situation worse."

Like Mostaffa, Florida State University doctoral candidate Gawdat Bahgat said the United States had every right to resort to war to settle the problem.

"We're there because we have very important interests," said Bahgat, an American citizen born in Egypt. "As a superpower, our national security extends to the whole world.

"We're not there just to protect Saudi Arabia and liberate Kuwait. We have to protect and defend our national interests."

Bahgat, whose doctoral work concerns Egypt's role in the Middle East, said Saddam's attempt to portray himself to Arab peoples as a Muslim leader is not working.

"It's not Arabs against Americans," Bahgat said of the conflict. "The majority of Arabs are against Iraq."

Eshman agreed, saying the Islamic religion makes clear that the kind of contradictory behavior exhibited by Saddam would disqualify him from any preferential treatment from Allah—a point which many Muslims agree on.

"It's not working," Mostaffa said. "If you're committing a crime in peacetime and now you're going to play this role now that you're surrounded by forces, God's not going to help you."

Like Tamimi, Milad Rostam—a Lebanese resident who works at a Middle Eastern restaurant in town—said the United States and Iraqi governments should have looked for other means of dealing with the crisis.

"I think this war should not have started in the first place," said Rostam, who also said many Muslim Lebanese side with Saddam Hussein in the conflict. "It could have been solved politically. The war is not good no matter which side you take."

Deepak Mansuk, a resident of Bahrain for 10 years before coming to the United States, agreed.

"Based on what I hear and see, I think it should stop. There's a lot of dying," he said.

War

At least one missile exploded in Tel Aviv, Israel's most populous city, shortly after 8:30 p.m. local time (1:30 p.m. EST). Shai said two buildings, including at least one apartment building, were hit and about 20 surrounding buildings and dozens of cars sustained varying degrees of damage. "It was a hit, a very hard hit," he said.

Shai said at least 60 people were injured by the blast and one person died of a heart attack at the same time, but suffered no external injuries. Israel Radio said no one had been killed directly by the missile.

Israel Television showed rescue workers carrying blood-covered victims on stretchers to many ambulances, taking them from the apartment building razed by the missile.

A special military rescue team was trying to dig out survivors trapped in the debris, and 33 ambulances and 92 medics were sent to the scene, Israel Radio reported.

The attack was the first on Israel since the Patriot missiles, manned by U.S. crews until Israelis could be trained to use them, arrived during the weekend. The Patriots, which have had great success in defending Saudi Arabia, were the first weapons ever manned by U.S. military personnel on Israeli soil.

Previous Iraqi missile atttacks were conducted before dawn Friday and shortly after sunrise Saturday. Damage and casualties were minimal in those attacks.

Israel has vowed to defend itself from any Iraqi assaults, which could complicate the U.S.-led alliance against Iraq, which includes some longtime Israeli enemies. So far there has been no military response by the Jewish state.

Asked if the latest attack meant Israel finally would retaliate, Shai said, "That's premature. We won't jump to those conclusions. We have patience."

Shai reiterated that Israel would choose the time and place for any retaliation. "We are at war. They are firing missiles at us," he said. But he added that Israelis would have to learn to live with the missile threat for the time being.

Darts and laurels

Laurel: To Florida A&M University students for taking their concerns to the streets last week.

For too long, students at the only predominantly black state university let political issues pass them by. But now that the federal government has threatened to dismantle minority scholarships, students at the university are getting back to their activist roots.

Back in 1956 two FAMU students—Wilhelmina Jenks and Carrie Patterson—were tired of being forced to sit in the back of buses. Jenks and Patterson initiated the Tallahassee bus boycott, which eventually helped lead to desegregation in the South. Now, 34 years later, students are following in Jenks' and Patterson's footsteps.

The group responsible for last week's march to the Capitol—Students With a Conscious Mind—have started a major voter registration drive on campus. They have also urged students to protest the destruction of scholarships, among other issues—such as the vetoed 1990 Civil Rights legislation—facing blacks today.

More power to them.

Laurel: To the Leon County School District for banning the paddling of students in county schools.

This barbaric punishment should have been done away with long ago. As with capital punishment, thrashing a paddle across students' behinds doesn't deter them from committing the same offense. And like capital punishment, a disproportionate number of black students were having to bend over and bite the bullet.

Paddling problem students is not only extremely dangerous—students could easily be harmed if hit too hard or if someone slips and accidently hits a student's kidneys or back—it is a poor excuse for underpaid administrators and teachers to vent their frustrations.

In lieu of paddling, schools will seek alternative punishments—such as Belle Vue Middle School's in-school suspension program or, as Leon County School Superintendent Bill Woolley suggested, a "boot camp" type of program.

Students shouldn't get off easy now that in-school paddling is a thing of the past. The alternative programs need to leave more of a sting than any paddle and should show students the only way to succeed is to take school seriously and leave their mischievious ways behind.

Dart: To newly inaugurated Gov. Lawton Chiles. With schools in the state university system scrambling to meet the latest round of budget cuts—maybe at the cost of some university's summer school programs—Good 'Ole Lawton should have thought twice about giving every state agency head a whopping $98,000 salary.

What happened to the governor who promised to renew faith in government, who promised to look out for the little guy?

Chiles fessed up to the fiscal blunder and according to the Tallahassee Democrat said, "A lot of things if you had the chance to do them over again, you'd do a bit differently. That's one we didn't exactly hit right."

Chiles may have confessed, but actions speak louder than words. If Chiles was sincere about his mistake he would have rescinded the raises and put the money back into the state's budget.

Chiles promised a lot of changes when campaigning around the state trying to oust Bob Martinez. If agency heads' salaries are indicative of the way Chiles is going to run this state, he should walk right out of office.

LETTERS

More pain than gain

Editor:

A recent note appeared in State, the FSU newsletter directed to university faculty and staff, observing happily that the football program was donating $200,000 to Strozier Library out of its $1.6 million receipts from the Blockbuster Bowl. Out of the sixteen hundred thousand dollars the football team took in, the unversity powers-that-be were unctuously gratefuly for the "gracious gift" of two hundred thousand dollars.

Excuse me for not being overwhelmed. It was further observed that this brought to $3 million dollars the gifts from athletics to academics at FSU over the past decade. Okay, what I want to know is, over that same decade, how much did the athletic teams bring in? How much has the university paid out during that time to support competitive athletics? I don't mean just team travel and uniforms and coaching salaries and fancy stadium facilities. I mean the free rent and good and medical care, free clothing and school supplies, free books and tuition, free tutors and study sessions. How many "ordinary" (class-attending, tuition-paying, grade-making) students wouldn't be pleased to get a deal like that? They might not even have to be threatened with penalties for not going to class. (All of this of course refers to the big money-making teams, not tennis or swimming or track or the other athletes who take their education as seriously as their sport.)

I'm sorry, but the tired old argument that big-time athletics brings a lot of money and students to FSU is getting real thin. Sure, it brings in money—to the athletic program. And does FSU really want or need the type of students who come here purely because the Seminoles wil football games? I'm sure this letter will generate an enormous storm of invective against me, but I strongly believe that competitive athletics hurt this university an awful lot more than they help it. I would like to challenge my detractors to convince me otherwise.

According to the Bible

Editor:

The book that Christians call the Old Testament prescribes the death penalty for a wide variety of offenses: working on the Sabbath (Ex 31:14-15; Num 15:32-36), striking, cursing or rebelling against a parent (Ex 20:12,17; Lev 19:3; 20:8-9; Dt 21:18ff), worshipping other gods or enticing others to do so (Ex 20:3-5; Ex 22:19; Lev 20:1-5; Dt 13:1-18; 17:2-7), sorcery (Ex 22:18; Lev 20:27), false prophecy in the name of Yahweh (Dt 18:20-22), blasphemy (Lev 24:15-16), adultery (Lev 20:10; Dt 22:22ff), harlotry on the part of a priest's daughter (Lev 21:9), incest (Dt 27:20ff; Lev 18:6ff; 20:11ff), sodomy and bestiality (Lev 18:22ff; 20:13ff) disobedience of the court at the Central Sanctuary (Dt 17:8-13), kidnapping an Israelite for sale (Ex 21:16; Dt 24:7), harlotry on the part of an unmarried woman offered in marriage as a virgin (Dt 22:20-21), a pregnant woman killed by men fighting close by (Ex 21:22-25), one's ox kills someone else after a warning is given (Ex 21:28-32), testifying falsely in a capital case in which the convicted has been executed (Dt 19:16-21) and homicide with the intent to harm (Ex 21:14; Lev 24:17; Num 35:16ff, 22; Dt 19:11ff). This list is not exhaustive.

The method of execution was usually stoning to death outside the city. The community participated in the execution with the first stones thrown by the witnesses (Dt 17:7). The death penalty in almost all circumstances could only be carried out on the evidence of more than one witness. "A person shall not be put to death on the evidence of one witness (Dt 17:6, 19:15-21)."

Some people who call themselves Christians believe that their interpretation of the Bible should become the law of the land. They argue that they support the codification of the death penalty because the Bible, which they claim is the Word of God, and thus is perfect (without error), demands the implementation of the death penalty. For these people who call themselves Christians and support the death penalty, consistancy demands that they also advocate that the death penalty be implemented for each and every offense listed above (plus any and all other offenses that are not listed). To do otherwise is to be unfaithful to the literal interpretation of the Bible.

Some patriotism

Editor:

This letter is addressed to James Sargeant, Dusty Brock, Christina DiVitto and every other able-bodied person who has been demonstrating in favor of war in the Middle East.

Why are you people in Tallahassee? Oh, I see. You're in favor of war as long as you don't have to fight it—the old "Why don't you and him fight" routine. You stay in your fraternity and sorority houses and watch while others leave their family and friends to go to war. If you people were one tenth as patriotic as you proclaim yourselves to be you'd be in the Middle East backing up you pithy slogans with action. But no. Not you folks. You've got you own personal agenda that comes first, don't you? Education. Jobs. Your cowardice and hyporcrisy are overwhelming. And it is crystal clear that your brand of patriotism is utter bulls--t.

Lies, destruction

Editor:

We kill Iraqis. We still have to negotiate. We bomb Iraqis. We still have to communicate. We shred Iraqi children. It's war we instigate. Iraqi limbs lie in Baghdad's streets. Bush's war makes me sick. We have no right to kill anyone. Our shame is created because we sanction war. War has no meaning. War production ruins economies. And the president lies when he says we will make Kuwait free again. In Kuwait, women are not even treated as humans. Sure we can bomb enemies into oblivion. But can we understand? Can we ever know the truth when all of us are programmed by CNN?

Why war? Look no further than domestic scene

BY MANNING MARABLE
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

COMMENTARY
ALONG THE COLORLINE

Pushing the world to the edge of war, every action by the Bush administration was designed to make conflict with Iraq a national obsession.

By resorting to locker room boasts, vowing to "kick Saddam's ass," Bush needlessly personalized the conflict, undercutting the possibility of negotiations. By increasing the number of American troops without congressional authority, he transformed what was initially a defensive tripwire to check Iraqi aggression into an offensive force. At the United Nations, Bush refused any linkage between Kuwait and the occupation of the West Bank by Israel, although a regional security conference which connects the problems of the Mideast will be the only means to move toward peace. In Congress, Bush even asserted that he alone had the power to take the country into war, despite constitutional provisions to the contrary.

In retrospect, years from now, the focus of inquiry on the Gulf crisis will not be on Saddam Hussein and the invasion of Kuwait. Rather, it will center on the domestic prerogatives of American political, military and corporate power. All international politics are based on domestic realites. If we want to understand why the crisis in the Persian Gulf occurred, we need to analyze the system of American power.

In the aftermath of the Cold War, with the collapse of Communism in Eastern Europe, the United States was placed in a paradoxical situation. The $300 billion military budget could no longer be justified, as domestic critics called for a "peace dividend"—increased expenditures for education, jobs, health care and human needs. With the retreat of Soviet troops from the center of Europe, it became difficult to justify the presence of thousands of American troops across the world.

Ideologically, the demise of the Communist threat undermined the political consensus which united the forces of Reaganism. With the end of the Cold War, American conservatives no longer felt obligated to support Bush's domestic or foreign policies. By the summer of 1990, even before Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait, there was significant evidence that America was slipping into a major economic recession. An external crisis was needed to divert the attention of Americans standing in unemployment lines and awaiting pink slips.

By sending 400,000 American troops into the Mideast, Bush accomplished several political Education cuts. Affirmative action. War in the Middle East.

These issues have spurred awareness and increased political activity among African-American students at Florida A&M and Florida State universities, and an informal group called Students with a Conscious Mind seems to be leading the way.

"The aim of Students With a Conscious Mind is to bring about equality of opportunity, as well as equal results and employment," said FAMU Student Sen. Jonathan Allen, a group organizer. "We want our United States representatives and senators to oppose any anti-civil rights legislation, as well as legislation diminishing funds for education and minority scholarship."

Joe Youngblood II said the concept for Students With a Conscious Mind "has been rolling around for a while, and we got it together in mid-December."

"We are concerned with these primary issues: affirmative action, the veto of the 1990 Civil Rights bill, cuts in minority education funding and the Persian Gulf crisis," said Youngblood, who also helped get the group started.

'We are just a group of students that got together, talked about some things and made some decisions. The group is primarily focused on dealing with minority issues, but membership is not exclusive in any way.'
—Sharon Lettman, FAMU senior

Youngblood said the group plans to expand and develop some sort of regional or national network with similar groups.

"We have a myriad of students from different places. We're trying to build political consciousness," he said.

FAMU senior Sharon Lettman said the organization was originally financed by the Panhellenic Council.

"The eight Greek letter organizations on campus got us started," she said. "Now we will start developing our own sources of income, through fund-raisers, drives or membership dues. We are also willing to take donations."

Lettman, who is also co-chair for the National Coalition of Black College Student Governments, said Students With a Conscious Mind has no formal leadership structure yet.

"We are just a group of students that got together, talked about some things and made some decisions," she said. "The group is primarily focused on dealing with minority issues, but membership is not exclusive in any way. We have some members from FSU, but we're not sure of an exact number yet."

Speaker: affirmative action programs hurt minority students

BY KRIS ELVIN
STAFF WRITER

Affirmative action programs may make it more difficult for minority students to compete in college by admitting substandard students simply because of their race, according to Dinesh D'Souza, a guest speaker at the Florida State University College of Law Tuesday night.

"Basically, universities are sacrificing a liberal arts education in order (to promote racial equality)," D'Souza said.

D'Souza, whose speech was sponsored by the FSU Federalist Society, cited the admissions policies at the University of California at Berkeley where administrators take the best students of each race in proportion to their population distribution. He said this practice is less competitive for minority students.

According to D'Souza, a black or Hispanic student with a B average in high school will have a much better chance at getting into Berkeley than an Asian or white student with the same grades. The speaker said this kind of admissions practice is used at many colleges in the United States and makes it harder for Hispanics and blacks to succeed.

"The black and Hispanic dropout rate is double that of whites nationwide," he said.

D'Souza said Berkeley's dropout rate for white students is 25 percent, compared to 50 percent for Hispanics and 38 percent for blacks. For students admitted into the university primarily because of the affirmative action program, the dropout rate is a staggering 75 percent, he said.

The speaker, who came to the U.S. from India in 1978, said affirmative action programs are experiencing a decline in popularity among those who may not benefit from them.

"People's opinions are such that they are for affirmative action in theory, but not in practice," he said.

D'Souza went on to explain that racially based programs may have contributed to the rise of racism on American campuses. He also said such programs have caused a number of university administrators to pass rules banning the use of racially offensive speech.

"There is no epidemic of people on American campuses running down the hallway screaming 'nigger.' It's simply not the problem," he said.

Not only do affirmative action programs undermine the quality of education, D'Souza said, they also cause non-minorities to question the validity of minority academic standards.

"Once you have lost faith in the fair rules, everybody feels screwed," he said.

D'Souza also objected to the multicultural requirements recently imposed by many schools. He said the classes are an inaccurate interpretation of foreign cultures.

"It's a projection of local prejudices on other cultures," he said.

D'Souza is a member of the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative Washington D.C. think tank, and has studied the problem of racism on campuses. He recently wrote a book, Illiberal Education, about problems faced by universities which admit underqualified minority students.

Not all of the 14 people who attended agreed with D'Souza's opinions on affirmative action and the causes of racism.

Second-year law student Nancy Rossell, 33, told D'Souza during the question-and-answer session that students might be wrong in their beliefs that affirmative action is unfair.

"Possibly the younger people you talk to lack the proper historical perspective to know we're not all starting at the same place," she said.

SGA RUSH WEEK BEGINS JANUARY 28!

War poses great threat to environment, local experts/activists say

BY BRIAN P. BRAY
STAFF WRITER

While world experts discuss the social, political and economic impacts of the war in the Persian Gulf, environmentalists say the threat it poses to fragile ecosystems and the global climate has been largely ignored.

"Much of the discussion involving the war has centered around our dependence on oil, the socio-political balance, the costs in terms of human lives and the economic effects," said John Winchester, professor of oceanography at Florida State University. "What has not been discussed is the impact of war on the environment."

Winchester and other local environmentalists believe that modern warfare—including nuclear, biological, chemical and conventional weapons—could cause a global environmental disaster. More attention should be shifted to how the damage could be monitored and how the damage might be repaired once the war is over, they say.

"We don't know what the long-term effects are going to be," said Jack Rudloe, president of Gulf Specimens Marine Lab in Panacea. "There are many rare and endangered animals in that area that would be put in jeopardy."

Rudloe said the Persian Gulf area is a little strip of green in the middle of an otherwise barren desert. It is a fragile environment that is home to rare plants and animals. Rudloe said many of them may have yet to be discovered.

The Persian Gulf is another fragile habitat that could suffer during the war, Rudloe said. Marine animals, such as the loggerhead turtle, would be especially vulnerable if oil tankers are torpedoed in the Persian Gulf, Rudloe said. The area is also a habitat for tropical fish, coral reefs and a productive fishery.

"This would probably be the hardest hit ecosystem," he said.

Another local envirnomentalist agrees.

"In broad terms, as in any war, the situation could create long-term damage to the area," said Ralph Costa, a biologist with the Apalachicola National Forest. "The local ecosystem, especially the animals, suffer horrible casualties."

Much about the effects of war on the environment can be learned from the past, Winchester said. The bombing of Dresden during WWII is an example of how conventional weapons, when used in massive amounts, can wreak havoc on the environment.

"They dropped so many bombs that the heat from the explosions created huge updrafts that whipped up winds which in turn fanned huge fires," Winchester said. "It even affected the local weather. The rising air built up rainclouds and caused firestorms."

There is growing concern that a similar but much more threatening effect could result from the bombing of massive oil fields—an action Iraqi forces began to undertake Tuesday. Winchester said if this is conducted on a large scale, the black smoke rising from millions of barrels of burning oil could cause a nuclear winter-type phenomenon that could affect the global climate.

"Once started, these fires could burn for quite awhile," Winchester said. "Since the effects would be based on how long the fires burned, the question would be 'Can the fires be put out?' "

According to Ellen Winchester, a member of the Sierra Club's military impacts on the environment committee, the war poses environmental threats at home, too.

"We might step up our military production of conventional and nuclear arms to an all time high," said Ellen Winchester, who is married to FSU's John Winchester. "This could create problems at home if the increased production is not handled with discretion."

New group from page 5

"The group is open to people of any race, creed or color. Anybody who wants to work with us on minority issues is more than welcome."

Lettman said the group's agenda is, to some extent, also still open.

"We are just as curious as to where we're going to go from here as you are," she said. "We want to know how you feel, and where you stand."

The new group sponsored a march to the Capitol more than a week ago that attracted more than 1,000 protesters. The next day, organizers held a forum at FAMU for students to express their political views. About 200 people went to the forum, officially dubbed the Concerned Students Caucus.

"During (last) Monday's march, we let local and state legislators know we're here," Youngblood said. "We will be passing out literature to educate people, and we are working on a letter-writing campaign to Florida congressmen and senators."

According to Lettman, the purpose of the forum " . . . was to talk about why we marched, the intent of our organization and to educate our peers in the community."

Students With A Conscious Mind has also kicked off a voter-registration drive, but she added that students need to do more.

"Registering to vote is not enough," she said. "We must carry out our right to vote."

Anyone interested in Students With A Conscious Mind should contact FAMU SGA President Daryl Parks at 599-3624, or 599-3392.

objectives. First, American intervention reestablished this country's central role as the world's mercenary policemen, suppressing Third World nationalism and preserving Western corporate and political domination. The Arab world's greatest threat is not Saddam Hussein, it is the power and exploitation of Western governments and corporations. U.S. intervention ensures more decades of American dominance, and provides a warning to all non-European countries struggling against neocolonialism.

Second, the American intervention justifies the expansion of the military budget, the production of nuclear and conventional weapons, eliminating the peace dividend. Thirdly, in terms of domestic politics, it divided the Democratic party into pro-war and anti-war camps. Pro-war Democrats were manipulated to grant Bush unprecedented authority to initiate massive warfare abroad.

The only language the American political and corporate elite understand is resistance. This means conducting teach-ins explaining why the war was unnecessary. It means civil disobedience, marches, demonstrations and political organizing, bringing together religious groups, trade unions, civil rights, feminist and other progressive constituencies. Creative, democratic protest for peace abroad and social justice at home should be our focus.

from students when they pay tuition every semester.

"If I don't like something, then I should not have to pay for it. It's racist, and another thing, it's sexist," said Shay Alexander, vice president of FSU's chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Alexander is a member of the student review committee, made up of representatives from predominantly female and black campus organizations.

"The bottom line is that they're going to offend some people," Ben Crump, president of the Black Student Union and a committee member said. "We're trying to fight the stereotype of being rapists . . . and sexually explicit. I think you really have to look at how you are going to affect people."

Kimberly Weeks, a committee representative from the Panhellenic Council, also said she is opposed to CPE printing the photographs.

"A lot of people I represent within the greek community would be very offended by it," said Weeks, a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority. "Some people will view this as pornographic."

But Derek Paige, student government minority affairs advocate, said the photographs do not offend him. Paige, also a committee member, added that he is against censorship of any kind.

"Even if the pictures had been offensive to me, I don't think it would have weighed on my decision. I think it's certainly an infringement on First Amendment rights," he said.

CPE's counsel in the dispute, Michael Greif, said the six-member review committee should not determine Dalton's decision. Greif said he is angry that the committee chair, Cory Williams, is Traviesa's chief of staff. Williams is a non-voting member.

"We have a real problem with having our freedom of speech, your freedom of speech, dependent on a committee," Greif said. "After they're done with us, they'll come after you."

In an early attempt to overturn the ban on the printing, CPE took Traviesa in front of the student supreme court Tuesday morning charging he had no right to interfere with the catalog's printing.

The court ruled that the charges were invalid because Traviesa was not the one who actually blocked the printing. But the court said the president has no authority to interfere with the agency's publications.

"SG has been blown out of the picture," CPE Director Kelly Peters said after the hearing. "Trey has nothing left to do."

FSU search committee narrows list to 16 for president's replacement

BY JAN WESNER CHILDS
NEWS EDITOR

The list of candidates to replace retiring Florida State University President Bernard Sliger was shortened to 16 Tuesday, bringing the search one step closer to its end.

Search Committee Chair Larry Abele said the list of 16 will be handed over to the Board of Regents Selection Committee this week. Members of that committee, which meets Friday, will make the final recommendation to the BOR.

The 16 candidates, picked from 51 applicants, also include three FSU administrators: Provost Gus Turnbull, Vice President for University Advancement Jim Pitts and Music School Dean Robert Glidden.

Others up for the job are: Michael T. Aiken, former provost of the University of Pennsylvania; Anthony M. Akel, dean of the School of Management at William Paterson State College; Talbot "Sandy" D'Alemberte, a partner in the Miami law firm of Steel Hector and Davis, president-elect of the American Bar Association and former dean of the FSU Law School; Lawrence Davenport, associate vice chancellor for advancement and planning at the University of California in San Francisco; Carol Kay, dean of the University of South Carolina College of Arts and Social Sciences; Dale W. Lick, president of the University of Maine; Robert L. Lineberry, former provost of the University of Houston; Curtis L. McCray, president of California State University in Long Beach; Wilbur L. Meier Jr., director of the division of engineering infrastructure development at the National Science Foundation; Melvyn B. Nathanson, provost and vice president for academic affairs at Lehman College in New York; Margaret Preska, president of Mankato State University in Minnesota; Arthur K. Smith, provost and executive vice president for academic affairs at the University of South Carolina and interim president at the school; Graham B. Spanier, provost and vice president for academic affairs at Oregon State University in Corvallis.

Now you see him, now you don't

Over the past 14 years, millions of people around the world have seen David Copperfield perform his magic, ranging from tiny sleight-of-hand illusions and card tricks, all the way up to making airplanes and the Statue of Liberty disappear.

Hailed as one of the greatest—if not the greatest—illusionists of our times, David Copperfield brings his act to the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center tonight.

The magician has done more than enough to wow us all. He has appeared in more than 12 television specials, which have consistently earned high ratings. He has also performed around the world, including China and Latin America. He has even performed in front of U.S presidents four times.

Copperfield's newest road show is a combination of spectacular visual illusions along with the sounds of some of today's top music acts, including Guns n' Roses, Van Halen and Fine Young Cannibals. Featured in the show is the Brazilian Water Levitation, in which Copperfield levitates his assistant on a fountain of water, and floats her completely around Copperfield's body. Other illusions include "The Head Mover," in which Copperfield removes his assistant's head—while her body dances around the stage.

Copperfield has gained recognition with his large, yet-to-be-explained illusions. Perhaps his two most famous illusions were the disappearances of a seven-ton airplane and the Statue of Liberty. Both were done in front of a live audience and broadcast live on national television without the aid of any special camera assistance.

Copperfield has also walked through the Great Wall of China, escaped out of a safe placed in a building that was detonated, and levitated himself across the Grand Canyon.

Fans of Copperfield were stunned in 1984 when Copperfield was injured during his "Esacape From Death." In this illusion, Copperfield was chained, shackled and handcuffed in a tank of water, and had to escape before a 10-foot-long, 500-pound spike was dropped on him. He spent weeks in a wheelchair.

The Amazing David Copperfield

Besides his magical achievements, Copperfield has established Project Magic, a medical project that uses sleight-of-hand and magic as physical therapy for disabled patients. The project has been implemented in more than 1,000 hospitals in 30 countries.

Copperfield will be in Tallahassee for two shows only; you might want to catch him before he ... disappears.

David Copperfield will perform tonight at 5:30 and 8 at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center. Tickets are $21 and $23. There is a $4 discount for children under 12 for the 5:30 performance only. Call 222-0400 for more information.

Marsalis blows 'em away in his Tallahassee show

BY DOUG MARTIN
STAFF WRITER

If asked to pick the best jazz players on the scene right now, most, if not all, would include trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, pianist Marcus Roberts and trombonist Wycliff Gordon. Some true aficionados would list trumpeter Longinue Parsons among this group. Almost none would think of Tallahassee as the place they would all come together.

But Monday night, in an intimate Tallahassee night club, they did.

The concert at the Ramada Inn North was the highlight of a regular series of jazz concerts at the hotel. The series includes weekly appearances by the heads of both the Florida State and Florida A&M jazz programs, saxophonist Bill Kennedy and pianist Lindsey Sarjent respectively, and Marcus Roberts' Quintet members saxophonist Herb Harris and trumpeter Scotty Barnhart. Past performers in the series have included Roberts and Parsons.

Marsalis said he agreed to play at the club, which only seats 210, at the urging of Roberts, who lives in Tallahassee. Roberts was a member of Marsalis' band for five years, until striking off on his own to record solo two years ago. This was the first time since Roberts left the band that the two have performed publicly. And what a performance it was.

The show was split into two two-hour sets. The band began the first with "Blue and Boogie" by saxophonist Sonny Rollins. On the next tune, Harris made his mark on everyone in the audience with a crying, emotive solo on the Roberts penned "Deep in the Shed," from the Roberts album of the same name, which recently hit No.1 on the Billboard jazz charts.

A version of the standard "I Remember Abe," let all doubters know why these men are considered the best in the world. Brilliant displays of technical virtuosity of articulation, rhythm and tone filled the piece. A high point in this number was a fugue-like solo by the wunderkind Roberts where he playfully plugged harmonic tensions into the melody equation and introduced the uninitiated to his characteristic blues analytic style.

This was followed by Wynton's breathtaking version of Hoagy Carmichael's "Stardust." The elder Marsalis' reverence and Roberts' subtle, subdued accompaniment in treating this standard was a virtuoso performance, like a Shakespearean soliloquy.

Next, Robert's own prodigious talent shown through on his solo rendition of Thelonious Monk's "Tranquil Tanquil." Roberts, who won the international Monk competition on piano and is about to release an album Alone with Three Giants, with a kind hand led the audience into the dark and frightening world of Monk's harmonies.

A couple of more songs and that was it for the first set: five tunes. The second had seven. It was a short night for Marsalis, who plays about 250 shows a year.

Monday night's lineup combined members of Marsalis' septet and Roberts' quintet.

Marsalis contributed Gordon and alto saxophoist Wes Anderson. Gordon was educated at FAMU and Anderson is a native of Brooklyn, New York.

Wynton Marsalis

Marsalis said he agreed to play at the club, which only seats 210, at the urging of Roberts, who lives in Tallahassee.

Marsalis's younger brother Delpheo, joined Gordon on the trombone. Nicholas Payton, an up-and-coming trumpeter from Marsalis's hometown of New Orleans, also played. The rest of the septet met Marsalis in Miami for an engagement Tuesday.

Bassist Chris Thomas and drummer Maurice Carnes from the Roberts group made up the rhythm section. Tallahassee residents and FAMU alumni Harris and Barnhart added their skills. The night also saw a performance by University of North Florida student and trumpeter Marcus Printup. Roberts has been a guest artist at the Jacksonville school for the past week.

Marsalis will appear at the Florida Theater in Jacksonville at 8 p.m. on Thursday. Tickets are still available at Ticketmaster. Herb Harris and Scotty Barnhart of the Marcus Roberts quintet can be seen every Thursday night at The Ramada Inn as part of the Dooley's Downunder Jazz series.

Hispanic film festival has a Miracle

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

COMMENTARY

MIND REELS

After 12 years, a father has to come back to the cemetery where he buried his 7-year-old daughter to reclaim her remains. All around him people are dumping the bones of decayed relatives into bags to take home with them.

When he tears open his daughter's coffin though, he finds that her remains have not changed one bit. She is still as fresh as the day when he buried her. Her body's even warm.

All around, relatives of the long dead begin to mutter things about miracles and sainthood until the low din become a fervent cheer. This girl is one of God's chosen.

Although the film began a few scenes before, this is the true beginning of Lisandro Dugue's wonderfully innocent Colombian film Miracle in Rome, showing at Cinema Twin tonight as part of the Hispanic Film Festival.

Colombia has never had a saint before and people call the church to request a canonization for the child who was obviously marked by God. The villagers raise the money to send Margarito Duarte (Frank Ramirez) to Rome to meet with the Pope.

What is remarkable about this allegorical film is that it manages to uphold faith in the Catholic Church while taking shots at what has once again become a political and economical machine.

While in Rome, Ramirez's character fends off the political maneuvering of the Colombian embassy and tries to reach Vatican officials on his own. He spends many days walking around Rome with his daughter (Amelia Dugue Garcia), who he carries everywhere in a portable coffin.

Miracle in Rome is one of those magical films that take very few mis-steps. These kind of films don't preach, they allow you to follow along and enjoy yourself. It's only after you've left the theater that you realize there was a serious message underneath it all.

Like its fellows, Dugue's film is a wonderful little movie. It's heart-rending and hysterical at the same time. It preaches about the misdeeds of the church and celebrates personal faith.

Ramirez, as the father, does a solid job. He doesn't get wrapped up in the role, but you can still feel the mixed signals of emotion that come from him. He's very happy that his daughter may be made a saint, but he is also downtrodden because she can't ascend by the will of God—only the will of religious politicians will give his daughter's soul freedom.

The ending of Miracle in Rome will put many people off. Not to give the ending away, it's a scene in which loud voices sing the Hallelujahs of Handel's Messiah. But even a tacked on ending can be forgiven when the film is so good-intentioned and innocent.

Miracle in Rome plays at the Cinema Twin tonight at a cost of $5.25 for the general public and $3.50 to students with a valid ID. For showtimes or more information call 385-9000.

Runnin' Rebels appear No. 1, but Razorbacks looked No. 1

Although a good bulk of Tallahasseans would likely head a No. 1 chant for Arkansas—the Razorbacks were that good here Monday night—our voters went with the rest of the country and kept UNLV at the top spot.

The Runnin' Rebels keep runnin' up their record, now at 14-0, and as in the AP poll they were unanimously No. 1 in the Flambeau. Of course, there's no debate as to which poll deserves more credence. AP voters may have the gift of knowledge, but around here we vote on gut feelings—especially around lunchtime.

Ohio St., at 16-0, may be this year's biggest surprise. But there's seldom any telling what a Buckeye might do. Which brings to question, why do buckeyes exist? Other than good rubbing material—they feel nice, sure do—buckeyes have no purpose. Tree ornaments? Ground ornaments? Someone please clear this matter up.

The voters are: Staff Writers Michael Harris and Jack Clifford; Assistant Arts Editor Chris Talbott; Assistant Sports Editor Rich McCrary; and Sports Editor Paul Shirer.

FAMU goes wrong direction on its disasterous road trip

BY MICHAEL HARRIS
STAFF WRITER

It seemed, from both a geographical and momentum standpoint, that Florida A&M's men's basketball team was venturing upward when it took off for a three-game road stint, starting in Baltimore, Md., on Thursday.

But the Rattlers, in fact, plummeted downward—somewhere around the Keys would be a proper analogy.

Although Booker didn't expect to win all three games, he expected at least two wins, maybe three. Instead the Rattlers dropped two of three, falling to 6-8 overall and 4-3 in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

When FAMU left Tallahassee last Wednesday it was seemingly doing away with early-season troubles, reaching .500 with a over North Carolina A&T.

The win column seemed ready to be lit up.

But meager Morgan State, now 2-14, and former FAMU assistant Michael Holmes—now coach at Morgan—gave the Rattlers a big surprise, winning 75-67.

FAMU shot a disastrous 25-of-65 vs. Morgan and was outrebounded 51-31. After falling behind 36-25 in the first half, the Rattlers couldn't do what they did so successfuly during their previous home stand—come back.

FAMU's trouble came partly because of a Morgan defense designed to stop the Rattlers' top offensive players—DeLon Turner and Reginald Finney. The scoring load was forced Kenny Davis, who finished with a game-high 31 points, but the point guard's effort wasn't enough.

Turner shot just 3-of-9 from the field, while Finney hit only 4 of 16 shots. Absent from the game for unknown reasons was Kelvin Daniels, who averages 18 points and 6.5 rebounds per game.

If the loss against Morgan was a bad dream, the second leg of the Rattlers' road trip Saturday against Coppin State was a nightmare.

Buffalo looks indestructable; Marinovich falls from grace

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

COMMENTARY
RAMBLIN' RICH

In these times of war in the Persian Gulf, it's easy to see sports for what they really are—trivial diversions to entertain an audience. Sports are not life and death as so many fans seem to think sometimes. War is.

With that said, let's talk some sports.

Many of us were in junior high the last time an AFC team won a Super Bowl, but it's going to happen again this year.

Buffalo looked like it could have ran up a 100 points on the Los Angeles Raiders last Sunday when the Bills wrapped up the AFC crown with a 51-3 pounding.

The Raiders, who have a pretty decent defensive unit, looked confused from beginning to end as Jim Kelly executed the no-huddle offense to perfection.

Meanwhile, the San Francisco 49ers were learning that no matter how good the passing game is, teams can't win championships without a running game.

The 49ers shunned the running attack all year long, and it finally hurt them in the NFC championship game. Montana and Co. couldn't get a passing game going against the tough New York Giants' defense and lost 15-13.

So it will be an all-New York Super Bowl, or will it? Buffalo is definitely from New York, but the Giants play their home games in New Jersey. Whatever, it will be a matchup between the two fiercest defenses in the NFL.

The Giants are led by linebacker Lawrence Taylor, the most dominant defensive player over the last decade. The Bills are led by defensive end Bruce Smith, who has said all year that he is better than Taylor.

In December, the Bills beat the Giants 17-13 in a game which saw both starting quarterbacks get injured. Jim Kelly has returned for the Bills, but Phil Simms is still missing for the Giants.

While Jeff Hostetler has performed admirably for the Giants, it remains to see how effective he will be against the swarming Bills defense.

At any rate, we shall find out this Sunday in Tampa.

Thankfully, there will only be one week between conference championship games and the Super Bowl this year. As a result, fans won't have to hear players answer the same questions 10 million times.

The crumbling of Todd Marinovich's career, and maybe life, may teach parents an important lesson—

> Many of us were in junior high the last time an AFC team won a Super Bowl, but it's going to happen again.

don't take sports so seriously.

Marinovich was born and bred by his father to be an NFL quarterback. Marinovich has reportedly never had a fast-food meal; his father wouldn't allow him to eat hamburgers or pizza—staples of most teenagers' diets.

The results were good for awhile; Marinovich broke all existing California high school passing records and received a scholoraship to USC. Success for Marinovich—as all the world knows—continued in his freshman year at USC.

But this year, something changed.

Marinovich played poorly, he was benched by his coach Larry Smith and argued with Smith all year. Now, he's off the team—kicked off Jan. 11 by Smith for not registering for classes. Reports are that he'll take his act to the NFL—a foolish decision according to most scouts.

This past weekend, however, Marinovich did something even more foolish. He was found in a town some 40 miles south of Los Angeles with a gram of cocaine and half a gram of marijuana.

Now instead of spending time on the football field, Marinovich may be spending some time in jail.

While it may seem harsh to blame Marinovich's troubles on his father, it can't be denied that the intense pressure he received to be a great athlete may have led to his downfall.

The beginning of the college football season just keeps getting earlier. Florida State will take on Brigham Young on Aug. 29, 1991 in the second annual Disneyland Pigskin Classic. The game will feature a matchup between Heisman Trophy winning quarterback Ty Detmer and All-American cornerback Terrell Buckley. The game may be a little scary for FSU fans, considering the Seminoles lack of success in recent openers.

War overshadows Super Bowl as teams prepare for Sunday

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

TAMPA—With beefed-up security and subdued celebration, the NFL machine Tuesday set in motion a Super Bowl week shadowed by war in the Persian Gulf.

The Buffalo Bills and New York Giants, who play Sunday for the NFL championship, arrived at Tampa Stadium, where the traditional media day was slowed by anti-terrorism precautions.

The teams—minus Buffalo Coach Marv Levy—arrived under heavy escort to a stadium that has been guarded around the clock since Jan. 16. This was the only on-field photo session at the Super Bowl, and the league termed Levy's unexplained absence a "clear breach of club obligations." The league will review his conduct after the Super Bowl.

Those who did enter Tampa Stadium in the cold Florida morning sent belongings through X-ray machines and stood for metal detector frisking. Photographers needed clearance for light sensitive high-speed film.

"You can see it as far as our hotel people," Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor said of the security. "They're everywhere, everywhere you turn around."

While warning the situation will be monitored until kickoff in terms of security threats and television availability, the NFL plans to play the game.

"I definitely think the game should be played," Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly said. "All the soldiers over there pay attention

INVESTOR'S REAL ESTATE MANAGEMENT, INC.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Real estate transactions are favored now. Your practical nature will be tested by a surprising professional relationship. A class reunion could lead to a romance. Although a move to another state will end a longtime relationship, it will be the beginning of wonderful new alliances. Loans and an inheritance are featured next October. A legal victory is possible in November. You may decide to spend the winter holidays in an exotic locale.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Randolph Scott and Richard Dean Anderson, actress Chita Rivera, Princess Caroline of Monaco.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Innovative ideas lead you in a new direction. Keep your loved ones informed. A sudden change in your finances relieves tension. You find imaginative solutions to pesky problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Heed that strong inner voice. Mixed emotions regarding a new romantic partner are a good reason to say "no." Someone has a change of mind. Accept a spur-of-the-moment invitation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You teem with ideas on improving an employment or domestic situation. Put your plans into action and you will be a shining star. A romance has the sparkle you like. Dress to impress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your powers of persuasion are impressive. Others applaud your forceful statements. Good will flourishes. An attractive member of the opposite sex shows interest in you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find that you are getting more out of life than in the recent past. Sign contracts. A pet project receives the green light. A diet-exercise program helps you look and feel better.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do a favor for someone who has helped you in the past. Family members will be sensitive to your special needs. A romantic attraction is very strong. You give serious thought to marriage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Impressive developments come about when you speak your mind. Your co-workers become much more cooperative. A letter or phone call will bring good news. Be open to fresh discoveries.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your receptivity to innovative ideas opens the door of opportunity. Root your plans in reality. Attend seminars. Old friends and newcomers make your evening upbeat and informative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A letter or trip could lead to a phenomenal event today. A romantic fantasy may be realized. Resolve a difficult situation by taking direct action. A new relationship heats up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Spend your time and money on sharpening your skills. You will make rapid progress once you stop scattering your forces. Romance looks wonderful. Take mate into your confidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Making a difficult decision will bring financial benefits. Put all of your energy into new projects. Sharing the credit helps you gain widespread support.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your intuition is right on target. Do not commit yourself to a project until you know how much it is going to cost you. Bonuses or perks may be less than expected.

Basketball

Rik Smits, the Indiana Pacers 7-foot-4 center, underwent surgery Tuesday to remove bone chips in his right elbow and was placed on the injured list. Jawann Oldham was signed to take his place. . . . Bullets forward John Williams tested the right knee he injured more than 13 months ago. The team says he is at least a week away from being activated. . . . Guard Anthony Oliver of No. 21 Virginia underwent hand surgery. He broke his right hand in Monday night's victory over Davidson and is expected to be sidelined at least three weeks.

Football

Running back Marion Butts (foot injury) of the San Diego Chargers and Neal Anderson (rib injury) of the Chicago Bears will miss the Feb. 3 Pro Bowl. John L. Williams of Seattle will replace Butts, and Emmitt Smith of Dallas will take Anderson's spot. . . . Herman Moore, Virginia's All-American receiver, will skip his final year of eligibility and enter the NFL draft. Moore became the first NCAA player to catch a touchdown pass in nine consecutive games and averaged 22 yards a reception for his career. . . . Cowboys Assistant Coach Dave Shula says he has been contacted by the Cincinnati Bengals and the Orlando Thunder of the World League of American Football. Cowboys Coach Jimmy Johnson changed Shula's duties after the season.

Hockey

Memorial services for hockey star Herbie Lewis will be held Thursday in Indianapolis. Lewis, 85, helped the Detroit Red Wings win the Stanley Cup in 1936 and 1937. He is a member of the Hockey Hall of Fame and brought hockey to Indianapolis in 1939. He died Sunday.

Honors

The Maxwell Football Club of Philadelphia named Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham and Art Shell of the Raiders its top NFL player and coach this season.

Law

Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens, charged with assaulting a police officer, had his court hearing in Houston rescheduled for Feb. 18. Clemens' older brother, Gary, also was charged with the same third-degree aggravated assault felony following an incident at a Houston nightclub Saturday. If convicted, each could face two to 10 years in prison and or a $10,000 fine. . . . Don Drysdale, the Hall of Fame pitcher for the Dodgers, was arrested on suspicion of drunken driving in Los Angeles. Drysdale, now a broadcaster, was not injured in the crash. The driver of the other vehicle, a 24-year-old woman, suffered numerous bruises and abrasions. Drysdale posted $5,000 bail.

Tennis

Seven first-round Davis Cup matches, including the World Group clash between France and Israel, have been postponed because of war in the Persian Gulf. The defending champion United States has asked that its match against Mexico in Mexico City Feb. 1-3 be postponed. . . . Mats Wilander, ranked No. 1 in the world little more than two years ago, has been left off Sweden's four-man team for the Davis Cup matches at Yugoslavia Feb. 1-3. The team consists of Stefan Edberg, Jonas Svensson, Peter Lundgren and Magnus Gustafsson. . . . Thomas Muster, complaining of an arm injury, will not play for Austria in its Davis Cup matches against Czechoslovakia. . . . Jennifer Capriati, Mary Joe Fernandez, Zina Garrison and Gigi Fernandez will represent the defending champion United States in the Federation Cup at Nottingham, England, in July.

Boxing

NEW YORK – Pernell Whitaker Tuesday predicted he will open 1991 with an impressive lightweight title defense Feb. 23 against Tracy Spann, then proceed with more ambitious plans.

Whitaker and Spann will meet at Las Vegas, Nev., as part of a double-header that features a junior welterweight fight between Hector Camacho and Greg Haugen.

"I've accomplished a lot last year," Whitaker said Tuesday at a new conference to announce his fifth 135-pound title defense. "I won an extra title and became undisputed champion. I've worked hard for these titles, nobody game them to me.

FAMU was handily beaten 78-64 Coppin, 7-8 and 3-1, built its bigg lead at 44-27 and then coasted from there.

The Rattlers posted four players in double figures, but it was not enough to overcome Coppin's Larry Stewart and Reggie Issac as they combined for 62 points and shot 60 percent from the field. Kelvin Daniels returned to the lineup to score 10 points and pull down seven rebounds.

Although the Rattlers lost Howard, 88-84 Monday to Booker his 100th win since the defense was disappointing. Howard shot 51.6 percent from the field. On a good note, FAMU dominated the boards with a 42-28 advantage.

FAMU had five players in double figures and shot 50 percent from the field. FAMU's leading hot hand for the second time in three games was Davis with 28 points. Following him was Daniels with 19. Finney with 14, Williams with 13 and Tucker with 11 points.

The Rattlers next game is tonight against 4-5 Florida Memorial College at Gaither Gym at 7:30 p.m. to what's going on. Everyone should say their prayers every night but I don't still see why there can't be peace in the world."

Added Bills linebacker Darryle Talley: "I think the guys over there will take care of it as best they can and we just need to provide some entertainment for them."

The Bills know all about the AFC's Super Bowl futility and are seemingly wary of the dangers of Super Bowl hype. The Giants are undaunted by their status as 6-point underdogs and relishing the chance to win their second title in four years.

With their focus undeniably on football, the players nonetheless seemed willing and at times eager to discuss the hovering war issue.

"We're even talking about it in our meetings," Buffalo linebacker Shane Conlan said. "People need something to take their minds off things and sports are the best thing for that."

Giants cornerback Mark Collins said the sobering effect on this Super Bowl has become inescapable. The league Monday canceled its traditional Super Bowl bash.

"I've been to a Super Bowl before and though there was a lot of security but this is really built up," Collins said. "But it's more than that.

"It bothers me to a point that a lot of people still say things like this (game) is going to be a war. This isn't a war, this is a game. When it's over, I know I'm going to go home, win or lose."

Giants linebacker Pepper Johnson has a cousin in the Gulf.

"As soon as all the cheers die down, as soon as you know the Super Bowl is played, all the dancing, all the cheering ends, and the next day has to come," Johnson said.

Bills linebacker Cornelius Bennett thoughts of war are not far away.

"One of the first things I thought of when we were coming here was that during the war, we both had red, white and blue on our uniforms," he said.

The teams each went 13-3, with the Bills winning their Dec. 2 matchup 17-13. In that game, each starting quarterback was hurt and Kelly returned from a sprained knee for the final two playoff games.

Arrests in Gainesville murder case may be near

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

GAINESVILLE—Arrests are imminent in the serial killings of five college students, police said Wednesday amid reports that genetic tests had tentatively linked one man to a death site.

"We have made significant progress. There will be arrests in the near future," Gainesville Police Chief Wayland Clifton said in a brief statement to reporters.

"The case has become more and more focused and we're confident in the near future ... we feel like this case will reach a successful conclusion, and that means apprehension."

Several times, Clifton used the plural terms "arrests" and "apprehensions," indicating there were at least two suspects.

His statements followed a Wednesday newspaper report that genetic tests had tentatively linked one man already in custody to the August murders.

The Gainesville Sun quoted unidentified sources as saying police were awaiting more conclusive DNA tests that are expected to link the suspect to the killings through semen left at a crime scene.

The man is not Edward Humphrey, a mentally disturbed former University of Florida student once identified as a key suspect, the newspaper said.

The newspaper said that because the latest suspect was in custody, authorities likely would not seek a grand jury indictment before making an arrest.

The man apparently was not in Alachua County, although it was unclear where he was held, the newspaper said.

The police chief did not comment directly on the newspaper report.

"We are being incredibly cautious," he said.

Bush: Desert Storm 'is right on schedule'; reporters want more details about air raids

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

President George Bush said Wednesday night that Allied military efforts against Iraq are right on schedule and there can be "no pause" now that Saddam Hussein has "forced the world into war."

"Tonight, after one week of Allied operations, I am pleased to report that Operation Desert Storm is right on schedule," said Bush in a speech to a crowded ballroom of members of the Reserve Officers Association.

"Saddam brought the war on himself," said the president, adding that "no one should weep for this tyrant when he is brought to justice. No time, anywhere in the world."

Greeted by tiny flags and a standing ovation, Bush cited much progress in the Allied offensive that began Jan. 16.

"There can be no doubt: Operation Desert Storm is working," he said.

Bush's optimism stemmed from reports by the nation's two top military officials that the first week of operations, largely an air assault on Iraq and occupied Kuwait, were successful and the focus was now turning toward rooting out the more than 500,000 Iraqi troops entrenched in the Kuwaiti theater.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell earlier told reporters at the Pentagon that the campaign had gone about as planned with U.S.-led air forces launching 12,000 sorties with little Iraqi resistance.

Reporters complain that the Pentagon's reluctance to detail the results of Allied bombing raids made it impossible to confirm upbeat official assessments.

Both officials acknowledged calculating the success rate of the air war has been hampered by cloud cover over the gulf region and a complex military analysis that is painstakingly slow.

Powell also called "vexing" Saddam's decision not to aggressively use his formidable air force and suggested the resourceful military leader may be delaying action to achieve the upper hand during ground combat.

Bush, Cheney and Powell's statements came as the government and news media exchanged fire in a growing fight over the availability and accuracy of information about the course and cost of the war.

A Cable News Network report, cleared by Iraqi censors, that Allied forces had bombed a baby formula plant in Baghdad triggered the latest in a series of skirmishes over the nature of information reaching the American people.

After military officials in Saudi Arabia moved swiftly to counter with a cautious statement that the plant was in fact a front for biological weapons work, the White House suggested CNN had been used to dispense Iraqi propaganda.

Reporters meanwhile continued to complain in the U.S. and in Saudi Arabia that the Pentagon's reluctance to detail the results of Allied bombing raids made it impossible to confirm upbeat official assessments of the progress of the war.

And in a speech in Florida to military personnel and families of men and women deployed in Operation Desert Storm, Vice President Dan Quayle accused the news media of paying more attention to what it deserved to call war protests.

In what matters, I want to say to the gulf, Iraqi Minister of Defense Moshe Arens said Wednesday his country will retaliate against Iraq, even if there is no evidence (new) victim of the Scuds attacks. But he didn't say how or when.

Violence aimed at police recently is not new, officials say

BY JOEL RISBERG
STAFF WRITER

In spite of a rash of incidents of violence against law enforcement officers in recent weeks, local authorities contend that the upsurge is only temporary.

"I have not seen a dramatic increase or decrease," Jack Handley, spokesperson for the Florida State University Police Department, said Thursday.

Phil Kiracofe

Violence against law enforcement officers occurs almost daily in the Tallahassee-Leon County area. In just the past few weeks, Tallahassee police officers have been confronted by dangers on numerous occasions.

- An intoxicated man used kitchen knives to threaten police on Dec. 8 after officers received complaints about loud music.
- On Jan. 8, a Tallahassee police officer was struck in the chest after pulling a man over for traffic violations.
- On Jan. 16, another intoxicated man fired a handgun at two police officers as he drove by their patrol cars.

Incidents like these illustrate the constant danger faced by law enforcement officers.

Officers say that this type of violence has become more prevalent since the dramatic increase in drug use in the past decade.

"With the influx of crack cocaine in the '80s, we've seen more violence, heavier firearms and stepped-up enforcement," Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said.

"Someone who is physically on drugs when arrested tends to fight," said Dick Simpson, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson.

The violence most often comes in the form of resistance, kicking, punching and struggling, Kiracofe said. It's not uncommon for them to try to disarm the police officer.

In addition to drug arrests, domestic disputes such as family arguments also present a major source of violence against officers. Kiracofe considers domestic disputes to be the most dangerous type of incidents that officers must respond to.

Statistics indicate that more officers are killed or wounded responding to domestic disputes than during

Board of Regents to meet today, Friday

BY JAN WESNER CHILDS
NEWS EDITOR

A new state university, increased student fees and an "education summit" between student and government leaders will be the main events when the Florida Board of Regents meets in Tallahassee today and Friday.

The BOR is set to hear a report on the feasibility of a 10th university in the State University System. Although no vote is on the agenda, it's likely the regents will make some kind of formal decision on whether to expand the system.

The board has held four public hearings across the state in the past several months, BOR spokesperson Pat Riordan said Wednesday. He said two possible sites mentioned for a new university are Ft. Myers or some other southwest Florida location and the Ft. Pierce-Vero Beach area.

Riordan said "at least one or two new universities" are the only way to handle the overcrowding problems facing Florida schools.

"If we are going to serve the needs of this state, we are going to have to build a few more sites," he said.

Riordan predicts that 10 years from now there will be 80,000 more state university students than there are today. He said if the existing nine universities are "built out to the maximum," they could handle 86,000 more students.

The BOR will also likely approve a plan that will up student fees at Florida A&M University by more than 30 percent, while Florida State University students face an 18.7-percent increase.

The increases will apply to the activity and services, athletic and health fees paid every semester along with tuition.

SUS Chancellor Charles Reed and BOR Chair Charles Edwards couldn't be reached for comment Thursday.

The formal BOR meeting will take place Friday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center. But Thursday, members of the BOR will meet with student government leaders and legislators to discuss several issues.

Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay is also scheduled to attend the meeting, from 9 a.m. to noon on the 22nd floor of the Capitol.

Florida Student Association Executive Director Sean Pittman said the education summit would give the FSA, a lobbying group made up of the nine student government presidents, a chance to show government leaders reasons why they should pay more attention to financial aid, academic advising and minority recruitment and retention.

Pittman said FSA members have been doing a lot of research on the issues, and will have cold hard facts to back up their arguments.

"It's an opportunity for us to, in a formal kind of way, actually get a chance to make some student presentations and back them up in a way that has never done before," he said. "It's hard to say you want adequate financial aid when you can't define adequate."

FSU Student Body President Trey Traviesa, who chairs the FSA, predicted recent state budget cuts might also be a topic of discussion at the meeting.

"We can't get together with the leaders of Florida and not discuss the budget cuts," he said.

But the main objective of the session, according to FAMU Student Body President Daryl Parks, is unity.

"I would like to see the Florida Student Association, along with the Board of Regents, the legislators and the governor's office, go into the (upcoming state legislative) session with a more focused agenda," he said.

CLARIFICATION

An article in the Jan. 17 Flambeau implied that war protester Russel DeGrove was arrested by police at a Jan. 16 peace rally. Although police approached DeGrove, he was not arrested.

CORRECTION

The caption on a front-page photo which appeared in Tuesday's Flambeau incorrectly stated that a march and rally held in honor of the late Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. was Sunday. In fact, the events took place Monday.

However, he noted that he had been confident all along the case would be solved, and said, "If ever I was confident, I'm confident today."

The chief also said the Gainesville community had reason to feel "much safer."

Investigators had said previously that the killer spent a long time, perhaps several hours, at some or all of the murder scenes. He apparently cleaned himself, the bodies and the scenes to remove evidence, but police still managed to obtain a genetic "fingerprint" from semen found at one killing site.

Since that DNA lab test came back in October, police have taken blood samples from numerous people, some serious suspects and some long shots, while hoping to find a match linking one of them to the scene.

The tests can take six to eight weeks to complete and some are still pending, the Gainesville Sun reported.

News of pending arrests came to light after a relative of one of the victims told the Sun that there was a significant break in the case and that a victim witness counselor at the state attorney's office was the source of the information.

Other victims' relatives either said they hadn't heard any news about a suspect or refused to talk about the investigation.

"We've been told we can't say anything," said Diana Hoyt, stepmother of victim Christa Hoyt.

The bodies of UF students Christina Powell, 17, and Sonja Larson, 18, were found Aug. 26 at their Williamsburg Village Apartment.

Hoyt, an 18-year-old student at Santa Fe Community College and a records clerk at the Alachua County Sheriff's Office, was found dead in her apartment nine hours later.

The next morning, UF student Tracy Paules, 23, and her roommate, Manuel Taboada, 23, also a UF student, were found dead at the Gatorwood Apartments.

All had been stabbed several times and the bodies of Powell, Larson and Hoyt had been dismembered. Hoyt had been decapitated and her head was placed on a shelf.

THE PHYRST PLANS A SUPPORT RALLY

The Phyrst shows its colors.

On Friday, January 25, at 4:00 P.M. The Phyrst will host a rally showing support for the soldiers stationed in the Persian Gulf. The staff of The Phyrst would like to encourage FSU staff, students, and others to be there on Friday to participate in the shooting of a photograph which will then be made into a personalized postcard. These postcards will be available on Monday for you to sign with a personalized message and then will be sent to the soldiers.

This rally will not be a debate on whether we should or should not be in the war. Rather, it is a rally to try to show positive support for OUR soldiers stationed in the Persian Gulf.

The Phyrst has always stood behind its customers and feels this is a small way it can help its customers express positive support for their relatives, friends, and associates who are involved in this war. The picture will be taken in the front of the building, with the building acting as a patriotic backdrop. Small American flags will be distributed to participants. The Phyrst ALPHA TAUS and TUANRS would appreciate support in this rally. "Support Our Soldiers."

Pentagon censorship: stay tuned for the lies, lies, lies

BY D.K. ROBERTS
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

COMMENTARY
D.K. ROBERTS

George Bush and Saddam Hussein are merely puppets whose gilded strings are pulled by the manicured hands of newsgod Bernard Shaw. This whole Gulf War groove thang is a plot by CNN to eat Dan Rather's lunch and make him say, "Thank you."

Paranoid? Moi? You have to admit that the goings-on in the Middle East so far seem weirdly geared to television. And all those background graphics screened behind the inflatable newsperson—Tension in the Gulf, Hostage Crisis, Crisis in the Gulf, Countdown to Crisis, War Crisis—seemed just to double-dog dare the Americans and the Iraqis: come out fighting or slide in the ratings. The melodramatic midnight deadline on Jan. 15 exerted enormous pressure on the public and the goverment who had been whipped into a frenzy at the thought of all those fancy airplanes and tanks and special Bambi-brown desert camouflage going to waste.

It is sometimes hard to tell whether journalists—particularly broadcast journalists—create or report the "news." For years there has been this myth of the "liberal media" nefariously at work in America, bashing the red, white and blue, making presidents look foolish when they say that air pollution is caused by trees or forgetting what century they live in.

In fact, the major American media are hysterically conservative: swallowing what CIA flacks feed them, getting so cozy with congresspersons that they lose the scimitar-edge of skepticism, slavering with glee over an invitation to watch Lethal Weapon II in the White House movie room. They have lost that essential hostility to authority which is the mark of the serious reporter.

It is clear that the military machine fears bad public relations—as well they might. War is their business ... The sight of a terrified and weeping G.I. or a pile of bloody corpses on primetime news hardly presents the martial front favored by these old men who send young people to war.

So it was good to see the press being called to account on this protracted "eve of conflict," addressing the issue of how television coverage influences people's opinions (and abets a jingoistic understanding of complex events) as well as defending itself vigorously against attempts to circumscribe its movements. This all happened on a television program (naturally) the night of the "countdown to war," one of the Columbia University seminars on media and society. It was on PBS which means probably hardly anyone saw it—they were all tuned to CNN's interminable map of Iraq (Baghdad marked with a star) with the sheepish photo of Bernard Shaw superimposed while he droned on and on about how he was committed to getting the story if it killed him.

Fred Friendly, head of the Columbia journalism school, was the chair of this lively and terrifying round-table, which included Daniel Schorr of National Public Radio, Anna Quindlen of The New York Times, Sidney Schanberg of New York Newsday (and Killing Fields fame), plus ex-Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Rep. Steven Solarz, Rep. Newt Gingrich, Rep. Eleanor Holmes Norton and a thoroughly belligerent admiral. The topic under discussion was should the media be subject to stringent rules and censorship in the reporting of the present unpleasantness in the desert.

The Pentagon has devised new rules that prohibit off-the-record interviews, talking to enlisted men or women without an army press officer in attendance and most filming of military action. All tapes would be subject to the review of a Pentagon flunky. Basically, the brass cowboys—dealt such a nasty blow by the end of the Cold War only to blossom again at the thought of beating the hell out of somebody—do not want a repeat of Vietnam with pesky reporters blowing the whistle on My Lai and like atrocities. That's what gave war such a bad rep any way.

This point was not lost on Sidney Schanberg, who said that the press were being punished for telling the truth in Vietnam. The admiral spluttered and said they were not neither. It's just that even the First Amendment can be monkeyed with a little in time of war. The admiral—with Loose Cannon Newt Gingrich backing him up—trotted out the loose-lips-sink-ships theory, saying that he could not countenance allowing the press to show or report anything that "might get American kids killed."

The notion that the press might be responsible for seducing the nation into the vicarious excitements of a TV war is credible; trying to suggest that the press could lose battles for the Allies in the Gulf war is silly and dangerous. It is clear that the military machine fears bad public relations—as well they might. War is their business: they want the American people to love it as much as they do. The sight of a terrified and weeping G.I. or a pile of bloody corpses on primetime news hardly presents the martial front favored by these old men who send young people to war.

Anna Quindlen and Daniel Schorr resisted any comparisons with World War II—the "just war"—in response to a story of how Edward R. Murrow, broadcasting from the roof of the BBC in London, had a censor with a cut-off button standing over his script at all times. They pointed out that the country is not united on this war, that it is not a war of principle or of aggression against U.S. territory but a murky affair that has more to do with international business than morality. That admiral, clearly unused to being spoken to in such a disrespectful manner, could only purse his lips.

The venerable Fred Friendly finished the talk by saying that while his mother had told him "what you don't know can't hurt you," he no longer believed it. The point of a free press is to tell, to make the audience understand what is happening with their money, their neighbors, their children, in this war. "This time," said Friendly, "what we don't know can kill us." Without the media—however imperfect—we here with our piles of newspapers, our televisions and our radios cannot find out the lies. And there are lies. Stay tuned.

Tired of protesters

Editor:

Just as a bloody revolution was necessary to attain the independence of our country and the rights of the citizens within it, there are also times when the shedding of blood is necessary to stand up for the rights of others. It is an unfortunate fact resulting from the inability of some humans to live peacefully with others. Doubtless, there are many times when the policies of our government seem hypocrytical. It is at those times we should use our right to protest in order to keep our government in check. Certainly, something must be done to solve the problems in South Africa, but moving in troops to oust the present government would make us no different than the current dictator in Iraq, Sadaam Hussein. However, there are distinct times when obvious wrongs, such as ignoring the sovereignty of a nation and breaking the rules of the Geneva Convention, make it necessary to use force to correct these wrongs.

I understand the necessity for some to represent their opinions by protesting, but it makes no sense to burn the American flag which represents their right to do so. I do not believe that this war will directly solve the Israeli-Palestinian question, but I feel it will do more in this respect than will sitting by "peacefully," allowing Iraq to build an arsenal specifically intended to annihilate the Jewish state and control the Arab world.

I am a FSU student and a U.S. Marine Corps reservist. I am tired of hearing anti-war protestors try to relate this war to Vietnam and scream "No blood for oil." This is not a war for oil. It is a war to reestablish the legitimate government of Kuwait and to finally give the United Nations a backbone. I hope that if I am called away from school to serve my country, I will not be stabbed in the back by those few who are perpetually looking for something against which to protest.

DAY 8

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

UNITED NATIONS—Five North African countries called on the U.N. Security Council Wednesday to hold an urgent meeting to discuss the escalating war in the Persian Gulf.

The chiefs of mission of Morocco, Tunisia, Mauritania, Libya and Algeria asked the president of the council, Zaire's Ambassador Bagbeni Adeito Nzengeya, to convene the meeting.

WASHINGTON—President Bush will give "full consideration" to Israel's request for $13 billion in aid, and telephoned Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to express his "abhorrence of the brutal terrorism" Iraq has inflicted with missile attacks on the Jewish state, a spokesman said Wednesday.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the Israeli request was passed on by Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, who is currently in Tel Aviv and has been asked to remain there indefinitely for consultations with Israeli officials.

Israel has said it will need the additional economic aid as a result of the Persian Gulf war and the cost of absorbing thousands of Russian immigrants coming into the country.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA—U.S. officials said Wednesday assessment of bomb damage remains an arduous and uncompleted task and the number of U.S. aircraft lost remains at 14 with no new combat-related downings in the last 24 hours.

ANKARA, Turkey—Iraq warned Turkey Wednesday that it would not leave unanswered the decision to allow U.S. warplanes to use Turkish bases to bomb targets in northern Iraq, Tehran radio said.

The warning from Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz came hours after explosions rocked the offices of two private American organizations in Istanbul, causing damage and slightly injuring one Turkish employee.

MOSCOW—Soviet troops seized Lithuania's main paper and printing materials warehouse Wednesday in the Soviet government's persistent campaign to reassert power in the Baltics.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis told his Parliament that Moscow must return all seized buildings to resume a dialogue with the Baltic republic.

RIGA, Latvia, U.S.S.R.—Latvian President Anatolijs Gorbunovs in a major concession to Moscow said Wednesday he had accepted Mikhail Grobachev's demand for a referendum on independence in the Baltic republic.

Gorbunovs, briefing his legislature and reporters on Tuesday's peace talks at the Kremlin, also said he agreed with the Soviet president that some laws passed by the nationalist controlled Parliament might have to be reviewed and possibly changed.

But the Latvian leader said he insisted to Gorbachev that his people could not "return to zero" and accept the authority of the Soviet Constitution in the republic, which was annexed in 1940 along with neighboring Estonia and Lithuania.

SALT LAKE CITY—Utah's restrictive abortion bill, which would virtually eliminate elective abortions, steamrolled through the state Senate Wednesday on a 23-5 vote.

The bill now goes to the House Health Committee on Thursday. It is expected on the floor of the House by Friday.

Gov. Norm Bangerter said he is anxiously waiting for its arrival on his desk.

"It is my intention to sign the bill the day it arrives at my desk," Bangerter said.

SAN FRANCISCO—A "reasonable woman" should decide what constitutes sexual harassment because so-called sex-blind legal standards are biased toward males, a federal appeals court ruled Wednesday.

The U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals said commonly held standards of what is appropriate conduct between men and women often fail to take into account the fact women are almost always the victims of sexual assault and perceive comments and actions differently than men.

NEW YORK—Eleven AIDS activists were arrested Wednesday in roving demonstrations calling for the government to "fight AIDS, not Arabs."

On Tuesday the protesters, spearheaded by members of the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, stormed onto the live set of the "CBS Evening News," forcing the network to black out the program temporarily.

WASHINGTON—The Persian Gulf crisis was frequently cited as a reason for declining economic activity in most of the nation, the Federal Reserve said Wednesday in its report on current economic conditions.

"The Persian Gulf situation is frequently cited as a key determinant of both current and future economic activity," the Fed said in its report, which was compiled the day before war broke out in the Middle East.

Officials say state's prepaid college program is doing OK

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

The state's prepaid college tuition program is financially sound and doing well despite recent publicity about pitfalls in the program, officials said Wednesday.

"(Participants) are convinced Florida schools are the type of schools they want their kids going to," the program's Executive Director, William Montjoy, said at a Florida House of Representatives postsecondary education committee meeting.

The program, now in its third year, allows residents to lock in today's tuition and dormitory rates at state colleges and universities with lump sum or monthly payments years before their children reach college age.

But with state schools and universities already busting at the seams with overcrowding, some have questioned whether the state can guarantee students who have already paid for an education a place in the system. And if the state cannot honor that committment, it would have to dip in to tax dollars to reimburse students left out in the cold.

If a student enrolled in the prepaid college tuition program chooses not to attend a state university, the parents' money would be reimbursed without interest. If the beneficiary is not admitted to a state school and decides to go to a community college, the state would refund the difference in tuition. If a student receives a scholarship, they would be reimbursed what they originally paid plus interest. If a beneficiary is turned away because of insufficient housing, they would be reimbursed at the current cost of an education.

Bill Shade, vice chancellor of public affairs for the state Board of Regents, said dormitory space is limited but added that all nine state universities are attempting to build more dormitories.

Montjoy said the state is at no risk of losing money on the program because the seven-member prepaid college board "assumed a higher inflation rate than we've had" and currently has an excess of $27 million in its fund.

According to Montjoy, the program is doing well but the number of people taking advantage of it has decreased from 58,000 in 1988 to "maybe 28,000 this year."

Forty-one percent of the parents who have prepaid their childrens' education make more than $50,000 a year.

Only in-state students can participate in the program. However, students who live out-of-state and are products of a divorce can take advantage of the program as long as one of their parents is a Florida resident.

In order for the program to continue to succeed, it must earn interest above the rate at which tuition increases.

The state can discontinue the program at any time. But it would be obligated to honor the contracts of beneficiaries for five years. Any beneficiary beyond the 5-year limit would get refunds, plus the minimum prevailing interest.

Local residents bleed in support of troops

BY BERNARD GRAHAM
STAFF WRITER

Residents in Tallahassee have found another way to show their support for the U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia—with their own blood.

"We're seeing more donors when we go to blood drives," said Leon County Blood Bank Executive Director Jeanne Dariotis. "We normally everyday have to make direct phone calls asking donors to come and donate, but we have not had to do this in the last week."

Many Florida State University students who donated blood on campus Wednesday in the bank's mobile unit said they were motivated to do so because of concern about the troops.

"I gave for Desert Storm," said Deana Martin, who has been donating for two years. "It's the only thing I can do besides writing to the soldiers. I wish there was more I could do but I guess even the little things can help."

Tony Gallo, an FSU economics major who donated blood for the first time, agreed.

"I guess giving blood would help out," said Gallo, who was said his roommate urged him to donate. "I need to do what I can to support the troops because I never know if I'm going."

The local blood bank and others throughout the nation have been requested by the U.S. Pentagon to donate 25 pints of blood each week to the military blood program, Dariotis said.

"We at this point are having no trouble meeting our commitment," Dariotis said. "We've had an increased interest by groups to sponsor blood drives since the war began."

Phyllis Helms, a mobile unit team leader for the local blood bank, said there's been a noticeable increase of new donors.

"At some of the places we go, we've had people to donate for the first time because of Desert Storm," she said. "A lot of the new donors felt that was what they could do to help."

To emphasize her point, Helms said half of the 30 FSU students who donated blood Wednesday were new donors. And at a scheduled drive at one of the state agencies last week, 28 people showed although only 16 people had been signed up to donate.

Since there has been a limited number of U.S. casualties so far, a special emergency appeal for blood has not been issued by the American Association of Blood Banks.

The association is the national organization which represents more than 2,400 blood banks, hospital based blood centers, and transfusion services nationwide. Leon County's blood bank is a member of the association.

Though people are donating blood for soldiers in the Persian Gulf, there is no guarantee the blood will get there, Dariotis said. The units of blood donated will also be used for regular patient needs.

Donated blood will also be used to help military personnel and their immediate family members from this area.

Dariotis said she is pleased with the local response and hopes it continues.

"Whether the blood is being used by the military or locally, there is still a need," she said. "The war has brought an increase of people who never donated before and that's nice."

Police from page 1

"We do a lot of training on conflict management, making the arrest, everything from the mental aspect to defending yourself," Simmons said.

We [illegible] communication skills and trying to assist with [illegible] problems and aggression," Hamblet said. "The end result is [illegible] shorter [illegible] the contact with the public."

High fives plentiful in FAMU's big rout of Florida Memorial

BY MICHAEL HARRIS
STAFF WRITER

Rodney Davis and Reginald Finney are playing with NCAA tournament enthusiasm—maybe even at the same height as UNLV's Larry Johnson and Greg Anthony.

"After every good play we make, we give each other a high five," said Finney, who has a special pact with Davis much like that of Johnson and Anthony. The Rattlin' Rebels scoring greats started giving out high fives in the NCAA final last year vs. Duke—it became a model for Finney and Davis.

The Rattlers star tandem dished out high fives all night Wednesday en route to their team's easy 97-78 victory over Florida Memorial before 3,493 at Gaither Gym.

The non-conference win moved FAMU to 7-8 and restored it with some confidence after a miserable road trip, in which it went 1-2.

Finney and Davis took control at the outset—Davis on offense and Finney on defense. Finney made his presence felt quickly with two monster blocks in the first four minutes. On the other side of the court, Davis led scorers at halftime with 19 points. Closing the first half in style was Finney with a backward 180 degree slam, giving the Rattlers a 49-41 lead.

Despite FAMU's 60 percent first half shooting, the Lions stayed close—thanks mostly to FAMU's poor defensive play, which allowed Florida Memorial to shoot .515 percent from the field.

"Defensively, we haven't been giving weak side help or stopping the penetrator," FAMU Coach Willie Booker said.

In the second half, the Rattlers continued to stay hot, and this time they upped their defensive intensity. FAMU shut the Lions down to 37 second half points and only 42 percent shooting.

Leading the Rattlers 61 percent overall shooting were Davis with 28 points, Kelvin Daniels with 20, DeLon Turner with 23, and Finney with 16.

FAMU plays next at South Carolina St. on Saturday.

Arkansas was big, but Metro foes are bigger for Seminoles

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

While the Arkansas game may have seemed like an important test for the Florida State basketball team, tonight's game is actually much more significant.

The Seminoles take on Memphis State at 8:30 p.m. at the Mid-South Coliseum in Memphis, Tenn.—a game which has important ramifications in the Metro Conference race.

FSU, 9-6 overall and 3-2 in the Metro, needs to beat the Tigers, 9-7 and 2-2, in order to stay within reach of Metro leader Souther Miss., which owns a 5-0 league mark.

There might not be a tougher place for the Seminoles to play than Memphis, where the Seminoles have won only six times in 20 attempts. FSU Coach Pat Kennedy is 0-4 on the Tigers' home court.

The Seminoles meet a familiar nemesis tonight in MSU guard Elliot Perry, who's made a habit of giving FSU fits.

Perry, a 6-foot senior, leads the Tigers in scoring with 18.3 points per game, and, as usual, he leads MSU in assists. The lightening quick Perry scored his career high of 33 points against the Seminoles, and he averages 20 points per game in seven career contests vs. FSU.

A key to the game will be how well FSU guard Charlie Ward matches up against Perry. Ward, a 6-foot-1 freshman, has led the Seminoles to a 4-1 mark since he took over the starting point guard position. Ward hasn't scored all that much, but intangibles like his seven steals Monday against Arkansas have made the difference.

FSU forward Michael Polite has shown signs of breaking out of his scoring slump in the last two games. Polite scored in double figures the last two games after hitting double digits just twice in the

FAMU center Polly Innerarity was named the NSWAC's Player of the Week, averaging 20.5 points and 11 rebounds in two games

Rattled Rattlerettes face Stetson tonight

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

After letting a chance to take over first place in its conference slip by last weekend, the Florida A&M women's basketball team tries to take its frustrations out on perhaps the worst team in the country.

The Rattlerettes, 8-6 and 3-2 in the New South Women's Athletic Conference, will take on Stetson, 0-15 and 0-4, tonight at 7 p.m. at Gaither Gym.

While this may seem like a classic time for a letdown for the Rattlerettes, FAMU Assistant Coach Donald White doesn't believe it'll happen.

"We don't fear a letdown in this game," White said. "We've had good practices all week, and the players are ready to come out and do their job."

FAMU lost a tough one to the NWSAC's leader, Florida International, last Saturday by a score of 65-61. A Rattlerette win would have given them a half-game lead over FIU, which is now 3-0 in conference play.

Instead, FAMU finds itself in fourth place in the conference, behind Mercer and Miami, both of which the Rattlerettes have defeated.

The play of center Polly Innerarity has been a big reason for the success of the Rattlerettes. The 6-foot-2 junior was named the NSWAC Player of the Week after averaging 20.5 points and 11 rebounds in two games.

According to White, Innerarity's hard work in practice is starting to pay dividends.

"Polly has improved tremendously since the beginning of the season," White said. "She has been working hard in practice, and it's carrying over into the games. Polly is consistently getting rebounds and scoring points inside."

Gulf war affects endangered sea turtles, as well

BY BRETT BUELL
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The War in the Gulf is hitting home in a variety of ways. Even the Florida Hog Hunter's Association has been affected—which means endangered sea turtles will also suffer a blow.

Because of U.S. military crackdown, Doug Flott and other members of the FHHA will not be able to hunt hogs on Cape Canaveral, and, in turn, control the hog population. Firearms and non-essential persons are not permitted on military land in times of war.

"It doesn't look like we'll be able to get out there this year. We're very disappointed," Flott said.

This means, overpopulation will occur among the hogs, and they'll look for alternate food sources, primarily sea-turtle eggs.

Normally, with the approval of the government, members of the hog hunters group make weekend trips to the Cape from January to late May to hunt. This controls the hog populations to the point that the animal needs only its natural food sources—acorns and palmetto berries.

When out of these foods, the hogs can smell the sea-turtle nests and seek out the eggs and hatchlings. But according to Don George, a Natural Resource Manager and biologist with the state of Florida, scent isn't the only way the hogs find the nests.

"We theorized that the hogs can hone in on the stakes, so we started moving them one meter to the left or right. But the hogs will go to the stake and then circle outward until they find the nest," he said.

"We'll do whatever it takes to protect the sea turtles, no matter what the cost."

—Natural Resource Manager - Don George

Hogs are the only land mammal other than primates that have such cognitive abilities. Because of this ability, even when the Cape lands are not greatly overpopulated with hogs, the animals still seek the nests.

"It's learned behavior. A few older hogs will take the younger ones down to the nests and show them what's there. Sea-turtles are not a normal food source for hogs," George said.

Three species of sea-turtle normally nest at Cape Canaveral each year, laying their eggs around May. Two are classified as endangered and one is threatened.

The Air Force is required to protect the turtle species under the Endangered Species Act, but the turtles receive better protection when the hogs are hunted. The FHHA hunts free of charge.

"We could allow for the extra destruction of nests this year if security requires it," George said. But George said he does not believe this extra destruction will significantly affect the animal populations.

But if the nest devastation does have an impact, the government will have to use its own personnel to destroy the hogs.

"We'll do whatever it takes to protect the sea-turtles, no matter what the cost," George said.

But there is a chance Flott and the FHHA will get to hunt on the Cape land.

"They're (Cape Canaveral) on really tight security right now, but they might give us special permission to hunt. But it doesn't look good," Flott said.

For frustrated hunters disappointed at the lack of public hunting land in Northwest Florida, the Florida Game and Fish Commission has recently created new Type I management land.

The Commission has reached a tentative agreement with Champion International Corp. for land in Escambia and Santa Rosa Counties.

The site is currently known as the Escambia River Type II Wildlife Management Area and includes 56,000 acres owned by Champion and 18,000 acres owned by the Northwest Florida Management district.

In the Type II system, private landowners operate the land in cooperation with the Game Commission. The land owners set fees on top of the normal licenses.

With Type I land, the Game Commission operates the property in accordance to state policies.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Illusion and glamour play a key role in your career and financial success. Keep your image shiny-bright! A family member provides valuable business suggestions in May. Your powers of persuasion will reach an all-time high next August and September. Be patient and a loved one will come around. Travel is favored after Nov. 1 so long as you keep expenses within limits. A cross-country trip may be in the cards. Give mate options.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: gymnast Mary Lou Retton, evangelist Oral Roberts, singer Neil Diamond, author Edith Wharton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although certain decisions are hard to make, they will lead to rapid progress in career and romance. Your intuition is accurate now. An older person will be flattered by your overtures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An ideal time to travel or explore a financial opportunity. A teen-ager asks questions. Your partner will give you every chance to make good on a promise. Investigate a job offer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A friend helps you resurrect an old project. Now profits are possible. Plan a trip carefully for the best results. A change in lifestyle will help romance. Press your advantage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Communications are favored. Your words have more power than you realize. Stay on the go — things are jumping! Do not read too much into what a teen-ager says. Tenderness mends a rift.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Those in the arts should prosper. Burning and selling goods boosts your income. Make intelligent concessions and a dream will come true. Renew a friendship that meant a lot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Specific financial goals can be reached. Your powers peak. You can unite the family again. Crusading for a cause gets your juices flowing. Romance thrives when you confide your hopes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Remember to honor the wishes of older family members and VIPs today. Clear up misunderstandings before they grow. Conferences provide employment leads. Update your resume to include recent achievements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A call or letter could set up a business meeting or love connection. Joint purchases are to your benefit. Red tape impravels, letting you move on. A trip will be successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone may try to overcharge you. Although breaking with tradition is difficult, new methods will improve the bottom line. A love relationship is everything you hoped.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone from your past is trying to get in touch with you. Distant real estate dealings can be lucrative. Be cautious when making decisions related to work and health. Consult experts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make the first move if you want an active social or love life. Call someone with an invitation to see the sights. Sharing an adventure brings you closer to the one you adore.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A favorable financial trend gives you more breathing room. Take a chance on a venture proposed by a friend or relative. The pieces of a romantic puzzle fall into place.

■ SPORTS IN BRIEF ■

Season tickets for Florida State baseball are now on sale. Students can purchase season grandstand tickets for $30, limit one per student I.D. Guest season grandstand tickets cost $75. Tickets can be purchased at the Moore Athletic Center between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. For more information call 644-1830.

previous eight games.

Seminole guards Chuck Graham and Aubry Boyd seem to have finally found their range. In the last three games, Graham is averaging 15.3 points per game and has hit 50 percent of his shots in that time.

Boyd, a senior, is averaging 15.4 points a contest over the last five games and has made 13 3-pointers over the last four games.

FSU NOTEBOOK

as well as Charlie Ward has played at point guard, don't expect to see him in that role much next season. On his weekly television show, FSU Coach Pat Kennedy said that junior college recruit Sam Cassels will be next year's point guard. Cassels has been called the best juco player in the nation by Dick Vitale and various magazines.

scouts from the NBA's Boston Celtics, Orlando Magic and Cleveland Cavaliers were in attendance at last Monday's FSU-Arkansas game—of course, scouting Arkansas.

several FSU players have relatives now stationed in the Persian Gulf. Aubry Boyd's father, Master Sgt. Cedric Boyd, is in the Army and is now over there. Rodney Dobard has a cousin, and Charlie Ward has three cousins and an adopted brother in the Army, all stationed in Saudi Arabia.

For the season, Innerarity leads FAMU in rebounding with an average of 8.1 per game and ranks second in scoring with 13.4 points a contest.

Senior Donyale Ferguson leads the Rattlerettes with 16.1 points per game, but has been mired in a shooting slump which has her hitting just 40 percent from the floor.

Donyale is in a slight slump, but she has been working very hard on her shooting in practice," White said. "We feel that she will be in top form again real soon."

House speaker says no to out-of-state students

Out-of-state students who'd be able to attend any of Florida's nine state universities if House Speaker T.K. Wetherell gets his way.

Wetherell, R-Daytona Beach, made the announcement Thursday morning at the first "Education Summit" between the Board of Regents and the Florida Student Association.

Wetherell said out-of-state students should pay higher rates due to the Persian Gulf and he cuts that fee increase. Out-of-state students currently pay the entire cost to attend the state university system through tax dollars.

"We may well have to say we'll take Florida students first because the bucks just ain't here," Wetherell said while addressing the group on the 22nd floor of the Capitol.

No formal bill has been filed, but Ron Saunders, chair of the House Appropriations Committee, said one will be filed soon. If passed, it will go into effect in 1992.

Saunders, D-Monroe, said the moratorium would be temporary and would apply to undergraduates. But he said it wouldn't be a blanket moratorium and exceptions would be made for minority students and students wanting to enroll in math and science related programs such as engineering and nursing.

Wetherell also told the BOR and FSA that they "will not see a tuition increase in the House budget this year," and that he refuses to raise tuitions.

"That ain't a negotiating position," he said. "It's a position I want to go home with."

House Speaker T.K. Wetherell

There are approximately 174,000 students in the state's nine universities. Roughly 10 percent are from other states. At some schools, namely Florida A&M University, out of state students make up approximately 20 percent of the student body population.

According to SUS Chancellor Charlie Reed, almost 14 percent of Florida State University's students are from other states.

Pat Riordan, spokesperson for the BOR, said out-of-state students pay three times as much in tuition as in-state students. And if the moratorium on out-of-state students is passed, Riordan said, the university system will be more in the red than it already is.

"Wetherell sent a shock wave to parents and other legislators and the BOR," he said. "Shock received. He hit us over the head with a two by four."

Reed agreed. He said banning non-residents from taking classes would not only

War continues as Saudis shoot down Iraqi fighters

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The war against Iraq intensified in the Persian Gulf Thursday with Saudi F-15 fighters shooting down their first enemy planes and U.S. forces sinking an Iraqi minesweeper and forcing Iraqi troops off an island near Kuwait.

And as the war entered its second week, U.S.-led forces continued their punishing bombardment of Iraq, with air fields a primary target. U.S. officials said three Iraqi vessels had been sunk in a naval encounter in the Gulf.

The Royal Saudi Air Force scored its first kill in the war by downing two Iraqi planes armed with air-to-air missiles in the early hours of the day, Saudi officials said.

They said intercepted by two Saudi F-15s advancing on the area and two of the Iraqi planes were shot down by one of the Saudi pilots, officials said. Western military officials said a third Iraqi plane was lost.

Saudi General Assaf Alsaleh said at a news briefing in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia,

Review committee votes against CPE photographs

See editorial, page 4

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

If a student committee has it's way, the Center for Participant Education will not print a catalog containing two controversial pictures.

"I'm against student money being spent on these pictures," said Shay Alexander, city president for the student chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and member of the committee. I think something like a Live Crew is vulgar. I don't spend my money on them. I want a voice in what my money's being spent on."

Page three of the CPE catalog features a colorized painting of a nude white woman and a Maggi Gallery photo of a black man dressed in a suit with his genitals exposed.

Florida State University Vice President for Student Affairs John Dalton ordered the publication to be held until a student committee was formed to review the pages, saying the pages should be censored.

The committee voted Thursday that the pictures should be allowed to remain in the catalog.

Committee members were Missy Lalish, a student senator from the College of Fine Arts; Derek Paige, minority affairs advocate for student government; Kim Weeks, representative of the Panhellenic Council; Dear Horn, director of the FSU Women's Center; and Jennifer Smith, a senator from the School of Music.

Though the committee has no legal authority, a report of its vote will be sent to Dalton, according to Mat Bush, the committee's chair and student senate president's executive assistant.

Kelly Peters

Dalton previously stated that he would base the committee's recommendation on serious consideration before making his decision. Dalton's decision will be published in the paper.

Horn pointed out that one picture, though the name was not mentioned, appeared in the previous Miss Black FSU pageant. She added that the women there decision won't hold any weight with Dalton.

Lalish, the only dissenting voter, said she can see how the photos might offend some but added that she is "passionately against censorship."

Paige said that CPE should be more responsible.

"The key issue is the responsibility, guaranteed, of what will happen if we get our stamp of approval on this to print," Paige said. "CPE has consistently championed the rights of artists. How could we protect the expressed... CPE tarnishes reputations by printing this stuff. CPE should find students who're willing to stand forth [on] issues."

CPE Director Kelly Peters said the committee was "composed primarily..."

She said eight members of the committee are Seminole Party persons, Kelly said.

The Seminole Party is the majority party in student government. And CPE said she does not have a number of these members.

"I don't CPE personally, the one is [illegible] I'm not making the [illegible] every night, everyday," said student body President Tim Trawick, a Seminole Party member. "They don't want to [illegible]

City may have violated DER rules in using chlorine to clean up spill

BY DOUG MARTIN
STAFF WRITER

In possible violation of Department of Environmental Regulation rules, the city of Tallahassee has used chlorine, lime and pine oil to disinfect recent, massive raw sewage spills into sensitive wetland areas.

"If you introduce chlorine in large doses it is potentially more damaging to the enviroment than the raw sewage it's used to treat," said Gerry Neubauer, who heads the DER branch office which oversees the Tallahassee area.

On Jan. 13, almost 4 million gallons of raw sewage overflowed from the city's sewer system into Black Swamp in the southern part of the city. In a report filed with DER, city officials said they expected the spill to be contained within the swamp.

But recent heavy rains have pushed the sewage from that spill—as well as a lesser spill of 300,000 gallons that occurred on Jan. 19—into Munson Slough, a wetlands area which flows into Lake Munson.

In response to the first spill, the city's department of underground utilities dumped 300 pounds of chlorine at three different overflow sites over a 48-hour period. Another 37 pounds was dumped after the second spill.

According to James Peters, head of underground utilities for the city, that's standard procedure. The chlorine, he said, disinfects the raw sewage so that it doesn't present a health hazard to the public. It quickly dissipates and does not pose any risk to the environment, he added.

"This is not something to be feared," said Peters. But at least one local expert disagreed.

Chlorine causes a number of long-lived, toxic byproducts that could harm life in the lake, said Skip Livingston, a Florida State University biology professor.

"Three hundred pounds is a lot for a lake that size," he added.

"Yes, that is a lot," Neubauer agreed.

City officials said they knew dumping the chlorine was in violation of DER standards.

"We fully expect DER to take us to task for this, but we are doing the best we can," said Andy Davis, acting supervisor of wastewater collection.

Neubauer said DER is investigating the matter, and may take action against the city if the chlorine levels are found to exceed state standards. He said DER could fine the city and force it to correct the violation.

Neubauer said DER would take into account the time period in which the chlorine was applied and the extenuating circumstances. The effects of the chlorine still have to be determined by the agency's chemists before a decision can be made.

"DER does not like any chlorine to be dumped into a wetlands area, but we also don't like raw sewage being dumped in either," he said.

The city's use of chlorine has lakeside residents—already up in arms about the sewer overflow—even more angered.

"Every time I turn around they're dumping into Munson," said John Gibby. "They treat it like it was a swimming pool."

Community activist wants inner city residents to take back the streets

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST. NEWS EDITOR

While violent conflict rages in the Persian Gulf, another war is being waged in Tallahassee's inner city, according to a local community activist.

"We are very concerned about the visible drug use that flows throughout the inner city community," said Musa Jugger, who has proposed a community-based program to deal with the problems.

Jugger said the scenario is particularly sad because the problems, which include blatant drug pushing, involve young children.

"The young kids see them and say 'Look, I can make some money,'" Jugger said at a Wednesday City Commission meeting. "Young people are selling drugs openly, like a drive through."

Jugger, who heads the Inner City Committee on the Poor, a Tallahassee community organization, hoped to persuade city commissioners to assign walking police officers to several inner city neighborhoods, including the Basin, Texas and Holton street areas.

In his presentation, Jugger told commissioners his own house was broken into and vandalized by a teenager paid by drug dealers. He said the incident was a result of his anti-drug activity in the community.

But commissioners, while agreeing to juggle police patrols in an effort to redirect patrols to the areas Jugger suggested, would not agree to 24-hour beats.

Commissioner Jack McLean, who agreed that increased patrols in the area are needed, said the city needs to look into ways other than law enforcement to settle the problems of drugs and crime.

'I'm asking for a unified effort to get the drugs out of there. It's madness and this is Tallahassee. This is not Harlem or the South Side of Chicago.'
—Musa Jugger

He suggested that in the future, more city money go into youth development programs to prevent children from becoming involved in problems related to crime.

"It's not just a policing problem," McLean said at the meeting Wednesday. "We can keep putting a lot of money in it and still not solve the problem."

Police Chief Mel Tucker agreed. He acknowledged drug problems, prostitution and other crime in the area, but said the department has a drain on manpower. Several officers have been called to active duty in Operation Desert Storm and double-staffed at the airport as a terrorism precaution, making such patrols in the inner city impossible without hiring more officers at taxpayers' expense.

"You're talking about having to hire five people to fill one beat 24 hours a day, seven days a week," Tucker said. "I'd have to pull 30 officers from regular patrol." As a result of the commission's decision, Jugger has gone to the residents of the Basin Street community in an effort to "take back the streets" of Tallahassee's inner city.

The program, not yet fully developed, will include patrolling by neighborhood residents in a "neighborhood watch" program, monitoring drug pushers and distributing leaflets to intimidate and discourage people committing crime in the area.

Jugger also plans to meet with local law enforcement officers to explore ways in which police can become more visible in the affected communities and work with residents.

"I'm asking for a unified effort to get the drugs out of there," said Jugger, who named the plan "Operation Take Back the Streets." "It's madness, and this is Tallahassee. This is not Harlem or the South Side of Chicago."

Rashad Mujahid, a member of the Inner City Committee and owner of All Star Day Care Center, said such a program could be successful.

"It could be, with the proper support," Mujahid said. "It's going to have to be some kind of community-based effort. The police can only do so much."

THE PHYRST PLANS A SUPPORT RALLY

The Phyrst has been painted red, white and blue to show support for American soldiers fighting in the Middle East.

On Friday, January 25 at 4:00 P.M., The Phyrst will host a rally showing support for the soldiers stationed in the Persian Gulf. The staff of The Phyrst would like to encourage FSU staff, students, and others to be there on Friday to participate in the shooting of a photograph which will then be made into a personalized postcard. These postcards will be available, on Monday, for you to sign with a personalized message and then will be sent to the soldiers.

This rally will not be a debate on whether we should or should not be in the war. Rather, it is a rally to try to show positive support for OUR soldiers stationed in the Persian Gulf.

The Phyrst has always stood behind its customers and feels this is a small way it can help its customers express positive support for their relatives, friends, and associates who are involved in this war. The picture will be taken in the front of the building, with the building acting as a patriotic backdrop. Small American flags will be distributed to participants. The Phyrst APPRECIATES and THANKS you for your support in this rally. "Support Our Soldiers."

Let it roll

So much for a free university.

The decision of a Florida State University student review committee to recommend that a controversial Center for Participant Education catalog page not be printed was just plain wrong.

Some committee members who voted in favor of the ban found the cover's reproduction of a Courbet nude sexist. Others found the Mapplethorpe photo of a black man with his genitals exposed racist. Still others found the whole thing obscene.

That's OK. They have every right to believe what they want to. But they don't have the right to thrust their sense of right and wrong upon their peers, which is exactly what they did.

Maybe the cover is racist and sexist. Maybe it is in poor taste. Or maybe committee members are just stifled by absurd Puritanical beliefs about nudity. With the cover apparently headed for the garbage bin, no one will ever know.

Students have a right to decide for themselves what's right and wrong. To not allow them that opportunity strikes at the very heart of a what a university stands for: the free expression and discussion of ideas, no matter how controversial.

If the cover is possibly racist and sexist, or obscene, let students have a look and talk about why. If it is offensive, students are quite capable of throwing it in the recycling bin themselves. That a university is actually wasting time wrestling with censorship, instead of debating the merits of the subject at hand, just goes to show how far it has already deviated from its principles.

The catalog may yet roll off the presses with the controversial page intact. Vice President of Student Affairs Jon Dalton will make the final decision. We hope he chooses to ignore the student committee's recommendations.

Its members don't speak for their peers.

Let 'em know

In the wake of the Persian Gulf war, students on both sides of the political spectrum have participated in rallies and demonstrations across the nation.

The recent surge in activism is encouraging, although it's unfortunate that it took a war to bring it about. And once all the war hoopla fades away, students will probably go right back to being apathetic and uninvolved.

But students at Florida State and Florida A&M have a unique opportunity to influence state government. The Capitol is within walking distance from the campus and, during session, there are meetings going on all hours of the day.

The state Legislature is gearing up for the start of its annual session next month, and most representatives and senators are in town. Now is the time to call them up or go by their offices and let them know how you feel.

Outside both the House and Senate chambers there are directories listing the names of all legislators, the districts they represent, their Tallahassee and hometown phone numbers and their office locations in the Capitol.

Florida's university students are facing the prospect of no summer classes because of three rounds of state budget cuts, and the classes that are offered during other semesters are always overcrowded. Furthermore, tuition will probably go up but financial aid won't.

Students complain about these issues all the time. But that's the problem—all they do is complain. Instead, students should take action. And now is the time.

Readers respond to Wayne's statements

Editor:

It was with utter disgust that I and every other Jew with whom I have talked read the anti-Arab statements made by Scott Wayne in the Flambeau article on Jewish reactions to the bombing of Israel. The last thing the current situation needs is inflammatory rhetoric that perpetuates racist stereotypes. The Jewish people have suffered so much from such attitudes directed toward them in their history that it is appalling and revolting to hear a Jew direct them toward others.

Instead of promoting hatred and counseling violence, Mr. Wayne would do well to listen to and join those Jews, Arabs and others working toward a just and peaceful solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Some might say that it is hopelessly naive to speak of peace in the midst of a tragic war which only appears to have hardened the attitudes and justified the mutual suspicions among both Israelis and Palestinians. Hardliners on both sides are claiming that they were right all along, but, as in the past, they have nothing to offer future generations but the certainty of more violence and eventual mutual destruction.

Instead of giving in to feelings of hatred and intolerance such as those expressed by Mr. Wayne, we need to fight the racist stereotypes and dehumanization of the other that have always been accelerated by war. Just as important, we need to struggle against the paralyzing despair that keeps us from envisioning steps that can lead to reconciliation, but they remain generally ignorant about possible strategies for achieving a lasting peace in the region based on principles that have long been recognized by most of the international community.

It is with that in mind that I repeat the principles of the Tallahassee Committee for Middle East Dialogue, a group founded over three years ago by Jews, Arabs and others to promote a better understanding of the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict:

1. An end to the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza and the recognition by Israel of the Palestine Liberation Organization as the representative of the Palestinian people.

2. The right of Israel to exist in security and the right of the Palestinians to an independent state on the West Bank and Gaza.

3. Rejection of the stereotyping and demonization of the other that has created a climate for discrimination and violence.

If only a fraction of the vigor, determination, ingenuity and diplomatic pressure devoted to the preparation for war during the past six months had been applied the past three years to the Palestinian Israeli peace process, the world would be in a better position to keep the Gulf Crisis from turning into a regional and possibly global conflagration. Now that the fighting has begun in the Gulf, the least we can do here is battle the ignorance, hatred, racism and ethnocentrism that thrives on war and destroys any hope of a just and lasting peace.

David Levenson

Editor:

I am writing in response to comment made by a member of the Jewish Student Union concerning the character of Arab culture. It stated, "The Jewish people don't go off the deep end like the Arabs do ... and threaten to kill innocent people. We are a more humane culture than the Arabs are. Some of them are real evil."

Jewish culture found its start in the deserts of the Arab world. Since its birth, Jews have been the target of horrible acts of violence and terror. The false generalizations of the Nazi regime led to the slaughter and persecution of Jews and their sympathizers. It is one example of the terrible consequences generalizations can have. The death of millions of Jews is an act that plagues Jewish culture, and is a crime the world is not allowed to forget. It is unfortunate that the victims of such horror are now the perpetrators of even more generalizations.

Zionism is also part of Jewish culture. The Zionist movement has not only threatened the lives of Arabs, but has taken part in the massacre of Arabs and non-Arabs alike. Menachem Begin and Yitzhak Shamir were members of Israeli terrorist groups that not only killed Arabs, but killed over 40 Jews as well. On April 14, 1948, 254 Palestinian men, women and children were massacred by Israelis. On Oct. 29, 1956 the Israeli Defense Forces (IDF) massacred 43 Palestinians in one hour. Dozens of Palestinian refugee camps have been attacked by the IDF. Over 19,000 men, women and children were killed when Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982. Day after day the IDF enters the occupied territories. Innocent Arabs are harassed and indiscriminately beaten. Young children and senior citizens are left defenseless against the army's terror.

The history of terror and aggression imposed on Arabs by this "humane culture" is long and bloody. It is such a serious threat, that I was forced to think twice about writing this article for fear of retaliation. "Some of them are real evil."

Historically, Arab terrorism has been fewer, but no less horrific than that of its counterpart. All acts of terrorism are horrible, cowardly acts. But an attack on Arab culture cannot stand without the facts on Jewish culture stated on record.

that the Iraqi jets were believed loaded with missiles and bombs, probably including Exocet missiles capable of sinking ships.

"I was confident, I knew what I was doing," Capt. Ayedh Al-Shamrani said when asked how he left during the dogfight. "I was protecting my country. This was no time or place to feel fear."

Meanwhile, Air Force Lt. Col Phil Lacombe said at a Riyadh briefing that a Navy A-6 attack plane sank one of two Iraqi minesweepers in the Gulf east of the Kuwaiti-Saudi Arabian border. The second minesweeper hit a mine and sank.

A Navy helicopter on a rescue mission was fired upon from the nearby island of Qurah and returned the fire, Lacombe said, the resulting fight left three Iraqis killed and ended with 29 others giving up, he said.

There were no U.S. casualties. The Iraqi prisoners of war from the tiny island and 22 picked up in waters near the sunken minesweeper were taken to the guided missile frigate USS Curts, he said.

Hasan Abdul-Aziz, a spokesperson for the Kuwaiti Information Office, said the island itself is "not important, but it is significant that it is liberated. It is the first piece of land liberated from the Iraqis."

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein inspected his troops on the Kuwaiti front Wednesday, Baghdad Radio reported. The state-run radio also said 90 Iraqi troops had died during the last five days of the war.

The broadcast also quoted the Iraqi leader as saying that "with the help of God, we shall achieve victory and liberate Mecca and Medina"—Islam's holiest shrines, both located deep in Saudi Arabia.

One more American F-16 was lost, but the pilot ejected safely and was rescued from the Gulf, U.S. military officials said. That brought the number of U.S. planes down to 10 with 14 people listed as missing or dead. Seven other allied planes have been lost.

As of Thursday, coalition forces had shot down 19 Iraqi planes, and 29 Iraqi prisoners of war had been captured, U.S. officials said.

President Bush and other leaders kept up their efforts to keep people from becoming overly optimistic about a rapid end to the war.

"There is no clock" ticking off the seconds toward a predetermined time ending the war, Marine Maj. Gen. Martin Brandtner, vice director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said at an afternoon Pentagon briefing.

President's Continuing Education Award

STUDENTS: Can you name one FSU faculty member who has made a particularly significant contribution to the field of continuing education? The President's Continuing Education Award was established to recognize outstanding faculty contribution to this field. The award carries a $2000 honorarium.

If you know someone who deserves this award, please complete the nomination form below and return it by Feb. 1, 1991. A questionnaire will be sent to you on receipt of the nomination form; the questionnaire must be completed and returned for your nominee to be considered. Thank you for your participation!

NOTE: For the purpose of this award, continuing education is considered to be any teaching, research, publication or administrative activity related to the provision of outreach educational services. Such outreach educational services may include, but are not necessarily limited to, off-campus credit courses and programs, credit or non-credit workshops, non-credit professional development programs, conferences, seminars, lectures, symposia, colloquia, teleconferences and similar activities.

Education leaders want changes in state lottery

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

In the final weeks before the legislative session, education leaders will busy themselves trying to come up with legislation that will change the way lottery money is spent.

That was one of three proposals discussed at the Thursday morning "Education Summit" between the Florida Student Association and the Board of Regents.

Improved financial aid and minority recruitment retention programs were some other topics the student lobbying agency and the governing body of the State University System discussed.

According to Charles Edwards, chair of the BOR, state lottery money is divided so that only 13 to 14 percent of the proceeds go to education.

"(We) need to join together to do things about the lottery," Edwards said. "(We need to propose) legislation to reverse the split so 50 percent goes to education."

Edwards proposed that the purse be divided into two sections: one would pay for prize money and costs to run the lottery; the other would be split between community colleges, state universities and public schools.

Sean Pittman, director of the student lobbying group, said he was pleased with the results of the first summit.

"This is a great day for the university system," Pittman said. "This is a great day. My goal is for us to leave here as a family."

Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay addressed the groups for several minutes and told them he was pleased they were meeting before the legislative session begins.

"I think this state has the potential to be a world-class operation," he said. "You're part of what we're all about and we're going to do it."

SUS Chancellor Charles Reed said he was pleased the groups could meet and added that the board, like FSA, wants to provide students with as much as possible.

Tuition, jokingly referred to as the "T-word" during the three-hour meeting, wasn't discussed. Last year FSA and the Board disagreed on tuition hikes—FSA pushed for an 8-percent increase for in-state students 18-percent for out-of staters, while the board pushed for 10 percent and 20 percent respectively. The 10-20 percent increase was passed.

Moratorium

hurt the SUS, it would hurt students.

"We like to think we're a diverse, multicultural state," Reed said. "Having a mixture of students is adding wealth to the education system."

Reed said it is still early—the Legislative session hasn't convened—and Wetherell's moratorium is "pre-season practice."

"I'm looking at what comes down at the end of April and May," he said. "That's the Superbowl. That's what counts."

Several state university presidents at the meeting also expressed concern over the proposed moratorium. Most outspoken was outgoing FSU President Bernard Sliger.

"It's a quick, political, timely statement that appeals to a lot of people who don't think it through," he said. "It's a mistake if you openly buy it."

Daryl Parks, FAMU student body president, said he is opposed to a moratorium.

"I'm against this," Parks said. "I believe when the proposal's leaders have to hear what others say it will definitely give them a different perspective."

Trey Traviesa, FSU student body president, said he had mixed feelings about Wetherell's announcement. He said he understood Wetherell's commitment to in state students, but added "out of state students bring a lot to us and the community and that is beneficial."

Alternative art exhibit takes to the woods in San Luis

BY KEITH TRALINS
STAFF WRITER

The San Luis Archaeological and Historic Site will become a site for modern art Sunday afternoon.

"We want to make art work for the community and make the community work for art," said Dolores Poche, coordinator of the first alternative art exhibit at the San Luis site, 2020 W. Mission Road.

The purpose of holding the show at San Luis is to help bring the art closer to the community.

"We were looking for an area with trees and forests, where the audience would already be included," said Poche, one of the artists. "People would already be there for the park and it would bring other people to the park."

"It's always important to see what the local art is doing, especially in this setting," said Jo Anne Petrey, who will also have works on display. "We're also hoping to reach people who normally would not go to a gallery."

Because the exhibit will be on state grounds, there were certain rules imposed upon the artists. The two major rules are that no nudity may be shown and no digging or staking into the ground will be permitted. The latter was implemented so artifacts that may still be uncovered at the site are protected.

But the rules will not inhibit the artists, Poche said.

"Artists are pretty liberal," said Poche. "But over in state areas, we have to be aware of the community. It's a challenge thing. The challenge of working with rules and regulations."

The work that will be on display has been designed by the artists to fit the surrounding area. Art will be wrapped around trees, along nature trails or fitted in to the natural surroundings—to create a forum that is completely natural.

This has been done before in Tallahassee. In November, the same group of artists held a roadside drive-thru art exhibition, with the works posted on signs along the street so viewers didn't have to get out of their cars.

There will be 20 people showing their works at the San Luis show, including many Florida State University students and professors. The show will include "installations," a different type of art.

"It's an environmental piece," said Poche, explaining the concept. "It's not exactly two-dimensional and it's not exactly sculpture."

The show features some performance art, including Poche's own "The Bunny: The Lure." Other artists will be Mike Childs, Mark Wade, Ruth Wenner and the Critical Art Ensemble.

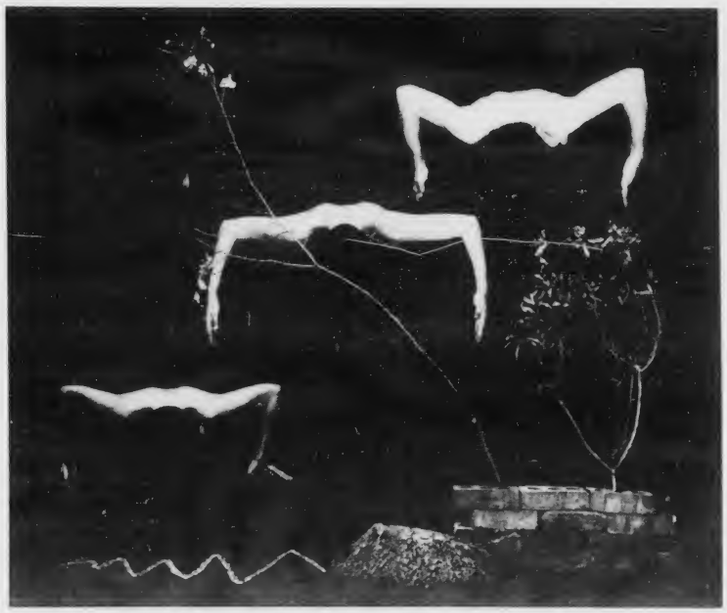
With shows like this and the roadside exhibit, the bridge between artists and the community is growing as the two come to work together, Petrey said.

"Artists aren't working for an elite audience," said Petrey. "The work they're doing is applicable to everyday man. In Renaissance times art was created for public places. Now it seems all art is locked up in galleries to be seen by a very small portion of society."

Petrey sees post-modern artists as the product of the joining of the community and its artists.

"Post-modern artists are much more socially involved. Artists worry about the environment," she said. "Artists are concerned politically and socially with what's going on in this world."

The Alternate Art Exhibit at the San Luis Archaeological and Historic Site starts at 2:00 p.m. Sunday and will run through the second of February. Dolores Poche will be performing her "The Bunny: The Lure," from 2 till 4 opening day only. Guests are encouraged to bring their own picnics. Parking will be allowed in the public parking lot only.



St. Marks (above), by Ruth Wenner, will be on display this weekend at San Luis.

Benefit for Tallahassee public radio

The creation of WFSU-FM 88.9, a 24 hour news and information public radio station, has filled a void in Tallahassee.

"People like having the option of listening to classical or the news when they want to," said station Manager Caroline Austin.

Tonight at 8, there will be a benefit concert for Tallahassee Public Radio, featuring the Florida State University Brass Quintet, a diverse offering of baroque, jazz, and the exotic sounds of the Chinese Ensemble.

As a member station to National Public Radio, American Public Radio and the British Broadcasting Corporation, WFSU-FM makes available such programs as All Things Considered, The Christian Science Monitor Report, The McNeil-Lehrer

Hamlet suffers some slings and arrows

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

The dashing Mel Gibson plays an emotional Hamlet.

There's something very curious in the opening scene of Franco Zeffirelli's Hamlet.

The entire royal family of Denmark is in royal burial chambers presiding over the funeral of King Hamlet. There, next to the coffin, is Queen Gertrude. To the side, is Hamlet's brother Claudius. And hidden in the shadows of the tomb is young Hamlet. Dark waves of depression and sadness cast all about.

Wait a minute! That scene was never in William Shakespeare's play. Neither were the next two scenes.

Those familiar with Hamlet will be very confused by these opening scenes and the many other changes Zeffirelli and co-screenwriter Christopher De Vore made to the film.

Hamlet has survived as the greatest play ever written for more than 400 years. Then in 1990, Zeffirelli and De Vore come along and change it as if it weren't good enough to be transformed onto the screen.

But what the director, who has reached acclaim by bringing Bard's Romeo and Juliet and The Taming of the Shrew to screen, seems to forget is: Hamlet has survived for this long because of the delicate balance in which Shakespeare wrote it. Just about every word has two meanings and the play spins on the doubt and pain in Hamlet's muddled mind.

By interfering with this delicate balance, Zeffirelli has destroyed much of the conflict within Hamlet's own psyche. Zeffirelli also removed much of the subtexts which scurry under the main plot of Hamlet's coming to grips with, and trying to avenge his father's murder.

The pity of it all is that the performances in this film are incredible. Mel Gibson, often derided since he took on the role of young Hamlet, gave the performance of his life. Although there is very little conflict left in the part, Gibson plays the role with all the emotion he can muster. He is one of the few actors who immersed himself in the part enough to emanate the complex feelings brewing in Hamlet's soul. He even adds a bit of humor to the part, which seems to be a new interpretaion.

Glenn Close, as Hamlet's mother Gertrude, also turns in one of her best performances. Although she is a little too young and the basic marrow of her part has been eaten away, she still manages to pull off a wonderful performance.

A good example of the the ill-effects of the Zeffirelli De Vore mutilation, comes in a scene between Close and Gibson. In the play, there is an underlying attraction between Hamlet and his mother, a kind of subdued Oedipal complex. With all the hacking going on with the typewriter, this subtext is lost. To make up for this, Zeffirelli has the two kiss long and passionately. This scene is totally out of place and really wasn't intended. Even the most radical of interpreters would have avoided such a miscarriage as this scene.

Helena Bonham Carter (A Room with a View) is heartbreaking as Ophelia. She is the most tragic of characters in Hamlet. Paul Scofield also brings new meaning to the ghost Hamlet. Before he was a stark, stiff faced character, but Scofield gives his character the pain of a wondering soul; the burden of the afterlife can be seen in the expressive lines of his face. And finally, Alan Bates gives an interesting, but as in the case of every character in Zeffirelli's film, declawed version of Claudius.

These performances were ruined—as were the wonderful visuals (shot mostly on location in Scotland)—because of Zeffirelli's poison pen. Hamlet could have been a very interesting film. It's faster paced in its trimmed down version (two hours and 15 minutes), but the play is so muddled it's not really worth the effort to see.

Hamlet* is playing at the Cinema Twin. Call 385-9000 for more info.

Is it fate or conspiracy that links Jack Ruby, Lee Harvey Oswald, Lyndon B. Johnson and J. Edgar Hoover (pictured left) to the murder of John F. Kennedy?

Crossfire still begs the question: Who really killed John F. Kennedy?

BY JACK MCCARTHY
STAFF WRITER

COMMENTARY
BOOK REVIEW

Crossfire
By Jim Marrs
Carroll & Graff, $25.95

As a certified Kennedy assassination buff, my heart goes pitter patter when my eyes fall upon a new book on the murder of the American century.

Unfortunately, more often than not, after reading them, a wave of existential dread sweeps over me. It stems from the realization that many, if not most of the authors of books in the Who Killed JFK genre, too often fit the psychological stereotype of the obsessed fanatic. This is especially true in the case of the second generation of Warren Commission debunkers.

Humorist Paul Krassner captured this phenomena beautifully in his poignant joke about comedian-turned-assassination-freak, Mort Sahl. The joke refers to the bizarre exhumation of Lee Harvey Oswald several years ago, after a buff claimed an imposter was in Oswald's grave. Quipped Krassner: "They opened up Oswald's grave and found Mort Sahl inside."

It is the Krassner principle I apply in judging Who Killed JFK books: Could this author replace Mort Sahl as the punchline in Krassner's joke, I ask myself? If not, I take the book seriously.

Jim Marrs, author of Crossfire: The Plot That Killed Kennedy might not be found in Oswald's grave, but a quote in the preface suggests that he may be found in JFK's.

"I seek not only the killers of President Kennedy, I seek the persons who killed Camelot . . . "

Hero-worship hyperbole such as this gives the reader the impression that the author is not engaged in fact finding, but psychoneuroses. And worse, Marrs' breathless declaration of intent to find the slayers of "Camelot," invites the reader to judge his book by that criteria. By which he doesn't succeed.

Crossfire, like many another JFK conspiracy books, excels at debunking the Oswald-as-lone-assassin thesis, establishing the organized connections of Oswald's assassin, Jack Ruby, and presenting compelling circumstantial evidence for a plot composed of anti-Castro Cubans, the mafia and renegade CIA agents. But it fails to live up to its claim to show us whodunit.

Marrs' biggest failure is getting so wrapped up in his subject, he appears to accuse every group and individual to the right of the Kennedy brothers as being part of the conspiracy.

Crossfire's best moment, however, is the discussion of Richard Nixon, his possible knowledge of conspiracy and his connection to organized crime and Jack Ruby. Indeed, assassination buffs have always been fascinated with Nixon's vague reference to it on the Watergate tapes.

For example, on the tape of June 23, 1972, Nixon says to Chief of Staff Haldeman: "This is going to open the whole Bay of Pigs thing again . . . the Cuba thing would be a fiasco."

"Cuba thing?" "Fiasco?" What is Nixon talking about? Conspiracy buffs say he's talking about the Seniors show variety is spice of life

BY BERNARD GRAHAM
STAFF WRITER

For those who think life ends at 65, the Tallahassee Senior Center will prove them wrong Sunday afternoon.

The center is hosting Golden Images: A Musical Variety Show, a showcase of song, dance and music involving senior citizens and younger folks. The performance will raise funds to benefit the center's art programs.

Kathleen Senior, executive director for the Tallahassee Senior Citizen s Foundation, a fundraising branch of the center, said the program will entertain but also knock down any stereotypes held about older people.

"We are trying to say your senior years can be a true golden adventure in your life," Senior said. "Your senior years should be active years and you should not have to slow down."

The program will have performances that include the Tallahassee Swing Band, the Tallahassee Ballet, Steve Meisburg and Friends and seniors like Jack Swartz.

Swartz, director of the show, will sing a few songs for the audience as part of a foursome.

"I still sing, but at my age your high notes are gone," said 70-year-old Swartz, a former music professor at Florida State University. "The Lord giveth and the Lord took them away."

One of the youngsters in the program is Steve Meisburg. He will put aside his duties as mayor of Tallahassee, and pick up his guitar along with some friends.

"I thought playing would be a nice way to contribute," said Meisburg, who's been a guitarist for 30 years. "The show's put on to bring a group of people together and and make them feel more of a sense of community."

Florida A&M University music Professor Curtis King, 70, will be on hand to entertain the crowd with his renditions of "If I Ruled The World" and "Old Man River." He said the wide variety of performances should make the show appealing to all. He added that it will send a message that older folks are still kicking.

"I hope they will see older people doing things and say there's life left in older people," he said. "I'm pretty active and I intend to stay that way."

The Tallahassee Senior Center variety show will be 4 p.m. Sunday at the center located at 1400 N. Monroe St. Tickets are $7 and there will be a wine & cheese reception. For more info call 222-6524.

Mean Season plays Finale's

BY JOSH MITCHELL
STAFF WRITER

When local musicians Mean Season sent a copy of their demo tape to CBS Sony records, they received a nice letter informing them that CBS liked their music, but didn't like their picture.

This is your typical music industry stroke job.

So the guys in Mean Season, not being quitters, came up with an obvious solution to their publicity problem.

"We got a professional photographer . . . and now we know they'll love us," said guitarist and vocalist David Warren.

It seems that Mean Season has dealt with other forms of public scrutiny in the past. Loud practice sessions and out of control parties have led to a good working relationship between the band and the friendly officers of the Tallahassee Police Department.

"At our first gig at Indian Village, 600 people were partying under my deck in the rain," recalled the band's lead guitarist Shawn Duxbury. "People were dancing on the sofa."

Although some of the bandmembers seemed to disagree, Warren says: "We're the most shut down band in town."

Maybe the police should have given these guys a chance before shutting them down. Even though Warren jokingly dubbed the band a producer of, here's a new one, "retro nihilistic love music," they don't appear to be a threat to the community.

THOSE WHO LIKE THEIR LIVES TO BE filled with the blues can get their thrill tonight and Saturday night at Florida State University's Club Downunder. Tonight's show will be blues artists John Hammond and Jon Copps. Saturday night's guest is Eddie Kirkland. Both shows start at 9:30 p.m. For more info call 644-6710.

THINGS WILL GET ROLLING AT Bullwinkle's with Mimi & Marilyn at 5 p.m. Friday. Real Men will rock the house tonight and Saturday night at 9:30. On Sunday at 9:30 p.m., John Kurzweg will be featured. There is no cover for any of this weekend's shows. Call 224-0651 to know more.

IF YOUR FEET ARE IN NEED OF SOME music 911 plays Flamingo Cafe tonight and Saturday at 9:30 p.m. There is no cover but there is a dress code. Call 224-3534 if you have questions.

GET BAD AND NASTY WITH MEAN SEASON at The Grand Finale tonight at 9:30. Ron E. Kayfield and Saints & Sinners will pump up the volume Saturday at 9:30 p.m. Cover for both jam sessions is $1. Those who need to know more call 599-9358.

SWING YOUR PARTNER AROUND THE dance floor tonight with the Dithers as they offer the blues and '50s and '60s swing. The show starts at 9 p.m. and in order to strut your stuff, you must pay a cover charge. For more info call 222-6188.

Mean from page 11

In fact, these guys are an asset to the local music community. If Tallahassee ever becomes another "Athens," as once prophesied Mean Season would definitely be part of the onslaught.

Their five-song demo tape agrees with the band's self-imposed image of moodiness. It includes: the slow, mesmerizing, but not spiritual song "I Follow You," the Athenian song "I Wish," and the very skilfully pulled and drum-loaded song "Country Girl."

The band has a strong rhythm section that includes the throbbing bass playing of Michael Gilbert, the drumming of Dave Charles, who makes "Country Girl" a winner, and the the vocals and percussion work of Steve Evans.

Tonight is the band's second anniversary, but if they guys can avoid further scrapes with the authorities, they should be around for a while.

To find out more about Mean Season, ease on down to Finale's tonight at about 9:30. The Mustardseeds will open. Admission is slated at $1. Ring 599-9358 for further info.

JFK from page 10

Cubans and the assassination. The FBI reported several plots by anti-Castro Cuban groups angry at Kennedy for making a secret pact with the Soviet Union to leave Castro be after the missile crisis. At the time of Kennedy's death, the anti-Castro groups were plotting with the CIA and the mafia behind Kennedy's back to kill Castro.

Nixon as vice president was the architect of the Bay of Pigs, which originally began under President Eisenhower. Coincidentally, he was also in Dallas the day of Kennedy's murder.

Marrs may even have a bombshell on his hand in the form of a declassified memo from an FBI staffer working on a congressional investigation of organized crime in 1947. The memo suggests a connection between Jack Ruby and Nixon!

The staffer says: "It is my sworn statement that one Jack Ruby of Chicago . . . is performing functions for the staff of Congressman Richard Nixon. . . . It is requested Ruby not be called for testimony . . . ."

The Nixon-Ruby memo alone made me glad I read this book.

Crossfire is an excellent read for assassination buffs, rookies and veterans alike. Just don't let it turn you into a candidate for the punchline of a Paul Krassner joke.

Perry's 3-pointer buries Seminoles at the buzzer, 67-66

BY ROB STALINS
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Elliot Perry once again rescued Memphis State as his desperation 3-pointer with :01 left gave the Tigers a 67-66 Metro Conference victory Thursday night over Florida State at the Mid-South Coliseum.

"I'm speechless," MSU Coach Larry Finch said of the Perry's heroics.

FSU Coach Pat Kennedy took Perry's shot in a less dramatic fashion.

"He did what a good senior is supposed to do—that's win a game," Kennedy said.

The Seminoles lost their second straight game, falling to 9-7 overall and 3-3 in the Metro. It was also FSU's 11th straight loss at the Mid-South Coliseum. FSU is now three games back in the conference behind 6-0 Southern Miss. The Tigers improved to 10-7 and 3-2.

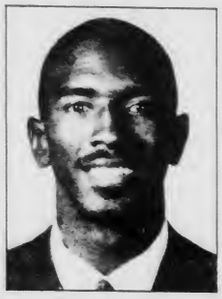
Florida State got off to a slow start as MSU used a 9-4 run to jump out to an 18-9 lead.

"Our start was extremely slow," Kennedy said. "We built such a hole for ourselves early. It looked like we were in slow motion."

However, the Seminoles picked up the pace quickly, cutting the Tigers lead to 23-22 on a jumper by Michael Polite. The Tigers continued to struggle, allowing the Seminoles to tie it at 27-all with two minutes left in the half on a David White three-pointer.

Polite gave FSU its first lead, 30-29, since 2-0, making one free throw with :55 seconds left in the

Turn to TIGERS, page 16



Memphis State's Elliot Perry scored 16 of his 22 points in the second half, including a dramatic, off-balance three-pointer with :01 left.

Paschal and Lady 'Noles look to keep hot Saturday at Tully

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

If last week's a repeat, Tia Paschal will lead the Florida State women's basketball team Saturday night at 7 p.m. against conference foe Southern Mississippi at Tully Gym.

Paschal has been hot of late, at least hot enough to earn Metro Player of the Week honors. It's no coincidence that the Lady Seminoles are streaking as well, having won eight in a row.

FSU's last win—69-60 over South Carolina—helped it crack the Top 25 for the first time in nine years. The Lady Gamecocks had stood with FSU in the the AP poll's 'Also receiving votes' category prior to this week. It was believed that the winner of the game would enter the Top 25.

"We're going to use this win over USC and the Top-25 (ranking) as a stepping stone to bigger and better things," FSU Coach Meadors said.

The Lady Seminoles, 12-2 overall and 5-0 in the Metro Conference, are undefeated in five home games this season. However, the Lady Golden Eagles, 8-5 and 3-2, pose a threat to FSU current streak. In fact, Meadors insists USM is better than its record.

Paschal, a 6-foot-1 sophomore, scored 23 points in FSU's win over USC, including clutch baskets and free throws in the closing minutes. Paschal averages 15.6 points and six rebounds a game.

USM starts all underclassmen, including freshman sensation Janice Felder, a highly recruited prep prospect who leads the Lady Golden Eagles in scoring (18.4 ppg) and rebounding (9.7 rpg).

USM Coach Kay James said she is happy with the play of her young team.

"We've played some tough teams this year, especially on the road and against (No.10-ranked) LSU, we played them hard right to the buzzer," James said.

Although USM holds a 15-3 series lead over the Lady 'Noles, the odds appear in FSU's favor. Along with Paschal, watch for guard Wanda Burns, who ignites the Lady Seminoles' transition game with her slight-of-hand steals and team-leading 19.5 points per game.

In fact, FSU's entire team has shot the ball well, hitting over 50 percent from the field in their last seven games and twice passing the 100-point mark. But Meadors believes defense will be the key.

"We'll have to play another outstanding defensive game to contain Felder and (Alexis) Hall," Meadors said.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Knowing when to let go of a losing proposition is essential now. Be on the lookout for business opportunities! The need for a career change will become increasingly clear in early summer. Follow the dictates of your heart where romance and family matters are concerned. Next fall is the best time to take a vacation abroad. Contact overseas friends well in advance. Try to do part of a home decorating project yourself.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Philippine President Corazon Aquino, newsman Edwin Newman, singer Anita Baker, actress Dinah Manoff.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A hobby could become a source of income. Students feel motivated. A temporary setback could teach an important lesson. Nurturing a platonic relationship will bring lasting benefits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Foreign travel enjoys favorable influences. You need to make a choice where romance is concerned. Those in seasonal businesses will reap higher profits when they diversify.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An older person is receptive to your suggestions. Your analytical powers are widely respected. Be willing to give an opinion when asked. A friend rescues you from a difficult situation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Long-distance communications should be on a pleasant note today. Your attempts to gain cooperation will be successful. Seek introductions to people you respect. Be upbeat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Getting organized may not be easy, but it will certainly boost productivity. Someone offers you a loan if you find yourself short on cash. Romance could have its ups and downs. Be patient.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A child who learns to handle responsibility will be a much happier person. Cut the apron strings. Romance cannot be rushed. A last-minute change of plan proves to be a brilliant move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Concern over what your relatives might think could influence the decisions you make. Stop worrying so much about other people's opinions. They may want to make some changes, too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Conditions are not favorable for discussing domestic issues. Self improvement activities boost your confidence. Someone presses you for a romantic commitment. Know your own heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seek an introduction to someone you find attractive! Fortunate developments could unfold where entertainment is concerned. Romance beckons this evening. Put your best foot forward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Today is an auspicious time for discussing an ailing relationship. Avoid making accusations. Do not be too much of a homebody now; you will gain a lot by getting into the social mainstream.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your plans could go awry if you push too hard and fast. A prominent individual may not be on the up-and-up. Take care of routine matters. Delights await you in romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone who has tremendous personal magnetism fills your head with romantic ideas. You are able to make fresh financial progress. Develop your natural efficiency and the sky is the limit!

A Boston party: Rattlerettes roll

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

The only thing in doubt at halftime was when Florida A&M would score its 100th point.

It was that easy for the Rattlerettes Thursday night as they cruised past Stetson, 122-60, in front of 413 at Gaither Gym.

FAMU's offensive explosion was led by junior Shelly Boston. The 5-foot-7 guard had an unusual triple double with 27 points, 16 assists and 12 steals.

FAMU guard Shelly Boston had a triple-double Thursday night with 27 points, 16 assists and 12 steals.

FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer was impressed with Boston's performance—even before she had seen the stat sheet.

"I haven't seen the stats, but it seemed like she made 20 steals," Farmer said. "I would say that this was Shelly's best game of the year."

Surprisingly, the Lady Hatters jumped to an early 9-5 lead over the somewhat flat Rattlerettes. FAMU forward Theodora Allen and Boston then combined for 13 of the next 17 FAMU points as the Rattlerettes took a 22-14 lead.

Allen scored 16 of her 21 points in the first half as FAMU raced to a 56-32 halftime lead. Stetson commited an unbelievable 27 turnovers in the first half, finishing with 50.

The second half saw FAMU fast break after FAMU fast break. The Rattlerettes shot mostly layups as they hit 28 of 41 shots, or 68 percent.

An early 16-0 run by FAMU put the game way out of reach as if there was ever any doubt. During that run, the Lady Hatters failed to score for almost six minutes.

FAMU center Polly Innerarity ended all the suspense when she hit a turnaround layup with 4:20 remaining, putting the Rattlerettes over the century mark.

Innerarity continued her consistent inside play, scoring 20 points on 8-of-13 shooting.

FAMU's inside play was good on the offensive end, but not so good, according to Farmer, on the defensive end.

"Our post defense is terrible right now," Farmer said. "Teams can get it down low and score on us whenever they want to."

FAMU senior Donyale Ferguson broke out of her scoring slump, hitting for 21 points, as well as passing out 8 assist.

The Rattlerettes should have a tougher opponent next Monday at 7 p.m. when they face South Alabama at Gaither Gym.

half. However, the Tigers promptly regained the lead on two free throws by forward Anthony Douglas. But then Polite, who had 10 first-half points, gave FSU a 32-31 halftime lead on a one-handed slam.

The second half stayed close until FSU pulled out to a 53-45 lead with just under 10 minutes left. But Perry, who finished with 22 points, led an 11-2 run by the Tigers to give the Tigers the lead, 58-57, with 6:42 remaining.

Both teams swapped leads until Polite hit a three-pointer to put FSU up by one with 3:50 to go. Neither team scored again until Douglas Edwards hit the front end of a one-and-one to give FSU a 66-64 lead with :15 left.

After an MSU timeout, Tiger center Todd Martin inbounded the ball to John McGlaughlin, who found Perry in the corner for the off-balance game-winner.

Polite finished with 22 points and 11 rebounds, while teammate Chuck Graham added 13 points. FSU's Aubry Boyd, streaking of late, had an off night with nine points on 3-of-9 shooting. Edwards also struggled with just seven points.

Kennedy still had a bit of high spirits despite the tough loss.

"Our club has come a long way. They did a good job, defensively," Kennedy said.

FSU held the Tigers to just 28-percent shooting in the first half. The Seminoles shot 46 percent for the game.

The Seminoles play next at Virginia Tech on Saturday. They then return home for a Feb. 2 contest vs. Tulane. FSU then plays Cincinnati Feb. 7 and Louisville Feb. 9. The Seminoles have eight conference games remaining before the Metro tournament Mar. 7-9 at Roanoke, Va.

CAIRO Egypt—Iraq reiterated Sunday it had yet to unleash its full strength and threatened to launch a crushing strike against allied forces, while blaming both the United Nations and the Soviet Union for its current plight.

Iraq's ruling Revolution Command Council also said anyone killed fighting Coalition forces in the gulf or striking U.S. and other western targets would be declared a "martyr," and his family would receive monetary compensation.

In Iran, Tehran radio quoted the Iraqi newspaper Al Gomhuriya as saying Sunday Iraq would use its non-conventional weapons against Israel.

"It's a mistake to think Iraq's force is limited to the conventional weapons used," the radio quoted the newspaper as saying. Iraq has launched almost two dozen Scud missiles at the Jewish state.

Also in Tehran, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported Sunday that Iraq anti-aircraft guns remained silent when allied bombers carried out overnight raids on the southern Iraqi city of Basra and neighboring areas. The agency did not say if the Iraqi guns were knocked out by allied bombs.

Iraq said allied warplanes carried out 112 overnight raids on Iraq and Iraqi anti-aircraft gunners shot down three allied aerial targets, but made no mention of the Iranian claim that its guns defending Basra had been silenced.

Iraq also said its missile batteries launched salvos of ground-to-ground Scud missiles at both Saudi Arabia and Israel.

A war communique said Iraq unleashed two salvos of missiles at Tel Aviv and one at the Israeli port of Haifa. Allied commanders said U.S.-fired Patriot anti-missiles destroyed the Iraqi Scuds before they could impact in populated regions.

A U.S. commander also said allied warplanes attacked and destroyed a set of pipeline controls leading to an oil terminal off Kuwait in a bid to stop Iraq from leaking crude oil in the gulf, where a massive oil slick is moving south to the coast of Saudi Arabia.

The United States has accused Iraqi forces occupying Kuwait of opening up the spigots at the Kuwaiti Sea Island tanker loading terminal, but Baghdad claims the oil spill was the result of the U.S. led bombing raids on Kuwait.

Floridians can check out their 'Rights' this week

BY KRIS ELVIN

Florida residents can get a first hand look at their rights.

The tour of the Bill of Rights—the Phillip Morris exhibit that has been met with controversy in several towns—is at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center this week.

The exhibit also features various other displays relating to the Bill of Rights.

"What's important about this document are the words and what it means to us," Philip Morris spokesperson Taggarty Patrick, said Sunday. "Most people think of this as a relic and not a living document. It is indeed a living document."

The national tour, which began in October, coincides with the bicentennial of the ratification of the Bill of Rights and will stop in all the states before Bill of Rights Day on Dec. 15. Tallahassee is the tour's only stop in Florida.

The document on tour is Virginia's 200-year-old copy of the bill, sent to the Legislature from Congress in 1789. The Philip Morris Company was allowed to borrow it from the Virginia State Library and Archives after making an undisclosed contribution.

Patrick said it's the first large-scale exhibit and tour of the document.

Besides the document, there are classic Hollywood film clips with

CPE drops photos from catalog

Kelly Peters, director of the Center for Participant Education, let university administrators off the hook Friday when she decided to take two controversial photographs out of the agency's new catalog.

Peters' decision to not print the photos followed a week-long battle with Florida State University administrators and student government leaders.

Peters was not available for comment Sunday. CPE Assistant Director David Stern said the agency could not wait any longer to print its catalog of spring classes, so it made an agreement with Vice President of Student Affairs Jon Dalton to take out the photos.

In exchange, Dalton's office will help CPE fund an upcoming forum on censorship.

"It was more important to get the catalog out. And if we continued the fight it would take too long to get it out," Stern said. "We're going to continue to study

Monster mash

This Ford Bronco was one of many souped-up trucks at the U.S. Hot Rod/Camel Mud and Monster Truck Racing Championship, a four-wheel extravaganza which took place Friday and Saturday at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center.

The trucks rev and roll through town at least once a year and crowds pack the civic center to catch a glimpse. Carbon monoxide intoxication and major hearing loss are added attractions.

We're not sure exactly what event this bad boy was participating in, but it had no problem crunching cars in its way. It will probably only need an alignment, tune up, new shocks and tires to do whatever it does again.

Hardee's robbed

The Hardee's restaurant at 2122 Capital Circle N.E. was robbed by a lone gunman at 10:15 Saturday night, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Mark Meadows said Sunday.

Two Hardee's employees, 18-year-old Wayne Dust and 23-year-old Truman Smith, were leaving the restaurant when a man carrying a gun came out of the kitchen area. The suspect ordered Smith to give him the money from the cash register, then forced the employees to open the safe.

Dust and Smith were forced to enter the restaurant's cooler. When the suspect demanded more money and was told that there wasn't any, he struck Smith in the face with the butt of his revolver, Meadows said.

TPD officers arrived soon after the suspect fled. "Dee-Two," a police tracking dog, was called in to help locate the suspect. The dog found a duffle bag containing the stolen money, but was unable to locate the suspect, Meadows said.

"The suspect is described as a black male, 22 to 25 years of age, 6 feet 2 inches, thin muscular build, short hair, light complexion and a mustache," Meadows said.

The suspect is still at large.

New rules proposed for clear-cutting in Apalachicola Forest

BY BRIAN P. BRAY
STAFF WRITER

The U.S. Forest Service drafted a proposal last week that would curtail clear-cutting within the Apalachicola National Forest.

The proposed policy is in response to concern over the endangered red-cockaded woodpecker, which is found exclusively in long-leaf pine forests of the Southeast.

"The forest service has seen that the consequences to wildlife are greater than the timber harvest," said Tom Ankersen, an attorney for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund in Tallahassee.

The Apalachicola has the largest remaining population of red-cockaded woodpeckers in the world. The birds nest exclusively in ancient long-leaf pine trees, many of which have been removed by the timber industry.

Clear-cutting, the removal of all trees from designated tracts of forest land, would be banned within three-quarters of a mile of a woodpecker colony. According to Ralph Costa, a biologist with the Apalachicola National Forest, current policy allows clear-cutting within 200 feet of a woodpecker colony. That means 1,100 acres of pines would be set aside for each colony, compared to the three acres being set aside now.

Costa said that there are about 680 woodpecker colonies in the forest, each containing two to nine birds.

"Undoubtedly this will dramatically restrict clear-cutting," Costa said. "It will affect more than 60 percent of the forest. But that means that on the remaining land some clear-cutting will still take place."

Last year, the U.S. Forest Service adopted the same guidelines for most forests in the Southeast and all national forests in Florida except the Apalachicola National Forest. Costa said the change in policy was a temporary measure until a biology team could complete a two-year study of the bird to develop a long-term plan for its protection.

The Apalachicola forest was excluded from the guidelines because forest service officials believed the population of woodpeckers was substantial enough that clear-cutting wouldn't have as much of an impact.

Environmental groups, including the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, appealed the decision not to include the Apalachicola. They argued that the woodpeckers needed the same level of protection as other forests in order to secure its survival.

Ankersen said the Forest Service proposal is subject to a 30-day public review period—a time in which the timber industry can respond. But it will probably be accepted because of the circumstances involving the woodpecker, Ankersen said.

"The draft is overwhelmingly biologically justifiable," he said. "I don't see any reason why it won't be passed."

On Feb. 4, red-cockaded woodpecker specialists from the forest service will on hand to answer questions at an open house from noon to 7 p.m. on the fourth floor of the City Centre building, 227 N. Bronough St. For more information or a copy of the draft call 681-7265.

the issues involved and possibly print the pictures in the summer catalog."

The dispute started when Dalton stopped the catalog from being published last week. Dalton was alerted to the photos when employees at the Tallahassee Democrat, where the catalog was being printed, called to ask if they had been approved. Also, some students complained that the photos were sexist and racist.

One of the photographs was Robert Mapplethorpe's "Man in a Polyester Suit," which pictures a black man exposing his genitals. The other was Gustav Courbet's painting of a white woman lying naked on her back.

"I've been thinking a lot about this issue since it came up," Dalton said Sunday, adding that he has not made up his mind. "I just think it's a difficult issue, and I think it's important to be sensitive to women and minorities. At the same time I think it's important to be concerned about freedom of speech."

Dalton's primary concern was that student money was paying for the publication of pictures that might be considered obscene under Florida law.

CPE got the $1,500 to print its catalogs from activities and services fees students pay every semester along with tuition.

A student ad-hoc committee recommended Thursday that the photos not be printed. Dalton plans to meet with University Attorney Gerald Jaski today to discuss the matter.

According to Jaski, there are two Florida statutes that could hold FSU criminally liable. One gives a definition of obscenity and the other makes it a criminal offense to present pornography to minors. He didn't know if printing the photos would be against the law because he hadn't seen them.

"If the university puts its stamp on it, it therefore is going to be held responsible," Jaski said. "There's a difference when an individual is publishing it on his own and paying for it on his own."

Readers respond to criticism of continuing protest

Editor:

I would like to respond to the false dichotomy that has been created by pro-war demonstrators regarding the Gulf War (WWIII ?). I am an anti-war protester and I am concerned about the popular idea that I and others like me are against "America" and the U.S. soldiers who are fighting this war. For the record:

I am 100 percent for the people (including soldiers) and land of North America, and for the people and land of every other continent, too. What I oppose is the U.S. government and its present policies. I believe in the integrity of the U.S. Constitution (even though it does not grant equal rights to minorities and women), but not the present administration.

Regarding the "love it or leave it" taunts, if we all followed the strategy of unconditionally supporting our "leaders" decisions once they were made, we would still be a British colony, or worse. This nation was built upon (among other things) civil disobedience (seceding violently from Britain), and also upon murdering the people who lived here first. This land has been here for millenia. I am a human being and an Earthling before I am an "American."

Peace activism is equal to supporting the troops. The government has to be sued by Vietnam veterans in order to get just compensation for their exposure to agent orange and other chemical weapons used to destroy the Vietnamese. It was not the peace demonstrations that created the Vietnam fiasco; it was the United States government. Peace activists have more respect for the troops than war activists because peace activists do not want them killed, they do not want them experiencing the reality of taking another person's life.

Erick Highum

Editor:

As I have read the commentaries of various people, most delighted simply that they have a reason to protest, I am struck by the fact that all wrap themselves in the cloak of being "anti-war". Who among us isn't? But we are stuck with the images of a tiny minority of individuals who think that taking over the Washington State capitol building (then ordering pizza to be delivered), or describing the President and Congress with a giggling, prepubescent obsession with sexual innuendo (Jack McCarthy, Flambeau, 1-15-91) serves their cause and therefore, their country. After digesting these activities, is it any wonder that the majority of people in this country lend any activists, and by association, their "cause", much less credence than their positions may deserve? Does this, plus the fact that Saddam Hussein delights in their performances and loses no opportunity to publicize them, maybe give reason to pause, as it does those who have friends and family in the Gulf? Apparently not, and those individuals who have at least thought matters through and still oppose our intervention are saddled with the image of people who can only burn flags and utter the mindless catch phrases (always including "fascist" and "imperialistic", among others) dredged from a time long gone. When will Saddam Hussein be condemned? Why are they silent as Gorbachev, embraced as the savior of peace not long ago, slaughters his people in the Baltic states? Could it be that the passion for peace is ignited only when it serves other purposes?

Rah! Rah! U.S.A.—What a great place to be!
Homeless, addicted and illiterate, so many don't see.
A devastating disease has come to our shore
No time for such concerns, we must think War.
Propaganda, censorship and hatred pierce the air
Human beings are dying, but don't you care?

Our nation is drowning, we must be enlightened
I'm not only concerned, I am truly frightened
"Never again!" Our politicians did say
Yet there fight our troops, so far away
There still is time, it is not too late
Love is the only weapon strong enough for hate.

Jeffrey E. McLean

Editor:

War is a bloody, savage bitch. Ask a war veteran.

There are valid reasons on both sides of this domestic squabble for people to act. Knowing this, people pick and choose their causes. We either stand up for war, stand up for no war (which does not, in this instance, mean peace), or remain cooly neutral.

This last group of folks we can dismiss, as they dismiss their responsibility to contribute to the world. The anti-war demonstrators, aside from marching, can vote out of the White House the man who it seems has given them their impetus. But those who support the war in the Gulf and make a point of screaming back at anti-war demonstrators can do much more:

They can call 222-2513 and join the military service of their choice.

Isaac Asimov also wrote, "Never let your sense of morals prevent you from doing what is right." I personally abhor the thought of war, but I am in the Navy Reserve; I could be out of here and back in uniform sooner than you could say, "Tuition refund." I have sworn to serve my country and, if called, I shall, in spite of my personal convictions.

Edward Flagg

Editor:

This letter is addressed to Phil Patterson, Vietnam veteran, who mentioned that all war advocates were all talk and no action.

Well, I've got news for you, buddy! I'd be more than willing to go over there and fight for our country. I'd be scared, but I would do it. I have friends and relatives over there right now and if I was called, I'd be right by their side—encouraging them instead of criticizing them. Our troops need our support and all we do is holler about how wrong this war is. I think if the tables were turned and if this war had ended earlier, Bush would be hailed a hero. But since this thing has dragged on, people are crying for peace. You can't have your cake and eat it too!

You being a Vietnam veteran should know that it would have been nice to have had some support when you came home, instead of ridicule. Is this what our troops are going to come home to? Ridicule? Peace-loving bigots parading around in their togas? Here's an idea ... how about shipping those people over there to fight and bring our troops back home and let them rally for peace! Seems the easier of the two jobs, doesn't it?

D. Eatmon

Editor:

I am sorry to hear that war has come upon us, sorry because men will die, not because of why we are fighting. No one wants to die, but in war, they must. Here in this concrete jungle that surrounds me, the feelings among us are mixed. As I walk around campus, I come in contact with the "hawks" and the "doves."

Appalled

Editor:

I, being a Jewish student at Florida State, am appalled at the remarks made by Jewish Student Union Director Scott Wayne in the Jan. 22 Flambeau. As director of the JSU, Mr. Wayne is out of line calling for the death of a world leader and all who follow him. In light of speculations of terrorism in the United States, with Jews as potential targets, Mr. Wayne's comments have further placed Tallahassee Jews in unnecessary danger. Hopefully, Mr. Wayne will recognize the influence his position dictates and use more discretion when discussing sensitive issues in the future.

Glenn Stern

Out of context

Editor:

My statement was taken out of context in the Jan. 22 article titled "Some Local Jews Say Israel Should Retaliate Against Iraq," by staff writer Amy Ellerson. Any person or nation who kills innocent civilians is committing murder. Any act of terror would be considered an "inhumane and cruel act." Furthermore, anyone who commits a terrorist act is judged evil. I apologize for any implied insult to the Arab community on this campus due to the misquote in Amy Ellerson's article. Feel free to contact me at 644-1811 with any of your future concerns.

Letters from page 4

It troubles me to see our nation divided. Not only do I pray for peace, but for unity within our united states that we call home.

I am, as we all should be, for peace. We must realize that there are times when the only way to achieve the tranquility and harmony of peace is through the violence and horror of war.

I pray for our brothers and sisters, that their blood not be spilled in vain, and that their daily struggle with death be one of triumph.

The way to support our troops now at war with Iraq is to bring as many of them as possible home alive as soon as possible and to have as few of them as still possible become killers. Yellow ribbons, cheerleading for their stubborn and possibly wrong commander in chief, and mindless chants of "USA, USA!" belong to sports events.

Our military people are not playing games. We saw the recruiting ads so we have an idea about what motivated some of them. But who among them volunteered to be ciphers in the computer programs of right-wing think tanks or to be fodder for a military-technological demonstration that the President is no wimp?

Paul J. Piccard

At least several hundred people, mostly FSU students, showed up at the Phyrst Friday afternoon to get their picture taken for a postcard that will be sent to U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia. Scott Schaefer, the Phyrst's owner, said the postcards will be available Monday afternoon for 35 cents. The Phyrst will send them free of charge.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

FSU will present Black Student Leadership Conference

Florida State University will present a Black Student Leadership Conference on Saturday, Feb. 9, beginning with registration at 8 a.m., in the Oglesby Union ballroom.

The conference for FSU students will seek to develop leadership awareness.

Following an opening address by Dr. Sandra Rackley, associate dean of undergraduate studies, participants will attend small-group sessions dealing with such topics as blacks in politics, male-female relationships, leadership, and community service and networking.

Dr. Rackley

Among those who will lead discussions are Dorothy Inman-Crews, Tallahassee city commissioner; Annie D. Sloane, director of FSU's Counseling Center; and Dr. Thyria Greene, executive assistant to the vice president for student affairs.

The Rev. A.J. Richardson, pastor of Bethel A.M.E. Church in Tallahassee, will give the keynote address at a luncheon. A panel discussion of issues related to student leadership will round out the day's activities before the conference closes at 2 p.m.

Conference participation is free, and pre-registration is suggested. Students may pre-register by calling Bill Haggard or Heidie Dort at 644-3840, or register at a table in the Union Courtyard on Jan. 30 or Feb. 6.

Time to brush up on your Shakespeare

Two plays, which both open in Shakespeare's Verona, will be staged by The Acting Company, America's only permanently touring professional repertory company, for the 70th Artist Series at Florida State University.

"Romeo and Juliet," the classic tale of young love tragically smothered by familial hatred, will be performed Saturday, Feb. 9, at 7:30 p.m. in Ruby Diamond Auditorium.

The performance of "Two Gentlemen of Verona" will be Sunday, Feb. 10, at 2 p.m. at the same location.

Tickets are available from the Fine Arts and Union ticket offices and are priced at $16, $14 and $12; $10 for students. Mastercard and Visa will be accepted. Benefactor ticket holders may attend both shows.

Film school attracts star-quality experts as guest speakers for graduate program

In its first year as a training ground for budding filmmakers, Florida State University's School of Motion Picture, Television and Recording Arts has attracted numerous prominent film industry names to its Graduate Film Conservatory.

The film school offers a bachelor of fine arts degree in production and management in Tallahassee and a master of fine arts degree at the FSU Motion Picture, Television and Recording Arts Conservatory in Sarasota.

"We are very grateful for this kind of support from guest speakers who are among the industry's most outstanding professionals," said film school Dean Ray Fielding. "Their presence allows students to benefit from their experience and knowledge and it affords them an opportunity to have greater contact with the professional film industry."

Among the notable celebrities who have appeared as guest speakers at the Sarasota conservatory are:

• Director and producer Robert Wise, whose credits include "Citizen Kane," "The Sound of Music," "The Day the Earth Stood Still," "Star Trek the Movie," "West Side Story," "The Sand Pebbles" and "Somebody Up There Likes Me."

• Screenwriter and playwright Horton Foote, who wrote the scripts for "To Kill a Mockingbird," "Baby, the Rain Must Fall," "Hurry Sundown," "Tomorrow," "Tender Mercies" and "The Trip to Bountiful."

• Author, critic and screenwriter Harlan Ellison, whose credits include "The Man from U.N.C.L.E.," "The Outer Limits," "Burke's Law," "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "Route 66," "Batman," "Star Trek" and "The Twilight Zone." Ellison, four-time winner of the Writer's Guild of America Most Outstanding Writer of the Year award.

• French screenwriter, producer and author Bertrand Tavernier, who is president of the French Society of Directors and the Institute Lumiere.

• Harry Rasky, a director, screenwriter and producer, who was selected best non-fiction director by the Directors Guild of America.

• Jose Quintero, who is considered by many the foremost interpreter of the works of Eugene O'Neill. He holds the Reynolds Eminent Scholar Chair in Theatre at FSU.

• Author and producer Milt Felsen, with "Saturday Night Fever" and "The Bell Jar" among his credits.

• Harvard University's William Rothman, who in addition to directing the International Honors Program on Film at the university, is also a screenwriter, producer and author.

• Kirk McClelland, director, cinematographer, editor and associate producer. His principle credits include "Brewster McCloud," "McCabe and Mrs. Miller" and "Popeye."

• Paul Madden, screenwriter, director and producer.

• Michael Uslan, producer, writer and attorney.

• Paul Lazarus, producer, director, attorney. He is former director of the New Mexico Film Commission and former executive vice president of Palomar Pictures International.

• Linda Houston, casting director, actress and teacher. She is an agent for Walt Disney Pictures, among others.

Florida State University Award-Winning Students

FSU honor society chapter is best in state

Florida State University's Delta of Florida chapter of Phi Theta Kappa has been named "Most Distinguished University-Based Chapter in the State."

The FSU organization, with 73 active members, was chosen from 15 Florida chapters for its efforts to keep "at risk" youths in school, provide support to community-service agencies and promote literacy.

Dr. Fanchon F. Funk, associate professor of educational leadership at FSU, was elected "Most Distinguished Alumni Adviser" for her guidance and dedication to advancing the chapter's goal of increasing community service.

Phi Theta Kappa is an academic honorary society for students with a 3.5 or better grade-point average.

FSU juniors receive Phi Beta Kappa awards

Twelve Florida State University juniors received Phi Beta Kappa awards for superior academic achievement from the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Social Sciences.

Phi Beta Kappa, the nation's oldest scholastic honor society is for seniors with a 3.6 or better grade-point average and juniors who earn at least a 3.8 GPA. The FSU chapter is Florida's oldest.

The students, elected to the prestigious honor society during their junior year, will receive one-time awards of $200.

The winners from the College of Arts and Sciences are: Gordon T. Allen Jr., an English major from West Palm Beach; Laurie A. Balatgek, an English major from Tallahasse, Jennifer A. Glazer, an English major from Coral Springs; Virginia P. Hammond, an English major from Flagler Beach; Dane H. Harris, an English major from Vero Beach; Michael V. Leggiere, a history major from Hudson; Ronald L. Machado, a biochemistry major from Boynton Beach; Debra Z. Raymaker, an anthropology major from Lake City; and Michael J. Salzgeber, a computer science major from Coral Springs.

The winners from the College of Social Sciences are: Andrew Cortez, a geography major from Miami; Jennifer L. Masica, a student in the interdisciplinary program in social sciences from Sarasota; and Mark A. Tittle, a geography major from Boca Raton.

Film graduate student takes national award

Timothy Dee, a first-year graduate student in the Florida State University School of Motion Picture, Television and Recording Arts, has won second place in the Arts and Entertainment Cable Network's "City Videos" competition.

The contest is for the best short community-service films produced by U.S. cable companies in 1990.

Dee, a student in FSU's graduate film and video conservatory at the Asolo Performing Arts Center in Sarasota, made "Regeneration" for Continental Cablevision of Broward County. The Pompano Beach native began the project before joining the FSU program and finished it while a student. The prize includes $3,000.

For the competition, which spotlights innovative projects designed to improve the quality of life in the community, Dee emphasized two local problems: the buildup of abandoned and confiscated vessels littering the Intracoastal Waterway and the deterioriation of offshore coral reefs. "

Dee's video, along with other winning entries, was broadcast on the Arts and Entertainment network. Television reporter and commentator Edwin Newman hosted the program.

Board of Regents OKs new university

BY CHRISTINE SEXTON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

The Board of Regents Friday unanimously approved the building of a 10th university in southwest Florida.

"That's where it needs to be built," State University System Chancellor Charles Reed said Sunday. "It's 145 miles to the nearest four-year school from that area."

Reed said the door to the small, mostly undergraduate, teaching university should be open to students in approximately seven years.

The decision comes after months of study and four public hearings by the board's long-range planning committee, headed by Regent Thomas Petway. He said he's pleased the board recommended the new university, but added that it's not the solution to overcrowding.

"It's just one of the things we can do. It's not a solution to the problem," Petway said in a telephone interview from his home in Jacksonville. "We need a lot more funding than we have so we can build buildings at the schools we have and increase the system."

Petway said there will be an influx of 80,000 students to the already-packed university system within the next 10 years.

"Access will be two times as much a problem in the next 10 to 15 years as it is now," he said. "It's an 'echoboom.' All the babies' babies are growing up. And all the babies that are in (K-12) will be in the system."

Reed also said a 10th university will not alleviate overcrowding and that present universities need to make better use of the space they have.

"The biggest thing we need to do is expand what we have now," he said. "More people need to go to class on Fridays and students may have to go to classes on Saturdays."

Education Commissioner Betty Castor said she will ask the Legislature for $1 million in Public Education Capital Outlay Funds, which are collected from a surcharge on public utilities.

Castor was out of town and could not be reached for comment. But Assistant Commissioner of Education Laurie Stryker said that despite the tight fiscal year, the money will probably be appropriated.

Stryker said there is $16 million more in PECO Funds this fiscal year. She said the surplus came from increases in utility bills.

"(Castor) has been urging the expansion of the university system ... especially in the southwest because of all the growth going on there," she said. "We need to be ready for that growth because students like to stay near their home territory, so accessibility to a university there is very important."

Probably the most interesting display is an electronic soapbox, where people step into a booth and talk about anything while they are being recorded on video. Philip Morris employees will show some of the takes at cities later on the tour.

Security is tight on the tour: 26 former Marines were hired to guard the document 24-hours-a-day. Visitors must go through a metal detector before they enter the exhibit, and a special armored truck holds the parchment when it's on the road. The document is also encased in an environmentally controlled container, which regulates light, moisture and temperature.

According to Patrick, the tour and various other programs—like instructional curriculum supplements sent to school teachers—will cost the company $60 million.

Although Patrick said the company wants to give something back to the communities where it does business, a few protesters outside the exhibit Sunday said it is a public relations stunt.

"Many people don't realize who Phillip Morris is," said Brenda Olsen, director of the Big Bend region American Lung Association. "What we're concerned about is people having a good feeling about Philip Morris, and we don't because their product kills."

Olsen and other protesters at the exhibit Sunday were part of a coalition, including members of the American Cancer Society and the Capital Medical Society, trying to educate people on the dangers of smoking.

"I would rather have another group of companies, or even the government, (sponsor the tour) than a tobacco company," said Gordon Draves, president of Georgians Against Smoking Pollution.

Picketers brought a replica of the Statue of Liberty with a pack of cigarettes chained to it. An electronic sign flashes the number of people who have died from smoking-related diseases since the tour started. Sunday afternoon it read 115,589.

Although turnout was low—Patrick said Superbowl Sunday may have been responsible—patrons said they enjoyed the exhibit.

"It was a very interesting display. It would be very beneficial for all our kids in school to read the Bill of Rights," said Willie Potter, Sr.

The Bill of Rights display, which is free to the public, will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Earth-shaking movies hit Moore

Hiroshima mon Amour

KELLY SHANE
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Tonight, the Center for Participant Education is presenting a piece of cinematic history, a work of art on celluloid.

Hiroshima mon Amour (1959), showing tonight at Florida State University's Moore Auditorium, was the first feature film by French director Alain Resnais, who had worked in documentaries since the end of World War II. Along with Truffaut's The 400 Blows and Godard's Breathless, it is considered one of the archtype French 'new wave' films—a movement in filmmaking that broke with traditional Hollywood style and through commercial, as well as critical, success was able to set a precedent for experimental films with respectable budgets.

The plot of the film revolves around an affair between a French actress (Emmanuele Riva), who has come to Hiroshima to appear in a film about the atomic bombing of the city, and a Japanese architect (Eiji Okada). Through their surroundings and recollections, the film explores the concepts of memory, reality and experience. The actress talks to the architect about her "memories" of Hiroshima from indirect sources such as films, photos and remnants of the blast in museums. But her lover dismisses these memories because they lack the truth of experience.

The characters of the film are more symbolic than "real" and the "star" of this film of ideas is the compelling screenplay by Marguerite Duras (known for her work on the French "new novel" and later as a film director). Her script deals with the relationship of memories and events, how the present is affected by memories and how memories affect reactions to the present.

Through a sensitive combination of words and images, the film shows how the actress' tragedy is brought back to her by her impressions. The dialogue, even in translation, is thought-provoking and moving, and Duras' choice of images (her script was very detailed) complement the words beautifully.

Resnais worked closely with Dumas on the film and how he interprets her ideas into actual sound and vision is magnificent. Every shot is set up with artistic precision; almost any key frame from this film would be a fine photograph in itself.

The opening sequence, which juxtaposes documentary footage of Hiroshima with the images of the two lovers embracing—as they talk about memory of the events and the sources of the footage itself—is one of the most heralded scenes in the history of film, a powerful creation of the director's and scriptwriter's collaboration.

Resnais often incorporated the concept of memory in his works. In his documentary, Night and Fog, (1956), he combines footage from concentration camps with interviews of different people's recollections of the Holocaust, putting into question history and its connections with reality. The same year he released All the Memories in the World, in which he studies the largest libraries in Paris, the storehouses of cultural memories.

Ten Days That Shook The World

In 1927, Sergi Eisenstein, the brilliant Russian directer who made Potemkin, was commissioned by the central government to make a film in celebration of the 10th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

The result was Ten Days That Shook The World (originally titled October), a film showing tonight at Moore Auditorium. The movie is an attempt to retell the events of the revolution, focusing largely on clashes between the bourgeoisie moderates and the Communist Bolsheviks, after the fall of the Czar. Eisenstein paints history in bold strokes, showing the moderates as malign and ridiculous and featuring the proletariat as the collective "hero," working to overthrow their oppressors. At the end, Lenin and the Bolsheviks rightfully (in the film's view) take up the reins of power and begin reformation.

Much of the experimentation in the film is related to Eisenstein's complex theories of montage; a film technique dealing with juxtaposition, through editing, of seemingly unrelated images to create a meaning beyond their individual parts. This concept was originally developed by Eisenstein's teacher, Lev Kuleshov.

Kuleshov took unedited footage of an actor and placed it with shots of three separate objects: a bowl of soup, a woman in a casket and a little girl with a teddy bear. When shown these clips at random, audiences raved about the acting ability of the man. He looked pensive at his forgotten soup. He appeared sorrowful about the dead woman. He looked amused by the playing child. Ironically, in all three cases, he looked exactly the same.

Eisenstein used this as a springboard and incorporated the structure of the Marxist dialectic view of history. Image A combines with image B to create concept X, then concept X can be combined with image C to create concept Y and so on. Multiple images could be put together to create more and more complicated ideas. His most impressive use of this technique is the brilliant Odessa steps sequence in his film Potemkin. October is a little more hit or miss, but a noble experiment nonetheless.

Ten Days That Shook The World* shows tonight at 7:30 at Moore Auditorium. It will be followed immediately by Hiroshima mon Amour.

Lady 'Noles still on a roll; play Tulane tonight at Tully

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Make it nine in a row.

With the 96-76 thrashing of Southern Miss Saturday night at Tully Gym, the Florida State women's basketball team upped its win streak to nine and stayed unbeaten in the Metro Conference.

The Lady Seminoles, 13-2 overall and 6-0 in the conference, tries to extend their streak tonight at 7:30 against Tulane at Tully Gym.

FSU started tentatively against the youth-laden Southern Miss squad, falling behind 14-8 just six minutes into the game. FSU Coach Marynell Meadors said she thought her team was a little nervous coming in, but after an FSU timeout and substitution, the Lady Seminoles picked up the pace and tied USM at the 9:40 mark.

"This is the first time we haven't been the underdog against USM," Meadors said. "But our defense just gave us so many opportunities to score. We played 'D' very well."

The Lady Golden Eagles drop to 3-3 in the Metro and 8-6 overall, but USM Coach Kay James said the best is yet to come from her freshman-led squad. Her team shot only 41 percent but out-rebounded the Lady 'Noles 40-35.

The FSU substitutions paid off with the bench chipping in 30 points, led by Chris Davis' 14 points. Davis' play served as a "spark plug" in the first half, according to Meadors.

"We substituted a lot of people, and at one time we had all our starters out and the team still executed with no problem," Meadors said.

The depth of the FSU squad became even more evident in the second half as the Lady 'Noles exploited USM's tired starters by continually running the ball and out hustling on defense.

Senior Wanda Burns was hustle personified, connecting on 8 of 9 shots, including both of her 3-point attempts to finish with 18 points. The FSU guard also had five steals and dished out nine assists, mainly to the FSU front line after penetrating the zone.

Burns' favorite target was center Tracy Walker, who went 8 for 12 from the post and capped off a drive with a 3-point conversion to score 17 points. Chantelle Dishman was hot under the boards as well, ripping down 11 rebounds and scoring 12 points.

The Lady Golden Eagles are the flip-side of the FSU team, according to James. Having no seniors or maturity on the court, they often fall prey to the defensive hustle and press of a team like FSU.

"We have no depth and that is tell tale," James said. "Out of our signees, one is in Saudi Arabia and the other didn't pass the ACT, so we have nobody to help us off the bench."

The FSU defense held USM frosh standout Janice Felder to three points below her 22 points per game average and pressed her team into 25 turnovers.

FSU's experience should affect Tulane as well.

"I want to make Tulane adjust to us, and just keep doing what we do best," Meadors said. "The experience the bench players are getting can only help us later on, and we're counting on that."

Bills can't kick the Giants; lose 20-19 at Super Bowl

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

TAMPA—The New York Giants won their second Super Bowl in five years Sunday night, beating Buffalo 20-19 after Scott Norwood of the Bills missed a 47-yard field goal with eight seconds left.

A Super Bowl overshadowed by war produced one of the most tense finishes in the 25-year history of the game.

The Giants controlled the ball for over two-thirds of the game, but had to sweat out the closing seconds as Norwood bid to give Buffalo its first Super Bowl championship. Norwood had enough distance, but the kick sailed wide right and the Giants were left to share in a last-play victory for the second straight week.

To get to the Super Bowl, Matt Bahr of the Giants kicked a 42-yard field as time expired against the San Francisco 49ers in the NFC title game. Norwood enjoyed no such heroics, and was consoled by several teammates at midfield immediately after his wayward kick.

"You only get one opportunity and I didn't get it done," Norwood said. "I knew it was a long kick. I might have emphasized it too much by trying to get too much into it.

"I didn't follow through as well as I could have. If I had a second opportunity, I'm sure I would have done something different. I let a lot of people down."

Said Bills Coach Marv Levy: "Scott's been a great kicker over the years and he missed by a whisker. We don't fault him."

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

MONDAY, JANUARY 28, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new emotional maturity will help advance your career. Look forward to greater financial rewards, beginning in June. Foreign influences and travel will have a direct effect on your progress up the ladder of success next fall. Your love for humanity will involve you in several fine activities designed to benefit others. Romance could prove irresistible next December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Alan Alda, author Susan Sontag, actress Barbie Benton, musician Artur Rubinstein.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A long-standing relationship could crumble unless you let bygones be bygones. Set new priorities. Positive developments will result. Children need firm guidelines; lay down the rules.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Uncertainty about your work means a decision must be made. Consult experts. A new hobby could lead to extra income. Romance looks promising. Your offspring could offer objections.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reconsider a recent decision. Diplomacy is vital when dealing with VIPs. A real estate deal or home improvement project is in the cards. Someone you help will return the favor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put yourself on the back of others' steed (your thunder). Tomorrow may be the right time to set things straight. A romantic interlude brightens your evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A financial windfall is possible now. Practical preparation should precede any alteration in your work schedule. A fresh pep may change the rules. Discuss your plans with your mate or partner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Control your emotions and go with the flow. Spend more time with family. All forms of financial gambling should be avoided. Encourage someone who is in low spirits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get to work on time and accomplish as much as you can. A pat on the back will produce better results than criticism. If thinking of relocating, talk candidly with family members.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A grand time for both romance and business pursuits. Travel and legal matters are in the spotlight. Consult both a travel agent and a lawyer. A gift arrives from an unknown admirer!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do your job with a minimum of fuss. Afternoon is the best time to kick back and catch up on your studying or reading. Dress your best tonight and seek a special introduction.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An important agenda deserves prompt action today. Maintain tight security. All signals are go for launching a pet project. Avoid rocking the boat. When shopping for clothes, be prepared to pay for quality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make your plans simple and flexible. Keep spending and borrowing in check. A VIP makes an offer you cannot resist. A message or visitor from afar brings glad tidings. Arrange a special appointment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ride with the tide. An attractive member of the opposite sex adds a special sparkle to your day. Stress togetherness. Your charm endears you to those close to your heart. Be affectionate.

With statistics looking better, Rattlerettes return to reality

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

Coming off its easiest and possibly best game of the season, Florida A&M's women's basketball team would seem to be sailing smoothly.

You wouldn't know it by listening to FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer.

"The last game was a time to increase statistics and work on individual things," Farmer said in reference to the Rattlerettes 122-60 blowout of Stetson last Thursday. "But South Alabama is going to be a much bigger challenge for us."

The Rattlerettes 9-6 overall and 4-2 in the New South Women's Athletic Conference take on non-conference foe South Alabama 9-9 at Gaither Gym tonight at 7.

Back in November, the Lady Jaguars handed FAMU an 82-78 loss. In that game, Rattlerette forward Theodora Allen led FAMU with 21 points.

Allen, a junior forward, was a key contributor in the early success of the Rattlerettes. She broke out of a scoring slump against Stetson with 21 points and now ranks 10th in the conference with 10 points a game. Allen is FAMU's second leading rebounder with over seven a game.

As well as Allen has played in her initial season of college ball, Farmer, who coached Allen at Rickards High, sees room for improvement.

"Theodora is missing a lot of easy buckets inside," Allen said. "She's working hard to improve her shooting and her defense."

Defense has been a thorn in FAMU's side, especially down inside.

"Our post defense has been terrible," Farmer said. "People are scoring inside on us at will."

FAMU center Polly Innerarity has been playing her best ball of the year lately. Innerarity, a 6-foot-2 junior, has scored over 20 points in each of the last three games. She ranks second on FAMU in points, 13.6 ppg, and leads in rebounds with eight per game.

The backcourt of Shelly Boston and Dwyane Ferguson is FAMU's cornerstone. Boston leads the team in steals and assists, and Ferguson leads with 16 points a game.

Ferguson has struggled, however, shooting less than 30 percent from the field. Farmer said that Ferguson needs to tone down her play a bit.

"Dwyane is looking to pass the ball more for the first time," Farmer said. "She's playing more under control."

Allies: 'Oil is down to a trickle;' Iraq launches two more Scud missiles

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein declared Monday he was confident of winning the Persian Gulf war, "wished the Americans well" and said he prayed not one of their sons would die on the battlefield. President George Bush said, "God willing, this is a war we will win."

Saddam, in his first interview with a western news organization since the war began 12 days ago, told Peter Arnett of the Cable News Network that he had no doubts—"not even one in a million"—that victory will be his.

In Washington, Bush said the war against Iraq is a "just war and a war we will win."

In a speech to the annual Convention of Religious Broadcasters, Bush said, "No one wanted war less than I did. No one is more determined to see from this battle a real peace, a new world order . . . We know this is a just war and we know that, God willing, this is a war we will win."

The president said that "when the nightmare" of Saddam's aggression is over, "we seek nothing for ourselves. The United States forces will leave as soon as" peace is achieved.

Arnett said he met Saddam at a suburban Baghdad house and that the Iraqi leader told him, "I wish the Americans well and pray none of their sons will die."

Saddam also was quoted as saying Scud missilies could have been equipped with "nuclear, chemical and biological" warheads but that Iraq has been able to "maintain the balance using conventional weapons."

"We pray that we shall not be forced to taking a forced measure," the Iraqi leader said.

Meanwhile, U.S. military officials said Allied bombing turned the flow of oil in the massive Persian Gulf spill to a trickle. The United States said Iraqi forces had dumped the oil into the gulf.

On the battlefield, an 11th U.S. warplane was downed Monday, but the fate of the pilot was not immediately known.

After a day of quiet from Scud attacks, Iraq launched two more of the Soviet-made missiles Monday. One launched toward Riyahd, Saudi Arabia, was shot down by the U.S.-made Patriot missile and the other, heading toward Tel Aviv in Israel, apparently fell short, U.S. officials said. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

The Allies were sending experts and equipment into the gulf area to do what they could to restrict or break up the oil spill, believed the largest in history.

Allied forces on Saturday bombed pipes feeding the source of the gulf oil slick, an offshore Kuwaiti tanker terminal. Allies say the slick started when Iraq opened the valves, but Iraq claims it came from U.S.-led bombing.

U.S. Navy Capt. David Herrington, director of intelligence for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said oil going into the slick appeared to be "down to a trickle."

He also said that so far the 10- by 35-mile slick had not washed up on the shores of either Kuwait or Saudi Arabia. A second slick, from Kuwaiti storage tanks shelled by Iraqi forces, however, was lapping Saudi shores and fouling the wildlife.

The number of Iraqi planes that have flown into Iran numbers more than 80, according to Army Lt. Gen. Tom Kelly, chief of operations for the joint chiefs.

Of this number, he said there were more than 60 fighter-bombers and more than 20 transport planes.

Military officials said they did not know the exact reason why the planes were leaving Iraq—whether

Troops' families help one another at a Tallahassee counseling service

BY AMY ELLERSON

There are good days and there are bad days.

That was the general mood at a Monday night counseling session for Tallahasseans with family members involved in Operation Desert Storm.

"Their emotions kind of go up and down on a daily basis. This has been a real shock to them," said Donnie Harris, one of the group's counselors. "The biggest thing is the separation and not knowing what's going to happen."

Harris is a doctoral student in Florida State University's marriage and family therapy program. Since December, the department has been offering free counseling services for those personally affected by the Persian Gulf crisis. About 14 children and adults showed up for Monday's weekly group meeting at FSU's Sandels building.

Harris said in addition to loneliness, the goup's members are experiencing financial stress and a change in lifestyle.

"Their responsibilities have sometimes doubled and tripled. The things that were shared between them fall on one set of shoulders now," Harris said after the session.

'It's like our world has been torn apart,' said a mother of two whose husband left for Saudi Arabia two weeks ago with a National Guard unit from Perry. 'There's just an empty space that nobody can fill. The kids miss him.'

The Florida Flambeau was not permitted to enter the meeting or use the names of those who attended the session because of confidentiality. But several participants were willing to talk openly about their situations.

"It's like our world has been torn apart," said a mother

Traviesa forms student search committee for president

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University students may have a greater say in the selection of the university's next president.

Student Body President Trey Traviesa formed a 25-member student advisory committee last week which includes representatives of the Interfraternity Council, the Black Student Union, the Women's Center and other student groups.

Barbara Grill, the disabled student advocate—a new student government cabinet position—said she's pleased the student committee was formed.

"The students do need to be involved," she said Monday night at the committee's first meeting. "The committee's composition is the way it should be. We all come from certain perspectives within the student body."

The committee that will officially recommend the next university president to the state Board of Regents—the presidental search committee—is comprised of 38 people from the academic community, including Traviesa. Although the student committee has no official vote, its members hope to influence the presidential search committee.

"I think we represent a good part of the students and that their concerns are being met," said Laurel Provitola, chairperson of the student advisory committee.

...say them for another day whether they were forming for an attack through Iran airspace on the U.S. forces in the gulf or whether the pilots were defecting.

"We don't know the intentions of the pilots," said Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, Kamal Kharrazi. "It seems that some of the Iraqis are saving their lives on their airplanes."

But U.S. officials said they weren't very worried about them and were glad they were out of action.

"If those aircraft came up from Iran to attack U.S. forces we would deal with them," Kelly said.

Iran has said any planes landing in its country would remain there until the war is over. Pentagon spokesperson Pete Williams said Iran had reaffirmed this through third countries that act as intermediaries for the United States and so far Iran was carrying out its word.

> Iran has said any planes landing in its country would remain there until the war is over. Pentagon spokesperson Pete Williams said Iran has reaffirmed this through third countries that act as intermediaries for the United States and so far Iran was carrying out its word.

Kelly said the war was going "pretty much according to schedule" and if there is a ground war the "ground forces will be ready no matter when that is."

Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens IV, logistics director for the U.S. Central Command in Riyahd, said at a briefing that an AV-8B harrier—a U.S. Marine aircraft—was lost in action over an unspecified location.

The fate of the pilot was not disclosed. It was the first loss of a U.S. aircraft since Friday, and brought the total of U.S. aircraft lost in battle to 11 out of a total of 18 Allied losses.

The Pentagon confirmed for the first time that seven Americans were being held in Iraq and were prisoners of war.

Committee

The replacement search for outgoing FSU President Bernard Sliger has been underway since he announced his retirement last fall. The scores of original applicants have been shortened several times and there are currently 11 applicants still up for the job. On Feb. 6 the BOR and the presidential search committee will narrow the list to five.

The BOR has the final say in who is selected to replace Sliger.

The student committee, which will meet four times, will make its decision after reviewing applicants' resumes and video interviews. Traviesa said he will base his vote on the student committee's nominees.

"Many members of the presidential search committee are anxious to hear from the students," he said.

Traviesa said FSU's future president has to have a history of student involvement and concern. He said he will be looking at how much autonomy the prospective candidates would be willing to give student government.

According to Provitola, the student committee will rate each candidate in four primary categories: concern for students, academic and administrative experience, management abilities and past success at fundraising.

of two whose husband left for Saudi Arabia two weeks ago with a National Guard unit from Perry. "There's just an empty space that nobody can fill. The kids miss him."

Although she said she tries to talk about the crisis with her children, she said they have nightmares, go through mood swings and are having trouble keeping their grades up in school. She added that one thing she does to eliminate stress is avoid media news coverage of the war.

"It's not realistic. They tell us what they want us to know," she said. "No news is good news, unless it's from him."

Another participant in the group session said that she fears for her husband's life. Her husband is also in the 653rd Signal Company from Perry.

"Most of the time I feel pessimistic. The worst thing I think about is him not returning," the mother of three said. But she added that she also worries about how the war will change her husband if and when he returns.

"We were very close," she said alongside her 15-year-old twins. "Is he going to be the same individual as when he left? What about the impact of the war on his relationship with the family?"

She said that the counseling sessions have helped the family cope with not having a father around. Because they live in Tallahassee, she said that she and her daughters have not been given much support from her husband's reserve unit.

"It has been very tough for us to be alone. It has been very stressful," she said. "This is the solution to our problem."

One of her daughters, a 10th grader at Florida High School, said her grades went down after her father was activated in December. Usually a straight-A student, she said she has a hard time concentrating in class. But she added that she is optimistic that her father will return soon and everything will be back to normal.

"I'm sure he'll be here in six months to a year, and everything will be fine," she said. "You've got to have faith."

Foot in mouth

House Speaker T.K. Wetherell should have thought before he opened his mouth.

When he breezed into an "Educational Summit" between the Florida Student Association and the state Board of Regents Thursday and announced a moratorium banning out-of-state students from attending any of the nine state universities, he swallowed his foot.

Wetherell said in order for state residents to attain access to already overcrowded schools, it would have to be at the cost of out-of-state students. But if the moratorium is passed, it will be at the cost of the State University System and the students enrolled in it.

Granted, the nine state universities are overcrowded and the situation isn't getting any better. And even though the board announced Friday that there will be a 10th university in the southwest region of the state, classrooms will remain crowded. Approximately 80,000 new students are expected to enter Florida's universities in the next 10-to-15 years. But to ban non-residents, who make up approximately 10 percent of the State University System's student body population, won't do any good.

Out-of-state students pay three times as much in tuition as other students. That money goes to the SUS. In a tight fiscal year—and it won't get better unless the state's tax structure is changed—it doesn't make sense to throw out the bread and butter. Basically, the system can't afford to ban non-residents.

But out-of-state students offer the SUS more than money. According to Pat Riordan, spokesperson for the BOR, out-of-state students "generally" score higher on their SATs and have better GPAs. It's true that high standardized test scores and competitive high school performances don't necessarily yield the perfect college student, but good transcripts cannot be overlooked.

Why? They indicate that a student is willing to put forth an effort to excel. And if the SUS wants to become one of the best in the nation, as it claims it does, students who push themselves are necessary.

Out-of-state students also bring other advantages to a university. Many who move to the state to attend school choose to make Florida their home when they graduate. An educated work force can only help the third largest state.

In addition, non-residents also bring diversity to universities. Banning out-of-state students would make student bodies homogenous—everybody would be from cities like Tampa, Jacksonville and Orlando. Now residents can mingle with students in their classrooms from New York to California. Students learn about cultures other than Florida's. If non-residents were banned, everybody would be similar.

With melting pot cities such as Miami, diversity is the key to the state's future successes. Florida State University realized that when it passed the multi-cultural component last year.

Too bad Wetherell didn't weigh the consequences before making his announcement. Banning out-of-state students seems like an easy solution to overcrowded universities. But it would do nothing but create more problems.

Double speak

Editor:

The double-speak style used by U.S. governments to justify their actions of foreign intervention would be very amusing if it were not tragically affecting so many innocent lives around the world. Now they are trying to sell the U.S. public the justification of a war against Iraq, saying that they are just defending a small country (Kuwait) from the brutal aggression of a bigger one (Iraq). My question is: What moral right does the United States have to claim that the invasion of Kuwait is brutal and unjustifiable when they have been doing they same thing for years in my homeland, Latin America? How can you justify the military aggression against small Latin American countries by a superpower like the U.S.? The history of Latin America is full of episodes like this one and I invite those who are not aware of them to read the well-respected history books that deal with this issue. Unfortunately, in Latin America, we never had a multinational force to get rid of our invaders. Why we did not have it? Here I can only guess. Perhaps because in our case the aggression didn't come from "barbarous" Arabs but from the "most civilized and advanced" nation in the world.

Get it straight

Editor:

We are appalled over the fact that your staff writers are very uninformed over issues happening in the world today. In your Jan. 16 War Issue of the Flambeau, a staff writer by the name of Amy Ellerson wrote an article entitled "Minor conflict arises between demonstrators at Wednesday rally." A statement was written by Ms. Ellerson which was totally inaccurate. She writes "The rally took place before the U.S. declared war on Iraq Wednesday night." First of all, let's get the story straight. The United States of America did not declare war against Iraq. The Declaration of War is the last step to be taken by the U.S. Yes, we are taking action against the country of Iraq, but the Congress of the United States has not declared war, yet. Freedom of the press is a right given to you under the First Amendment of the Constitution, but you must have all the facts straight, especially when dealing with an important issue such as this one.

D.K. Roberts' commentary in that same issue states "Martin Luther King's birthday was a hell of a day to pick as the deadline for war." The international community of the U.N. set this deadline, and although Dr. King is one of the most important men in our modern history, the other countries don't worry about our holidays. Just as we don't know or care about most of the other countries' heroes.

This is by no means the first criticisms we have of the Florida Flambeau, however. The careless use of incorrect facts and the continuing of biased reporting shows a lack in professional journalism. A situation such as the Gulf crisis requires a more mature attitude.

Shallow

Editor:

Thursday, somebody asked me how I felt about the war. I told him that I was just trying to avoid it. I said that I had given up reading newspapers, listening to the radio and was fortunate enough not to own a television. I added I've got enough problems of my own, and I don't need any of the world's to waste my time. Then I walked away. The question made me angry. People are murdered daily in the United States—tens of thousands each year. Yet, suddenly now its immoral. Suddenly now it's chic to chant "no blood for oil" while the guys across the street chant "death to Hussein." Yeah, war makes it cool to cry over the dead children in Baghdad or the equally dead Americans on the front line. It's hypocrisy and I find it shallow and disgusting. Where were the protests when they shot John Doe for six dollars and 40 cents? Where were the letters of support when the police chased them down? Where were the cries of anger when they did it again? I've been watching. I've been listening but I still don't hear "Kumbya" in Watts. I still don't see any prayer vigils for the Bronx. No, mostly I just see the people who live there and elsewhere. People just trying to get by anyway possible. This country's full of screwed-up principles. The gladiators have entered the coliseum and we get to watch while Rome burns to the ground. You can scream for their blood or you can scream for Ceasar's. Me? I'm going to go get a bucket of water. I'll see you when it's over.

Commendation

Editor:

I'd like to take this opportunity to offer a word of commendation and appreciation to the students who are actively involved with the Campus Alliance for Literacy, a campus organization that provides college tutors for adult literacy classes.

It is not unusual for college students to espouse noble beliefs in social issues, but it is rare when young people, for whom time is a precious commodity, to spend hours, patiently and cheerfully, using their own special talents in an effort to help others. These students do not hop on a bandwagon, they don't ask for recognition or praise—they just show up for class, day after day, week after week, month after month, and some, even year after year. They give what they have—expertise, kindness, understanding, initiative and creativity—to my adult education class here at FSU.

I am grateful to have had the opportunity to get to know and work with such an outstanding group of college students and I never cease to be amazed at their dedication to their fellow human beings.

Thank you, Campus Alliance, for helping out in my classes, and for providing warmth, friendship and love to all of us involved in the adult education program at FSU.

'Once again heading full speed down the road to moral ruin'

BY JACK MCCARTHY
STAFF WRITER

Truth is the first casualty of war But in this war it's the truth about casualties that bothers me.

For example, at his first press conference after the first bombing of Iraq, Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf drew muffled laughs from press corps when he answered a question about casualties, unabashedly remarking, "We're not going to get into body counts in this war."

Perhaps this is really what they mean when they say, "No more Vietnams."

Just as troubling is the evident lack of, or censoring of, debate concerning the morality of the "round the clock" bombing campaign. Aghast at the assumption we have an inherent right to bomb Iraq back to the Stone Age—for the morally dubious purpose of reinstalling the Kuwaiti monarchy—I turned to Lord Bertrand Russell's classic, War Crimes In Vietnam, for perspective and context.

The first page I flipped to contained this prophetic quote from a speech in the U.S. Senate on the morality of the war, given in 1964 by Sen. Wayne Morse—one of two senators who voted against Lyndon Johnson's Tonkin Gulf Resolution.

Said Morse: ". . . we may wake up some morning to find charges launched against us in the United Nations."

As news of the destruction of Vietnam and its deadly impact on civilians of that tortured country spread, the U.S. did wake up one day to find much of the world, including staunch anti-communists like Bertrand Russell, condemning us for war crimes.

Thanks to astute management and control of debate about this war, an odious air of self-righteousness permeates the land. Despite this, we must not deceive ourselves. For the longer we drop these awful bombs—some of which weigh 2,000 pounds—on Iraq, a country half the size of Texas with a population of 13 million, questions about the morality of this enterprise are sure to be raised. And they are being raised, most vociferously in the Arab world, including Egypt (where the joke about Kuwaiti males sitting out the war goes, "They are struggling in the discos.")

And well it should. There is no moral justification for punishing Iraqi civilians, presumably the ultimate victims of Saddam Hussein's iron rule. You wouldn't know it from the amoral televison news reportage of the effects the bombing is having on the civilian population, but this country is once again heading full speed down the road to moral ruin. News of the carnage is slowly seeping out.

According to an article in USA Today, the Washington-based Center for Defense Information estimates 500 Iraqi civilians may already have died as a result of "round the clock bombing." It seems it is Iraqi civilians, not Saddam, who are suffering. Many, it is now assumed, will die later from lack of food, water and utilities.

COMMENTARY
FOR WHAT IT'S WORTH

Last Friday, CNN showed footage of two dead Iraqi children, their legs dangling lifelessly, being taken from a bombed building. What killing children has to do with liberating Kuwait is beyond me. Let me add that a good part of the blame for the world's silence about the fate of Iraq's battered civilian population lies in Saddam Hussein's ridiculous refusal to allow the International Red Cross to have a presence in the country. Like some of Saddam's other strategic moves, this move was something short of brilliant, and the cause of yet more suffering for the Iraqi people.

Bible of the Gulf

Barbara Reynolds, an editor at USA Today, summed up the moral issue well in her column last Friday: "The dehumanization of soldiers and civilians using language filtered free of passion and blood, and the media's pro-war bent have made deception the bible of the gulf war . . . Censorship from both sides has created the image that although more bomb tonnage has been dropped on Iraq than Hiroshima and Nagasaki, there are no children's heads blown off, no mothers choking in their own blood, no elderly citizens trapped under the rubble of Baghdad."

Reynolds should also be saluted for her courageous words concerning the agony of the Palestinians. Thanks to television, Reynolds points out, we all grieve for the victims of Scud missiles in Israel. But, "... How often have the media shown us the blood of the 688 Palestinians killed in the Intifada ... Is an Iraqi child less of a human than an American ... a Palestinian child three-fifths of the value of an Israeli child?"

Reynolds brings to mind Zbigniew Bzrzenski's two dire predictions in his Senate testimony against war. Prediction No.1, that the Soviet Union would take over the Baltics states, has been all but accomplished. Prediction two, that Israel would move to expel Palestinians from the occupied territories into Jordan in order to accommodate the influx of Soviet Jews, has not. But, as we discover everyday in what historians will one day call "The Unnecessary War," all that is horrible seems possible. The uglier it all gets, the more confident I am that President George Bush failed a major test of courage in not giving sanctions—and peace—a chance.

Juvenile burglary

Two boys, 15 and 16, were arrested Sunday afternoon after the Tallahassee Police Department received a call about three juveniles in the backyard of a house at 409 Berkshire Drive, TPD spokesperson Mark Meadows said Monday.

As an officer arrived at the scene, the boys saw him and scattered. One of the boys ran into the arms of a second officer, while a second was caught by a third officer nearby on the 2000 block of Belle Vue Way, Meadows said.

The third juvenile wasn't caught.

A rear window of the house had been pried open and several items had been stolen including a .38 caliber revolver, a box of bullets, video tapes and a camera, Meadows said.

"The investigation in the house showed that one of the suspects had defecated on a wall inside the house," he said. "The suspects had also ransacked the house."

The two boys were charged with armed burglary and released to their parents. Their names are being withheld because they are juveniles.

No frills robbery

The Jr. Food store at 2636 West Mission Road was robbed at 6:54 Sunday night by a man who claimed to have a gun, said Meadows.

According to Regina Thompson, 20, who was working at the store during the robbery, the suspect walked into the store and told her he had a gun. Thompson said he forced her to fill a paper bag with money and he ran from the store.

Police have a description of the suspect, but he is still at large, Meadows said.

Buffalo Tom stampedes into Tallahassee; shadow of a Dinosaur looms on horizon

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
ASST. ARTS EDITOR

There are two kinds of bands: a) the ones that become famous because of the originality and flair in their music, and b) the ones that become famous because they are uninspired reproductions of the bands in the first category.

Buffalo Tom, a power trio from Boston who play at the Warehouse tonight with the Blake Babies and local band the Singing Spoons, is the type of group that should easily fit into the first category, but because of lazy critics is constantly placed in the second.

Cosmetically, there are many reasons why Buffalo Tom is often compared with fellow Bostonians Dinosaur Jr. They play guitar-oriented distortion rock and the energy from their music is almost hypnotic. But worst of all, their self-titled debut LP and their second album Birdbrain were both produced by Dinosaur Jr. guitarist-singer J. Mascis.

For most, that's enough evidence to blanket Buffalo Tom completely under Dinosaur Jr.'s shadow for the duration of their career. But Chris Colbourn, the Buff's bassist, begs to differ with the critics and nay-sayers.

"I think some of us in the band take it worse than others," said the 26-year-old Colbourn in a phone interview from his apartment outside of Boston. "We knew from the very first day when we started to use J. that that would be something we would have to face if anyone ever heard our tape outside of Amherst. And even in Amherst people would go: 'Oh, great.' "

Colbourn said the band, which includes lead singer-guitarist Bill Janovitz and drummer Tom Maginnis, knew that using Mascis so extensively would be a double-edged sword. But he said it was necessary.

"The first time we worked with J. was a really long time ago," Colbourn said. "It was the obvious thing to do at the time because there weren't that many people making records.

"And then we used J. again for (Birdbrain). We knew also at that point that we were getting a lot of European press, and J. was really solid there and it was going to be a decision that we had to make. We knew it would hurt us as well as help us."

The members of Buffalo Tom met up with Mascis at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst where they were all students. To make their album, Colbourn said, Mascis had to be used if they wanted to make their music their way without outside influence.

"Mascis is pretty much exactly what we want in a producer," he said. "We have all the arrangements for our songs and everything you can think of planned out. We don't have a lot of experience in the studio and we wanted someone who did, but would leave us alone enough so we could do what we wanted. J.'s main advice was just making us feel better about just doing what we wanted to do versus what other people wanted us to do.

"He gave us more confidence, like me playing through a guitar amp and for Tommy to try some stuff he may not normally try under a certain different producer and just be loose about things. It's just a record: go do what you normally do instead of following by some studio book."

Buffalo Tom hasn't followed Mascis' or anyone's book. They've created some really intelligent and original music in their first two albums.

Janovitz' guitar is no less than a bludgeon in his hands. He plays really loud and way up high in the mix, but the riffs are clean. There's no need for any fancy mechanics; he just plays with feeling and that comes out in his music and lyrics.

Maginnis and Colbourn play as if they've known each other for a long time even though they just began the band four years ago. Their music anticipates and amplifies each other's intruments.

Buffalo Tom's debut album on SST is an original and powerful album with some great songs on it. Oddly, there is very little of Dinosaur Jr.'s stamp on Buffalo Tom.

Their latest, Birdbrain (released on Beggars Banquet-RCA), ironically seems more Dinosaur influenced. The guitar is more distorted and Janovitz uses the wa-wa pedal some. Maginnis' drums seem to more hyper-energetic with more rolls crammed into nooks and crannies much like Dino-drummer Murph.

But the personal stamp still remains. For someone who has never heard Buffalo Tom, Birdbrain is heavily Dinosaur influenced. It takes a knowledge of their earlier music to see a vast difference in styles.

Colbourn said he isn't always offended by Dinosaur Jr.'s shadow, which looms close in the eyes of many. In fact, he likes the comparisons. It makes them all the easier to dispel.

"When you really look at the similarities that's where the differences come out," Colbourn said. "All these bands that are mentioned in the same breath—Husker Du, The Replacements, Dinosaur Jr., Buffalo Tom—okay, they all sound alike to some people. But to me, when you listen to a few of the different records there are huge differences.

"Immediately there's the voice, the way Billy sings; the arrangements of our songs. Sure they're all based around really energetic guitar stuff, besides that—and you could put in a million other bands—if you start really getting down to it there are some big differences. There's a lot of similarities (too). We're young people who grew up listening to the Rolling Stones, and other stuff like early Husker Du, Neil Young. I mean it all comes together—no big deal."

Colbourn also admits the comparisons aren't always damaging—sometimes they're flattering.

"There are bands that I feel are really good songwriters like Dinosaur Jr., Husker Du, The Replacements, the Pixies and I hope that people think of us in the same way, because I think that these guys really sit down and think about what they're playing while they're writing," he said.

OK Productions presents Buffalo Tom, Blake Babies and the Singing Spoons at The Warehouse on Gaines Street. The show starts really early. The Spoons play at 8 p.m., Blake Babies around 9:30 and Buffalo Tom shortly there after. Tickets are a paltry $5.

War in Gulf causing video rentals and movie sales to wax and wane

BY BERNARD GRAHAM
STAFF WRITER

Although many folks are glued to the TV watching news coverage of the Persian Gulf, most local video stores and movie theaters are not experiencing any loss of business.

"A lot of people come in and say they're tired of seeing things over and over again," said Karen Poitervint, manager of Video 21 on Mahan Drive. "They can see (coverage of the war) once, but 15 times gets to be a bit much. Some customers have come in and asked for comedies because they need something light."

Linda Cocke, co-owner of the Drive-In Movies video store in Killearn Center, said her business has had an upswing in rentals. She added that films concerning Middle East geography and former wars are hot.

"We've been renting out a lot of informative tapes on past wars and our National Geographical tapes on areas around Saudi Arabia are popular," she said. "We've had a lot of teenagers picking up these. I guess because . . . they're trying to make sense of it."

New releases and comedies are what the majority of people are wanting, according to Jason Sutch, assistant manager of the Movie Gallery on North Monroe street.

"Most of the people said they come in to get videos to get away from the war," Sutch said. "Comedies are renting well. People need something to bring them up."

Besides renting movies, people are still going to movie theaters.

"The war is not affecting us one way or the other," said Tracy Allen, assistant manager of Capitol Cinemas on North Monroe street. "(Going to the movies) is a way to break away from the pressure, especially for those with someone over there. People need a sense of relief so why not go see a movie where there won't be any interruptions."

Conway Reeder, assistant manager of Miracle 5 Theatre on Thomasville road, agreed. "Business has stayed the same. I don't see any drastic difference either way," he said. "It's a slow time of year, but it's no different than any other year."

Although most of the local movies theaters and video stores have continued to have steady or increased business, there is at least one place that has suffered loss of business.

David Cunningham, manager of Turtle's Music and Video on Apalachee Parkway, said there has been a dropoff of rentals at his store.

"The first three days (after the war began) we had a very big decrease of about 30-60 percent," Cunningham said. "Business picked back up but now it's down again."

Cunningham said that as the war progresses video stores will suffer.

"I think people will be a little bit more conservative in the way they spend money and how they spend their time," he said. "I think they'll spend more time talking about what's going on instead of sitting at home watching videos."

Cigarette-smoking old ladies star at The Grand Finale

BY ANN TURKLE
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Tonight a veteran of four Grand Finale readings will be joined by a relative newcomer to read fiction that has some similarities in subject matter.

Deborah Kay Ferrell said the stories both she and Susan Messersmith plan to read will feature "cigarette-smoking old ladies who are artists of sorts."

Ferrell, a doctoral student in the English department at Florida State University, is living a double life, teaching at a college outside Tallahassee and taking a writing workshop with Jerome Stern. She's completed her course work and is now using the workshop to keep her in touch with a writing community.

The story Ferrell will read, "Drinking at the Springs of Living Water," is what she described as "an irreverent look at teaching at a Baptist College." The title is borrowed from a hymn tune. She views reading at Finale's as "scarier than teaching" but a good opportunity to be heard by an objective audience.

Messersmith read last year at Finale's and says she's slightly less nervous this time around because she knows what to expect. A master's student in the English department's writing program, Messersmith is, like Ferrell, a student in Stern's workshop this semester. She said she values the criticism she gets and finds the deadlines helpful.

She will read "A Happy Painter," a new story about two older women, characters based on her grandmother and cousin.

Both authors have reputations as writers who use humor to good and sly advantage.

The readings starts promptly at 8:00 p.m.

Still perfect: FSU cruises by Tulane

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

The Florida State women's basketball team is perfect.

That is, perfect at home and perfect in the Metro Conference. The Lady Seminoles have beaten every conference opponent and all visitors to Tully Gym as of Monday night's 87-60 drowning of Tulane at home.

FSU, 14-2 overall and 7-0 in the league, is ranked No. 22 in the AP poll and faces No.4 Georgia in Athens, Ga., Thursday night.

FSU Coach Marynell Meadors said she was happy with the opportunity to play her whole team for the second straight game—with the exception of starting guard Wanda Burns, who sat out the night with a 24-hour virus.

"This is very good for this basketball team," she said. "Playing everybody has given them the chance to know they can contribute against a team like Georgia."

FSU was led by forward Chantelle Dishman, who was perfect in her own right. She hit 5 of 5 shots and all 12 of her free throws and finished with 22 points and 4 rebounds. The other two FSU post players, Tia Pashal and Tracy Walker, each contributed 14 points, while backup center Karen Galloway brought down 4 rebounds and a basket in nine minutes of play.

'Depth and defense are what will carry us in the game against Georgia.'
—FSU Coach Marynell Meadors

However, the Lady Seminole backcourt was the story behind the story. With senior Burns out, freshman Christy Derlak started at the off-guard and made her presence felt immediately, snagging a rebound and hustling down court for FSU's first two points.

"I got a lot of confidence tonight, and my mental game is a big factor in the way I play," Derlak said.

Meadors said she thought Derlak definitely took advantage of the opportunity to start and that her play was excellent.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

TUESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will receive unexpected support from the folks at home. Recent trends show you what you should do next professionally. Make a major move in April. Business travel is an excellent investment next summer. A change of lifestyle will promote greater self-confidence in September. Keep your promises to loved ones. Socializing with prominent people could lead to exciting career benefits next December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors John Forsythe and Tom Selleck, talk show host Oprah Winfrey, diver Greg Louganis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Wise choices put you in charge of your own destiny — at least for now. Bargains are available if you shop around. Let romance cool off and then see how you really feel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A project handed to you now is sufficiently complex to require all your finesse. Give it your best shot and you will emerge a winner! Share good news with your mate or partner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Running against the crowd could make you a hero in business today. A dazzling performance will solve any financial problems. A love relationship undergoes positive changes. You feel optimistic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Given your track record, you will succeed at a new assignment. Others are anxious to join your team; welcome them if they will be an asset. Quit hiding the facts from a child.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Better cash management is the key to improving your finances. Keep spending under control and leave your options open. Romance looks more promising than in the recent past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Being extra cooperative on the job will almost certainly boost your popularity and prestige. An exciting project is part of the picture. Be more practical about a new romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A long-range financial plan merits your close attention today. You have considerable influence. Use it judiciously. A longtime relationship will respond to more nurturing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep an eye on your co-workers — there could be treachery afoot. Avoid getting caught up in office politics. Patch up a quarrel. Taking someone out to dinner will make a nice statement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A roadblock to career progress is removed, thanks to a new agreement or policy. Someone who enters your life now could be a source of financial backing. Be candid with a teenager.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are riding the crest of popularity now. VIPs gladly take you into their confidence. Be discreet. Something transpires behind closed doors that works to your advantage. Be upfront with your loved ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A large degree of cooperation is necessary to maintain rapport with your co-workers. Seek experts' advice about legal or financial matters. Domestic events could alter your social plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Curb a tendency to be extravagant. Ostentatious spending could mar your image. Become the sensitive person other people want to be around. A romantic encounter is best postponed.

FAMU stomps South Alabama

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

Freshman aren't supposed to take over a game down the stretch. But that's exactly what Florida A&M's Theodora Allen did Monday night.

Allen, a 6-foot-1 forward, scored a career-high 27 points to lead the Rattlerettes to a 94-77 victory over South Alabama in front of 379 at Gaither Gym.

Allen scored 11 points in a late-game five-minute stretch that helped blow open a close game. Her poise impressed FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer.

"Theodora had a great game, especially down toward the end of the game," Farmer said. "She played like a dominant post player tonight."

The Rattlerettes, 10-6, got off to a slow start against the Lady Jaguars, 9-11, falling behind 9-0 just two minutes into the game.

FAMU then went on a 31-11 run keyed by 12 points from Allen to take a 31-20 lead. The Rattlerette full-court press had a lot to do with that run as South Alabama committed 18 first-half turnovers.

The Lady Jaguars started to solve the press, and it led to easy layups which helped them close the FAMU lead to 45-42 at halftime.

"Our press worked well for a while, but they started to break it easily so we had to pull back," Farmer said.

'Theodora had a great game, especially down toward the end of the game.'
—FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer

"Our lack of depth and foul trouble made it hard to stay in the press."

The game was a seesaw affair early in the second half, and South Alabama took the lead 54-53 with 14 minutes remaining. But that would be their last lead of the game.

FAMU went on a 9-0 run and then spent most of the rest of the game at the free-throw line. The Rattlerettes shot 23 free throws to the Lady Jaguars five attempts down the stretch.

For the game, FAMU made 26 of 40 free throws and South Alabama connected on 9 of 15 from the line.

The win avenged an 82-73 setback at South Alabama back in November. Farmer said she sees some improvement in her club.

"We're becoming a more solid unit," said Farmer, who's in her first year at FAMU. "Our players are starting to play more consistently."

Bennett decides to stay another year

BY PAUL SHIRER
SPORTS EDITOR

Edgar Bennett

A sigh of relief can be taken among Florida State football fans; Edgar Bennett will play one more year.

The Seminoles' starting fullback had juggled with a popular notion these days among underclass football players—should he go to the NFL? But Tuesday at a press conference, he laid the question to rest.

"I've decided that it would be in my best interest to stay at Florida State for another season," said Bennett, who will earn an undergraduate degree this summer. "I talked to my family, of course, and several other people, and most told me I had to do what was best for me. The bottom line though is that I trust Coach Bobby Bowden."

Now Bowden can trust that his bid for a first national championship next year is all the more likely. The Seminoles entire backfield remains intact. Starting quarterback Casey Weldon and back-up Brad Johnson return; starting tailback Amp Lee and back-up Sean Jackson return, and Bennett's back-up Paul Moore returns.

Bennett, a Jacksonville native, was FSU's second-leading receiver on last season's 10-2 squad with 35 catches for 395 yards and four touchdowns. Bennett was also third among rushers with 309 yards and five touchdowns on 61 carries.

Considering the recent NFL success of former Seminole runningbacks Marion Butts, Sammie Smith and Dexter Carter, Bennett's stock in the NFL was relatively high. Chances are, he would have gone in the NFL draft's early rounds.

The Lady Green Wave committed 20 turnovers under constant pressure from FSU, which in turn committed only 11 personal fouls in its defensive effort. First-year Tulane Coach Candi Harvey, whose team falls to 4-11 overall and 0-7 in the Metro, said she takes heart in the fact that Meadors had back-to-back losing seasons before turning her program around.

"Marynell is a big influence on a lot of us younger coaches," Harvey said. "She has one fine ball club."

Meadors said she thought FSU would jump to about No. 15 if it beats Georgia.

"We're going up there to win and to give it our best shot," Meadors said. "If we don't win, we're going to keep it close.

"Depth and defense are what will carry us in the game against Georgia."

Bush promises peace to nervous nation, world

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—Declaring that "time will not be Saddam's salvation," President Bush assured a nervous nation Tuesday night that only America "had the moral standing and the means" to wage war for peace in the Persian Gulf.

"We will succeed in the gulf," he said in a State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress. "And when we do, the world community will have sent an enduring warning to any dictator or despot, present or future, who contemplates outlaw aggression."

Traditionally a showcase for political goals and national objectives, his speech was delivered against a backdrop of high anxiety over the sacrifices—human and financial—wrought by twin crises.

Speaking at "a defining hour" to a nation gripped by war abroad and recession at home, Bush conceded the stakes were high but said, "the cost of closing our eyes to aggression is beyond mankind's power to imagine."

"This we do know: Our cause is just, our cause is moral, our cause is right," he added.

The task of confronting economic as well as war jitters was made more daunting by reports of consumer confidence at a new 10-year low and that the federal fund insuring bank deposits could itself fail without more money.

George Bush

But just as he spoke of "a new world order" emerging from conflagration in the gulf, he asserted there were "reasons to be optimistic" even with some parts of the country "in genuine economic distress."

Describing the longest peacetime economic expansion in history as only "temporarily interrupted," Bush prodded banks to lower interest rates and predicted, "we will get this recession behind us and return to growth soon."

Health clinic money remains up in the air

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST. NEWS EDITOR

County commissioners moved forward Tuesday with plans to build a satellite health clinic in French Town—although they still don't have the money to get the project underway.

The commission unanimously approved a plan at its regular meeting Tuesday to buy land off Old Bainbridge Road for the Public Health Unit extension. But a city grant that would make the purchase possible is not a sure thing.

According to City Attorney Jim English, the county cannot get the money—a $250,000 Community Development Block Grant—until the city's purchasing administrator decides whether investments of the county's pension fund violate the city's anti-apartheid ordinance.

"It does have to go through the process," English said Tuesday.

The city asked the county to sign an affidavit disclosing any business ties to apartheid South Africa because the county's pension fund is not divested. While that doesn't mean money from the fund has been invested in South Africa, county officials say they don't know for sure.

Jim English

Two county commissioners said after the meeting that they assumed the county would get the money when a site was chosen for the clinic.

"I would be most surprised if there's a problem," said Commissioner Marjorie Turnbull. "We're moving forward with this."

Commission Chair Don Price, who signed the affidavit in November, said he thought the clinic was a done deal.

"My understanding is that once I signed it, that's all there was," he said.

The city's $250,000 grant—meant specifically for the land purchase—would work together with $1.43 million appropriated for the clinic by the Florida Legislature last year. But the state money is contingent upon the city funding.

But while Price sent the affidavit to city officials in November, City Purchasing Administrator Lu Williams said she had not

DAY FOURTEEN

U.S. keeps up bombing; more Iraqi planes land in Iran

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Allied military leaders expressed confidence Tuesday they can handle any surprise arising from the movement of Iraqi planes into Iran, but were concerned about Saddam Hussein's most recent threat to use nuclear, biological or chemical weapons.

"From our standpoint the only real truth from what he spoke is that he must be stopped," said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

U.S.-led bombing missions continued at 2,000-plus flights per day, despite Iraqi reports that an allied prisoner of war was killed during raids on Baghdad. U.S. and British officials had no confirmation of the death.

And while a 20- by 60-mile oil slick continued to move slowly southeastward through the Persian Gulf, military officials said the oil has stopped flowing from an offshore Kuwaiti terminal and the fire at the pipeline had burned itself out.

In Saudi Arabia, military officials said allied planes destroyed 24 tanks, armored personnel carriers and supply vehicles caught moving across the open desert Monday night.

Army Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly said that about 10 Iraqi planes landed in Iran during the past 24 hours, bringing the total to "about" 90. Officials said 65 percent of them were fighters and bombers and 35 percent were transport planes.

Military officials said they did not know why the planes were leaving Iraq, but Fitzwater said the U.S. had received fresh assurances from Iran—through an unidentified third country—that it will remain neutral and hold the planes until the war is over.

FPIRG puts plastic bottle deposit bill at the top of its agenda

BY AMY ELLERSON
STAFF WRITER

Americans go through 2.5 million plastic bottles every hour. And every three months they throw away enough aluminum to rebuild the country's commercial air fleet, according to the Florida Public Interest Research Group.

What Americans need to do, FPIRG says, is recycle their trash.

"The problem we're facing right now is an extreme amount of waste," said Kim Mihalik, chair of FPIRG's Florida State University chapter. "We need an incentive for recycling."

The best incentive for recycling, according to Mihalik, would come in the form of a "bottle bill." The bill's intent is to introduce a 5-cent deposit on carbonated beverage containers. Consumers would receive a refund if they return their containers to the retailer.

The bottle bill's technicalities will be worked out this spring when it's introduced to the Florida Legislature. But Mihalik said a mandatory deposit would not increase the cost of packaged beverages.

FPIRG recently made the bottle bill its top concern for the spring semester. A letter-writing campaign will be the first step in trying to get the bill passed.

The focus of the writing campaign, Mihalik said, is to influence Gov. Lawton Chiles and Rep. Hurley Rudd, chair of the House Department of Environmental Regulation Committee. She added that although Chiles endorsed the bottle bill in last fall's gubernatorial race, he has not made it a priority.

"For a politician to get any more than 25 personal letters, that really captures his attention," Mihalik said. "Hopefully with everyone writing letters, politicians will listen to their constituents. The bottle bill is a practical solution to

TPD program aims to support, protect families of U.S. soldiers

BY JOEL RISBERG
STAFF WRITER

The Tallahassee Police Department unveiled a new program Tuesday to support the families of soldiers involved in Operation Desert Storm.

The program, dubbed "Operation Storm Shelter," was developed by Jim White, an assistant professor in the Florida State University School of Criminology, with the cooperation of TPD.

"We have a two-fold purpose—to provide assistance to the families of soldiers and to provide reassurance to the soldiers themselves," White said.

TPD spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said his department will "function as a repository where people can find help."

The police department will "expedite any law enforcement needs" for participants in the program and "put their residence on a list of extra protection," Kiracofe said. "We will be carrying the thrust of the project."

Families in the program will receive free security surveys of their homes, crime prevention literature and the number for a 24-hour hotline to TPD. After the initial police services, TPD officers will call the family members and patrol the houses periodically.

"After the security survey, a letter is sent to the soldier by the chief of police," White said. The letter gives the soldier a phone number to call with any special requests for the family.

White said the program needs volunteers to call the families and help in other ways.

"The volunteer arm of the program will be made up of businesses, individuals and other organizations. We will try to direct the requests of anyone wanting to render assistance," White said.

Any family members of soldiers deployed in Operation Desert Storm are eligible for the program. Anyone interested in enrolling in the program or volunteering should contact TPD at 681-4200.

an overwhelming problem."

FPIRG reports that America generates 7.8 billion tons of garbage each year, and most of it ends up in landfills or incinerators. Garbage incinerators produce toxic air pollution, while landfills leak and contaminate groundwater—the source of 90 percent of the nation's drinking water.

"Now is the time for people to do something about it, and they can do that by writing letters," said Lisa Morrison, chair of FPIRG's state board of directors. "Everybody knows there's a problem."

For the past 14 years, the bottle bill has been introduced to Florida legislators, but has never passed through a single committee. With Chiles at the helm, however, Morrison is optimistic that the bill will pass this time around.

"I think we will have a much better chance of getting the bottle bill passed with Chiles as governor, considering he supported the bill during our Green Voter/Bottle Bill Campaign and Martinez did not," Morrison said. "The environment is a hot issue. It looks like it's going to be a good legislative session for the environment."

According to Mihalik, nine states have laws similar to those proposed by the bottle bill.

Although Florida's 1988 Solid Waste Management Act requires counties to reduce solid waste by 30 percent before 1994, Mihalik said Florida's current recycling programs are not getting the job done. She said the bottle bill would increase recycling by 50 percent.

"So far, it's been proven the best way to reduce waste stream and encourage recycling. It won't cost the state anything," Morrison said.

FPIRG will have tables set up today and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at FSU's Student Union and Diffenbaugh building for students to write letters to their government representatives. The tables will be set up again next Wednesday and Thursday at the same locations.

received the document.

Assistant County Attorney Julie Lovelace said she thought the affidavit had been sent to the Community Development Block Grant section of the the city's Office of Community Development.

But Betty Rivers, who oversees the block grants, would not say whether her office has the county's affidavit. She refused to refer the Flambeau to any other city officials.

"I'm not going to address that specifically," she said.

The proposed clinic would serve inner-city residents who would otherwise have to go to the main clinic west of town. The operation would include an AIDS outpatient clinic.

At first, county commissioners opted against signing the affidavit, fearing the pension plan would prevent them from meeting the ordinance's standards.

But county attorneys advised them that the ordinance applies only to companies that do business with the city. Williams, however, has said the county is an "entity" which will be reviewed like any other seeking to conduct business with the city.

leadership present, security at the Capitol was tighter than ever. Police cleared the building of visitors hours beforehand and sealed off all streets within a four-block radius.

Democrats joined Republicans in cheering Bush's vow to drive Iraq from Kuwait. "So that peace can prevail, we will prevail," Bush declared in his 47-minute speech interrupted more than 50 times by applause.

Bush's speech was followed by the official response by Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell. Noting how most Democrats wanted Iraq squeezed longer with economic sanctions before resorting to war, Mitchell said, "Now that the war has begun, we'll work to see that it's swift and decisive with the least possible loss of life."

Closer to home, however, he accused Bush of inaction on energy policy, health care and economic growth.

"The president says he seeks a new world order," Mitchell said. "We ask him to join us in putting our own house in order."

War? What war? The U.S. isn't in any war

BY D.K. ROBERTS
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

Big Decadence

"The first casualty of war is language." I wish I'd said that but I didn't. Bob Edwards on National Public Radio said it. I hear him. What kind of people are we, allowing our Army to describe dead civilians as "collateral damage"? And bombs as "ordinance"? And attacks as "visits"? And body bags as "human remains pouches"?

As part of its propaganda war (or "escalated involvement"), the Pentagon has evolved a doublespeak destined to become the envy of jargoneers everywhere. In its carefully crafted, corrupt argot, the war is becoming sanitized, sterilized and no realer than an airbrushed guy in a uniform waving a pointer at a pull-down map of Iraq. There are no dead people, no blood, no pain, no horror, just percentile of successful sorties and coy revelations of how many "weapons systems" (planes to the plain-minded) have been "engaged."

The United States military machine learned its lesson in Vietnam—never call anything by its real name lest people find out just how many children are dying, just how many poor kids from the inner cities have their limbs blasted away, just how much grief and misery are being inflicted in the name of truth, justice and the American way.

Big Decadence II

Sad that the Super Bowl is but a fond memory? Sorry that football season really is over? Then wallow in the gridiron metaphors that have replaced the discourses of death and destruction in the Gulf war. There was the pilot who used to play defensive back for Alabama A&M, speaking of the "play" that sent him to bomb Baghdad and his aerial battle with an Iraqi fighter. "The most important interception I ever made," he said.

Commanders talk of the war in terms of "quarterbacking," "70-yard passes," "touchdowns," "scores," and "the Big Game." Destroying human life has become just like a Saturday afternoon in Doak Campbell Stadium where we scream "Kill the Gators!"

I guess football is just what we do when we can't have a real war.

Bigger Decadence

I hope you have seen that recent photograph in the Flambeau or the Democrat of all those clean-cut, nicely dressed, mostly lily-white, mostly young frat (and sorority) types giving the red, white and true cheer in front of the newly painted Phyrst. It is apparently going to be made into a postcard to send to Our Troops Over There.

No doubt the men and women of Operation Desert Storm will be thrilled right down to the sand blisters on their toes to know that the kids who are too affluent to have to get into the Army for three square meals a day or the chance of an education are pulling for them.

This war is being fought predominantly by the poor for the rich. We have not hesitated to send our disproportionately African-American, Hispanic, disadvantaged citizens to fight for 5 percent of the world population's dubious "right" to consume half the world's oil. Most soldiers in our "volunteer" Army have been sent to serve, as the protest sign says, a country that will not serve them, that will not meet their needs for education, for jobs, for social services.

But hey, no matter how many die in the coming ground war, surely they will be proud that their blood will have been shed for the American Way of Life—even though it's a way of life they don't have access to.

As for the young and privileged waving the flag in front of the Phyrst, yo, somebody's got to fight for the right to party.

Biggest Decadence

Many columnists are observing that Dan Quayle is rapidly turning into Spiro Agnew. Most apt, except that Agnew had a more graceful command of language, particularly alliteration. What Dan Quayle has a graceful command of is still a mystery to the American people.

This did not stop the Bush administration from sending that smiling idiot to "comfort" the families of pilots missing in action. This is either a very complicated joke of the sort no doubt enjoyed by Bush's Yalie homeboys or a staggeringly tactless action. Remember? This is the twit whose rich family got him let off service in Vietnam. Quayle's very existence is an insult to the grieving.

While in Florida the other day, Quayle got going on this Agnew-esque whine about the media (those naughty crypto-anarchists!) featuring anti-war demonstrations when everyone knows that those people yelling "No blood for oil!" are just outside agitators, bused in from Tierra del Fuego.

Perhaps the first casualty of war is dissent, after all.

How is it that while we insist we're fighting for freedom abroad, we prevent people exercising their freedom at home? Protest is healthy. Mindless patriotism never saved a single life.

Censorship should be rejected in every circumstance, period

BY STEVE KURTZ
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

COMMENTARY
DISSENTING OPINION

American society finds itself in an extremely awkward position. After a decade of solid conservative leadership, the economy is in deep recession, and the nation is at war. In this spiral of decay, the gaze of neo-conservative discipline has shifted from sole preoccupation with matters of political economy to include the surveillance of cultural activity.

As to be expected, the education system (particularly the university) is a major site for the enforcement of right-wing totalist discourse. Throughout the 1980s, the rallying cry of "A Return to Excellence!" was heard. Numerous books by the leading cultural fascists—Bennett, Bloom and Hirsch—explained to the legions of the ignorant what cultural capital was required to make one a civilized and educated person. All that was needed was knowledge of the European-American canon, which is dominated by the perspective of the white male. Women's studies, Black studies, Asian studies, and the work of any other marginalized group was written off as hyperbole in comparison to the great men and works of the canon. This led to the argument that those studies are fundamentally parasitical, and hence should be eliminated from the university curriculum. Also, as with the National Endowment for the Arts, there was a call for a return to "decency."

On Jan. 24, here at Florida State University, new evidence of totalist discourse appeared on campus. A committee of students (most of them Seminole Party members) ruled that a poster work by Critical Arts Ensemble could not be included in the Center for Participant Education's Spring 1991 catalog, because the poster might "offend" some students (the poster included a painting by Gustav Courbet showing a nude woman's torso with legs spread, and a photo by Robert Mapplethorpe of a suit-clad Black man with his genitals exposed.) This incident was particularly saddening since it embodied all the principles of totalitarian censorship. The poster work was not viewed as a whole, but instead attention was focused entirely on the two aforementioned images. These two works were not taken in their historical, sociological and artistic contexts, and no expert testimony was even requested. Finally, the student body was assumed to be an ignorant mass that would respond only to the "offensive" elements in the work, and would therefore complain that student funds had been misspent.

The net result was the silencing of all interpretations that opposed the literal interpretation of the committee. This result is particularly upsetting to many of the students who are at the university to become cultural workers for this society, and who hold the "offensive" images in the highest regard. It should be remembered that these students pay school fees too, and therefore deserve to have their ideas, icons and opinions represented with the aid of student funds.

The most frightening thing of all, however, was that this attack on the freedom of the university was made by students—those who have traditionally been the guardians of the free university. The parameters of censorship were expanded, as these students did not just limit themselves to attacking the work of the marginal; they in fact voted to censor canonized images—those which, even by conservative standards, are here at the university to study.

Under such a precedent it now becomes possible for a censorship committee to be formed with the power to deny student funds to any individual or student group that might print or display items that "offend" the committee's sensibilities, regardless of the nature of the image.

Admittedly, any decision about the representation of the body is difficult, and most of the censorship of the arts in this country stems from the liberation of the representation of the body. In mid nineteenth century France, Courbet, considered by many to be the central contributor to the development and direction of

What do you mean by free university? Since when have universities been free?

BY J. MICHAEL ROSS
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

COMMENTARY
DISSENTING OPINION

Perhaps you might want to share with your readers exactly what you have in mind with regard to a "free university." (Flambeau editorial, Jan. 25) before launching into what, in all candor, is positively one of the stupidest op-ed pieces I have read since that other bastion of free-thinking, the New York Times, defended military involvement in the Persian Gulf.

The Flambeau takes those of the university establishment to task who would have the audacity to traverse the hallowed ground of free speech and expression. The decision of an FSU review committee was "just plain wrong" in recommending "that a controversial Center for Participant Education catalog page not be printed"—primarily a Mapplethorpe photo of a black male with his genitals exposed. It's "OK," the Flambeau opines, that there might be many who find the page "obscene" or "racist," though these obviously less informed others "don't have the right to thrust their sense of right and wrong upon their peers, which is exactly what they did." This no doubt due to "absurd puritanical beliefs about nudity"!!

Among other huge logical gaffes in the construction of the Flambeau's argument (too many to go into here), the jump to the conclusion just mentioned simply doesn't follow from the premises offered us. It was a student committee, however constituted, that determined the page was inappropriate; they are "thrusting" (such clever sexual allusiveness!) a judgment on a group (FSU students) whose fate is at the hand of committees from the minute they make application to the university. This is the way FSU, an institution of a highly stratified and hierarchical society, has always made decisions; and until there is structural institutional change, it will continue to make decisions in this manner. By what stretch of naive misunderstanding would it be imagined otherwise?

That the committee, according to the Flambeau, does not "speak for its peers" is equally perplexing. Short of a complete student census of the matter, the Flambeau is in no better position to determine student opinion than the committee—in fact, the Flambeau is prohibited from drawing any conclusion about its "peers" by virtue of the same (flimsy) argument it advances against the "authority" of the committee!

Their lingering adolescent rebelliousness aside, one can only wonder in amazement as to what CPE was trying to accomplish by doing something so patently idiotic as to place the controversial page in its catalog in the first place. Being deliberately offensive and

There needs to be balance between freedom and responsibility

BY JON DALTON
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

COMMENTARY
DISSENTING OPINION

The recent debate involving CPE's use of controversial photographs in its course catalogue is a compelling example of the tension between freedom and responsibility. It is this delicate balance between rights and responsibilities which the FSU Task Force on Student Life examined two years ago and which it addressed in its statement on Values and Moral Standards at Florida State University. The task force articulated the principle of "responsible freedom" as the moral norm which should guide conduct and policy at Florida State University.

CPE's plan to use a photograph by Robert Mapplethorpe and a painting by Gustave Courbet in its catalog has predictably raised questions about rights and freedoms of speech. It is especially appropriate that such rights and freedoms of speech. It is especially appropriate that such rights and freedoms be given great attention and support in the university community. Of all places, a university should be a place of open debate and free exchange of ideas.

The controversy also raises some compelling questions about the other side of the moral equation of responsible freedom. What is CPE's responsibility to FSU students who provide the funds for the organization's publications? What consideration should be given to those who may be injured or offended by such expressions of free speech? In my opinion, the use of highly controversial photographs in a student funded publication quickly polarized discussion into a contest of freedom versus responsibility rather than a dialogue about the mutual obligations of freedom and responsibility.

I do not profess to know exactly where the right balance is in this issue but I do believe considerations of freedom and responsibility are inseparable. The students who served on the student government panel which reviewed this issue report an agonizing personal struggle to find an appropriate balance between rights and responsibilities. I share the same sense of struggle in my own review of the issue.

17-year-old raped

Two men were arrested early Monday for the sexual assault of a 17-year-old girl, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Mark Meadows said Tuesday.

The two men, 23-year-old Vernon Steadman of 742 El Dorado Street and 18-year-old Rutherford Black of Havana, were arrested around 1 Monday morning after police received a call from the victim's sister, Meadows said.

"The sister advised that she had received a call from the victim at the motel, and that police officers should go and check on her condition," Meadows said.

The victim called her sister from the West Tennessee Street motel where the two men had taken her, Meadows said.

According to Meadows, Steadman and Black had convinced the victim to take a car ride with them late Sunday night. After driving the girl to the hotel, the men refused to take her home and insisted that she stay and drink some wine with them.

Three officers arrived at the motel just after the assault had taken place. Black answered the door when officers knocked. Officers found the victim getting dressed and Steadman trying to flush drugs down the toilet. When the officer tried to stop him, Steadman fought back, biting the officer on the hand and striking him in the face, Meadows said.

Steadman was eventually subdued and charged with sexual battery, battery on a law enforcement officer, resisting arrest with violence, child abuse, possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of marijuana and tampering with physical evidence. Black was charged with child abuse, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of marijuana, Meadows said.

Both suspects were taken to the Leon County Jail. Steadman is being held on $20,000 bond and Black is being held without bond.

Check forgers caught

Tallahassee police arrested two men Monday evening after an employee at The Gap clothing store in Governor's Square Mall noticed that the signature on a customer's check was different from the one on the man's driver's license, Meadows said.

The clerk called mall security, who in turn called TPD. Two officers questioned the suspects, who admitted that they had stolen the check. The two men, 20-year-old Levon Esters and 18-year-old Lonnie Lynn, had stolen the check and license earlier that day and purchased over $1,200 worth of merchandise using the stolen I.D. and checks. All of the merchandise was recovered from the suspects' car, Meadows said.

Lynn was charged with one count of grand theft and six counts of petty theft. He is being held at the Leon County Jail on $3,500 bond. Esters was charged with seven counts of burglary, seven counts of passing a forged document, one count of grand theft and six counts of petty theft. He is being held on $18,000 bond.

controversial serves only to further isolate CPE's views as nothing more than crystal-worshipping, granola-crunching nonsense. The issue here isn't "free speech": CPE could have easily offered an appreciation "class" that would have allowed those interested to come and view the genitals of all sorts of zoological phenomena. That the Flambeau would concern itself with the whole matter, especially as regards its editorial comments, only serves to further isolate it from respectability.

Maybe, just maybe, we can still learn something from this whole issue. The confusion seems to stem from a fantasy-land construal of the realm of "freedom" generally, and the role this notion is supposed to play at a university.

"Freedom" doesn't occur in a vacuum, and the Flambeau would do well to describe the conditions that are constitutive of "free" relationships, rather than jump to wholesale indictments on "principle": "So much for a free university," the Flambeau laments. Remarks like that one, besides being indicative of an almost unbelievable level of naivete, serve to further obfuscate an understanding of what it means to be free, in any given set of circumstances. Being "free" consists not just in the absence of external impediments, but in having the capacity to express that "freedom." Every bum on the street has political freedom in the U.S., but because bums are economic nobodys (like the homeless; children; the elderly; students; women; minorities; people of color) such freedom is impotent. As regards the case in point: the Flambeau should not suppose, on "principle," that "a university stands for: the free expression and discussion of ideas, no matter how controversial",or that this whole affair is only indicative of "how far it (the university) has deviated from its principles."

Who ever said universities should be "free"? If the Flambeau thinks universities should be free, perhaps they would tell those of us whose clairvoyance is impaired exactly why it should be; and why, at present, the Flambeau thinks FSU not to be free. Which of FSU's practices inhibit expression or choice? That universities have been "free," in any meaningful sense, is largely a historical fiction. I suggest a trip to the library in order to research exactly who universities have answered to historically; as well as to find out who pulls the strings at FSU. This would be an interesting investigative report the Flambeau could undertake—it would even be important.

Universities are themselves a product of the very society they seek to positively affect, but they cannot rise above the conditions of the society to whom they owe their existence. This is an unfortunate but real-world paradox, but acknowledgement on this front is the first step in recognizing the concrete impediments to empowering students—if this is a worthwhile goal. I gather that the Flambeau does see the enhancement of student choice to be in both the interest of the student, as well as in the interest of the society in which the student will take his or her place. If this is the case, perhaps we should strive to make our analysis of concrete problems facing students consequential, rather than engage in the usual hackneyed and ineffectual rhetoric concerning censorship or free speech generally. Does the structure of the curriculum inhibit a student's choice? Is it not censorship, in a more comprehensive sense, to force students to take certain classes? To make them pay for those classes? To allow students little or no choice in their instructors? To be given a grade for achievement as judged against a standard that is conceived outside students' point of views? That these seem simple, undisputed questions is only testament to how powerful and thorough is the socialization process, but striving for even a modicum of wisdom requires we move to a criticism from which nothing is outside of evaluation or revision.

CPE's decision to retract the photos and pursue this issue in another forum will offer our community opportunities to continue discussion about the important issues of obscenity and censorship and our rights and responsibilities relative to them. I look forward to taking part in this continuing discussion.

I will be sitting at a table in the Union mall this Wednesday between 11:30 and 1 and invite students to stop up and share their opinions.

the modern avant-garde, led a fight to represent images of everyday life, and in so doing managed to "offend" most of French society for depicting the real instead of the ideal. Looking back from the vantage point of the present, his work is typically sexist, as was most work of the time concerned with representing the female body, whether it was in art, biology, anthropology, philosophy or any other area. In spite of our current knowledge of Courbet's ideological transgression, it seems more prudent to forgive, yet remain aware of his shortcomings, in order to see the tremendously rich possibilities for perception, critical thinking, and for art production that he revealed in his work.

Mapplethorpe was instrumental in blazing the trail for the out-of-the-closet appearance of the body as it appears through the gaze of a gay male. Again, from the clear view of hindsight, Mapplethorpe was not ideologically perfect, and one can reasonably argue that he did flirt with racism; no person or racial ethnic group wants to be reduced to merely a sign of another's desire. However, this is no reason to relegate his work to oblivion. Without it, the work of artists continuing to research and develop gay and or lesbian aesthetics—such as Holly Hughes, Don Moffett, Felix Gonzalez-Torres and Gran Fury—might not exist in the public eye.

Courbet and Mapplethorpe are but two artists who have radically challenged and changed routinized perceptions and concepts about the image, and thereby have helped to perpetuate a permanent cultural revolution (that phrase, in fact, was the caption of the "offending" poster).

Vice President of Student Affairs, Jon Dalton, has given students an opportunity to voice their opinions on censorship by funding a CPE conference on censorship. Take part, make a stand, debate, critique, invent and take time to listen—that is what pedagogy and education are all about. Most importantly, however, keep the university free: Never accept the forced silence of opinions. Reject censorship in all circumstances.

Major Handy and The Cauchons play zydeco at The Warehouse tonight.

Wolf-pigs attack The Warehouse tonight; The dithers open up

BY JOSH MITCHELL
STAFF WRITER

It looks like Tallahassee might be becoming a second home for Louisiana's zydeco blues musicians.

Two weeks ago, it was C.J. Chenier, and now we're expecting a visit from Major Handy & The Wolf Cauchons.

If you don't remember what zydeco is, learn it this time. Zydeco is a Cajun-influenced form of R&B that places a great emphasis on the accordion as a lead instrument—instead of the guitar, piano or saxophone. But don't spit your red beans and rice, you won't hear any Publix soundtracks or German beer drinking music flowing forth from these guys' accordions. It's the blues, man. Cajun style.

What's a cauchon, you non-French majors ask? It's a pig. So when you translate the band's name, you get wolf-pig. According to Major Handy's portfolio, a wolf-pig is "a combination of both predator and prey, domesticity and an indomitable wild spirit." When you think about it, Arnold Ziffel was pretty domesticated.

If you have any doubt whether band founder Joseph "Major" Handy has any idea of what the blues are, you soon won't. At age 14, Handy made his first guitar out of a cigar box and some discarded screen wire. His mommy didn't drive him down to Apex Music in the Beamer and dole out 800 smackers for the autographed Steve Vai strat copy that a lot of our youngsters are currently toying with. No, this guy had a character-building life that even included a stint in the Vietnam War. That's a blues-rendering affair.

But the thing is, zydeco music isn't about whining and singing the blues. It's about dancing and having a good time; making the most of your situation.

> 'It really appeals to all ages. At a zydeco show in New Orleans, you'll see 8-year-olds, 80-year-olds, bikers and street gangs."
> —John Babich

One enthusiastic local supporter of zydeco is John Babich, the piano player for local R&B group artist Bill Wharton.

Babich, or JB as he's known, described zydeco as "major feet happy music. There's no possible way you can stand still."

"It really appeals to all ages," he said. "At a zydeco show in New Orleans, you'll see 8-year-olds and 80-year-olds, bikers and street gangs. It's full of really severe, relentless, driving rhythms."

So if your situation tonight isn't looking too bright, and you feel the pang of the blues coming on, turn off CNN's full coverage of the war and crack a few cold ones at The Warehouse with Major Handy & the Wolf Cauchons. If this music lives up to its billing, you should lose the blues and tear up your shoes.

Major Handy & the Wolf Cauchons play at The Warehouse tonight. The show starts at 8 with The Dithers opening up. Admission is $5 dollars across the board. For more info call 222-6188

Barbershop offers more than a shave and a haircut

BY MARTIN STANOVICH
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The neighborhood barbershop produces a good story now and again.

Dwayne Edenfield, current owner of The Seminole Barbershop at 1005 Pensacola St., likes to tell the tale about several members of Florida State University's football team who came in for haircuts just before a group picture in 1987.

"Must have been 18 or 20 of them big fellas," Edenfield said. "Paul McGowan, Pat Tomberlin—the whole shop was full of them. I gave 'em all mohawks."

When he was about halfway through giving the mohawks, Edenfield said, a man seeking a haircut strolled into the shop. After looking around and finding the place full of giants with Mr. T tops, he shook his head and walked back out, muttering something about weirdos.

Although it's always crowded, you're not likely to see an advertisement for the Seminole Barber Shop.

"My business is just like Floyd's Barber shop on the Andy Griffith Show," Edenfield said. "Every head is a walkin' testimony."

Edenfield estimates that 75 percent of his customers are students sent by fellow students. The rest are long-time local patrons.

You're not likely to see anyone famous in the barbershop, either.

"Just everyday people looking for a cheap haircut," said Edenfield.

But Mila Williams, who works alongside Edenfield, was quick to point out that Bernie Sliger is a regular customer.

When Williams said that, Edenfield waved a hand at her and said "Aww, he ain't famous . . ."

The closest the Seminole Barber Shop has come to widespread fame was "oh, about five years ago" when Sports Illustrated did a photo shoot at the shop. Seems an FSU basketball player named George McCloud had gained notoriety for sculpting lines, letters and other designs into his teammates' hairstyles. So the Illustrated photo crew placed George and clippers behind one of the chairs, and one of his fellow hoopsters in it.

"Then the photographer went outside to shoot a picture through the front window," Edenfield remembered. "After a bit he came back in and told McCloud to squat down some or he wouldn't be able to get his head in the picture. Boy, was he tall."

The barber shop has been at the same location since the early 1940s. Edenfield went to work there in 1966 and renamed the shop when he purchased it in 1971. A hometown atmosphere fills the shop, cluttered with Edenfield's old bottle collection and various Florida State University memorabilia.

Along with Edenfield, fellow hair stylists Larry Creamer and Williams (resident barbers for 13 and one years, respectively) are present to serve the students and the community.

So for a poor college student needing advice on where to get his car fixed, the spread of next weeks game, or just a good, inexpensive haircut, The Seminole Barber Shop is the place to go.

The Seminole Barber Shop, located at 1005 West Pensacola St., is open Monday through Saturday, 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Oops—Closed Wednesday—gone golfing.

Ethan Hawke and his pet wolf White Fang

White Fang sinks teeth into London's novel

BY KEITH TRALINS
STAFF WRITER

Very few filmmakers can bring a classic piece of literature to the screen these days. But the makers of White Fang have succeeded where many have failed.

Based on the classic Jack London novel, White Fang is about the trials of a 19-year-old miner, Jack Conroy, during the Alaskan Gold Rush. Jack, played by Ethan Hawke (Dead Poets Society), arrives in Alaska in search of his father's claim, and hooks up with an older, more experienced miner, Alex (Klaus Maria Brandauer).

At the same time, a young wolf cub finds himself alone in the world after his mother is shot and killed. Jack and the wolf meet several times, but it takes awhile for Jack to finally befriend the wolf.

Jack encounters several struggles during his time in the Yukon of old. He faces the natural dangers of the harsh environment, almost drowns in a frozen lake, is attacked by wolves and bears, and finds an enemy in a dangerous gambler named Beauty Smith (James Remar). Through it all, Jack learns about life, and comes to love his new northern home.

Director Randal Kleiser does a good job of bringing a fairly weak script to the big screen with a sizeable amount of success. The script doesn't compare to the original book, which deals with the story of White Fang just as much as the story of Jack. The movie emphasizes Jack leading to some slow scenes.

But once the plot gets rolling, and Jack and White Fang finally get together, some scenes are magic.

The cinematography of White Fang is absolutely beautiful. The film, the first to be entirely shot in Alaska, has some of the most incredible sights on Earth brought to the screen with a level of competence only found in Disney films.

The actor's performances are also worth noting. Hawke's presentation

The Bums add a little political humor in their debut release

BY JOSH MITCHELL
STAFF WRITER

CITY BEAT

A lot of people are still smarting from the aftershock of the Reagan administration. But Tallahassee's most jaded band, The Bums, have managed to refine some of that negative energy and channel it into their debut tape release.

"We've all got a lot of hatred for the Reagans [and] that whole mentality," said Ted Sams, the band's multi-talented vocalist, songwriter, guitarist and harmonica player.

And if Sams' personal testimony isn't enough to convince you of this, just flip a copy of the new tape (customarily self-titled, per first album standards) over to side "B" and brace yourself for the satirical stab at the former first lady, "Nancy Reagan's Nightmare."

In this song, the band describes a character who would waste no time sending the old girl on an immediate roller coaster ride through hell, ultimately setting her up for the proverbial flick that involves seeing your life pass before your eyes. The narrator of the song finds himself "doing a drunken ballet under the street lights [...] takin' a leak in the alley and watchin' a cat fight." He later finds himself "slippin' into the bathroom for a valium break [...] the rest of the day will be a piece of cake."

Although some may find such lyrics offensive, The Bums aren't worried.

"Obviously, some of our songs are gonna offend some people [...] but, too bad. Wake up and smell the coffee grinds, The Bums are here," Sams said.

To sum up the issue of the band's harsh attitude toward certain political factions, bassist Kerry McNeil states strongly: "You can't legislate morality, man."

The Bums are a band of multiple dimensions. Sure they have a lot of zeal when it comes to the realm of inane political personalities, but these guys aren't all serious. They come equipped with a good sense of humor. It was revealed that, of their many aspirations, they'd "like to see a lot more people" at their gigs. And they want a "thirsty audience" to show up.

Cool your jets before you try to classify these guys, though. The Bums have a healthy outlook on life and their future. And with their collective talents, they should be around for a few more presidential terms.

The Bums rely on the brilliant songwriting skills of Sams and their other multi-talented, lead guitarist, singer and harmonica ripper Eric McNeil (Kerry's brother) to lift them from the heap of stuck pig garage bands that swelter inside Tallahassee's city limits.

The Bums

"Having both Ted and Eric writing gives a lot of variety in our songs," said Kerry McNeil. "It's like having two brains. I guess you could call us the band with two brains."

Sams describes the band's new tape as "a f—king work of art, man." And it is. The tape is a collage of sounds from basic rock to what Eric McNeil describes as "give-boogie." They also know how to come up with some hybrid sounds based on the jazz format—guest artist Jim Graham plays a fluid tenor sax on the song "too cool to care." But let's avoid the often cliche ridden task of "describing" the band's "sound." The point is: these guys are great storytellers. The song "delilah bran muffin" is a nice little tale of Southern corruption and sexual impropriety a la Baker, Falwell, Swaggart. The song "sub-blues" is a trance-inducing song to kick back and have a smoke to as you listen to Eric McNeil take you on a ride through the underworld of blues. To cheer things up a bit, listen to "lean to the inside." It'll teach you how to come out of a wrecked relationship feelin' like a winner. And if you like Tom Petty, you'll love the band's song "yes girl."

Basically, the band is composed of real people who sing about real things.

The band is now concerned with getting their talent the exposure that it deserves. So they spent a lot of time and energy recording the new tape. And to make things a little easier, they had the gracious assistance of local workhorse John Kurzweg, who has some major recording experience. Eric McNeil had this to say about Kurzweg's emphasis on the tape's drum tracks: "They're just so clean. (Kurzweg) being a drummer, we spent a lot of hours recording each song around the drum tracks and we think it turned out great. We spent about 20 hours per track."

Unfortunately, drummer Chris Thomas was out of town taking care of a military obligation and was therefore unable to comment. Nevertheless, he does his best talking with his sticks, so get the tape and hear what he has to say.

To get on with their new pursuit of fame, The Bums have tossed most of their old stage props and antics. You might say they're bullish on the '90s.

"We don't wear makeup on stage anymore and Kerry doesn't spit blood anymore," said Sams. "We've given up all those gimmicks."

But the guys are still actively soliciting a record deal. "We've sent tapes to Germany, Norway, all over. We even sent a copy to Dear Abby."

You can find The Bums' new tape at Vinyl Fever, Record Bar on Tennessee St., and at Trax and Musicland in Governor's Square mall. Just look for the display with the sign that says "Tallahassee's premier derelicts with 8 wild songs." If you don't get out much, then you can order a copy from "Bums Central" at 512 Ward St. Tallahassee, 32308. Phone 561-6268.

Unknown Hawkwind still screams from the past

BY MARTIN ALLEN
STAFF WRITER

"Blood Greetings O Brother, from our great Space Mother."

Thus begin the liner notes on the back cover of one of the most confusing, pretentious, highly entertaining and yet unknown albums of all time.

The same can be said for the band that produced it. The group's name is Hawkwind and the name of the album is The Saga of Dremmt Fasil Lando. It's their second release on United Artists Records and it only dates from 1972.

Well, flash forward almost 20 years, four or five record labels and 15 or more albums later, and guess what?

They're still there, doing confusing, pretentious and highly entertaining music. And they're still unknown, at least in America. By accident or design, these guys have managed to make a living for almost two solid decades without ever cracking the American charts. This is really a surprise, considering the mid-'70s popularity of all the other British bands that play the weird kind of spaceout music.

Part of the problem stems from the fact that half their catalog is live recordings—never the easiest to market, and their first record label stateside, at least—United Artists, a company more known for things like the James Bond soundtracks and Kenny Rogers. They couldn't have had the slightest idea of how to promote this band of high tech hippies.

Take the group's first album—if you can find it—titled Hawkwind. It boasts a cover painting that shows bizarre trees turning into alligator people. Very appropriate since the music inside comes from another planet as well.

Beginning with a wind-swept aural landscape that slowly increases in intensity, the album sets out to hypnotize. It damn near succeeds with songs like "Mirror of Illusions," which you will unavoidably find replaying in your head long after the stereo is turned off.

With their second and third albums, In Search Of Space and Doremi Fasol Lando, the group began to develop a tendency toward really long pieces of material, like "Brainstorm," which is more than 11 minutes long and "You Shouldn't Do That," which runs at 15:43.

In 1974, the band was touring North America when members suffered their first major casualty. The bassist, Lemmy Kilmister, was busted at the Canadian border with a large quantity of amphetamine sulfate. He was improperly booked for possession of cocaine but got deported anyway. Kilmister has since formed his own super heavy metal band Motorhead, and was last seen as a psycho cabbie in the movie Hardware. "Hey man, you wanna hear some music???"

By 1975, the band had attracted the attention of a new record label, Atlantic, and semi-cult writer Michael Moorcock, author of the "Eternal Champion" saga—an intricate series of adventure fantasies with heros like the albino prince, Elric. Moorcock makes a guest appearance on Warrior On The Edge Of Time.

In 1976, Moorcock repaid the album credit by writing his favorite band into one of his books. Part of a planned series of three books, The Time of the Hawklords is set in the ruins of London after the Great Collapse. The forces of Chaos are loose, and it is up to the last remaining rock band to save the world. They can only do it by taking on their stage alter-egos and actually becoming Hawklords. Moorcock himself makes an appearance as the Acid Sorceror, with his back up band, Deep Fix.

By 1978 the band got another label. On Charisma they released Quark, Strangeness And Charm, easily their most accessible album to first time listeners and occasionally even available in some used record shops. "Spirit of the Age," is a song about a letter sent home by a guy who's stuck on a deep space voyage with a malfunctioning android replica of his girl back home.

The band produced its last album with Bob Calvert, one of the band's major songwriting talents, in 1979. There was a legal battle going on over who could actually use the Hawkwind name because of a split on the part of some of the backing musicians. The album was due, so the band was forced to temporarily change the name to "The Hawklords." The album (with the same title) came out with a quickie photo-cover of some guy who's supposed to be holding a sword and looking worried. He looks more like a guy who's just arrived at a costume party only to find that his anti perspirant died last week.

In the '80s, the band found themselves in need of, yes, another record label. They apparently got one that releases a lot of stuff that no one has bothered to distribute over here, except for maybe one British single. It's a newer version of a couple of their best singles from the United Artists period. "Silver Machine," about someone wandering into a time machine and the self-explanatory "Psychedelic Warlords (Disappear In Smoke)."

In 1986, the band found themselves on their current label, GWR Profile. Their first release is a two-album set entitled Live Chronicles. It is based on their 1985 Black Sword Tour, a concept piece based on Elric. It was followed two years later by The Xenon Codex.

The album is far from inspired and the liner notes hint at this. Dave Brock, now the only remaining member of the original band since the death of Nik Turner, is billing himself as "Dr. Hasbeen." The album has that feel of something written in order to meet a contract and nothing more.

It was a surprise to find, while searching once again for some of the early stuff, not one but two new releases within a few days of each other. The first is a $3.99 cassette release of some of the best of the United Artists era, available on the cut-out rack at one of the mall stores.

The other new thing is an album recorded sometime last year, and available on all three formats. I may have found the only LP copy in town, but I have seen the cassette and CD, and strongly recommend it. Brock must be feeling better because he's gone back to using his real name, and the addition of Bridgett Wishart on vocals looks to be an inspiring change. Her voice alone has given the music just that extra kick it's needed for some time.

The first song, "Images," is a return to some of the standard Hawkwind of old with the song fading in and out three times. But it still works. The second song, "Black Elk Speaks" is a wonderful collaboration, with acid tom toms and the actual words of Black Elk, spoken by someone from the Oglala Sioux. Now this alone should get them some long-denied airplay.

So, whaddaya know. Twenty-one years later, and Hawkwind's still at it. Pretty good for a band that no one's ever heard of.

of Jack is very faithful, and has the same charm and innocence that was captured in Dead Poets Society. Hawke is one of the best young actors we have, and it shows.

Brandauer is equally good, contrasting the young Hawke's performance with maturity and reality reminiscent of an aging Indiana Jones. Remar does good work as Smith, once again showing that he knows how to play a bad guy and the animals are simply incredible.

White Fang is also surprisingly and socially conscious. Disclaimers are run both before and after the movie, explaining that the animals were not used improperly in any way, and all fight scenes were recreated with special effects. This is hard to believe because of the close, detailed shots of the animals fighting, but true nonetheless. The film also deals with issues such as illiteracy and animal cruelty.

For a children's genre film, White Fang does its job. But White Fang is also a good film for all to see. It has its flaws and does tend to drag at times, but over all it is a visually and emotionally stimulating film.

White Fang is now playing at the Parkway Five. For more information and showtimes call 877-1691.

Good news for FSU fans; no, not mens basketball

BY RICH McCRARY
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR

As football season finally finished up, Florida State fans got some good news this week from both the pro and college ranks.

The Chicago Bears of the NFL have apparently discovered what most of us have known for years—Mike Tomczack is not a good quarterback.

The Bears are going to leave Tomczack unprotected on the Plan B Free Agent list, paving the way for him to sign with any other teams.

This means that former Seminole Peter Tom Willis will get a chance for more playing time. The only person he'll be battling will be Jim Harbaugh, last year's injury-prone starter.

The best news for FSU fans may have been Edgar Bennett's decision to stick around for one more season.

Bennett had considered taking his act to the NFL but concluded that he might be a first-round pick next year.

Bennett has spent his career mostly blocking for Sammie Smith, Dexter Carter and Amp Lee, but he is underrated.

The senior fullback finished the season as FSU's third-leading rusher, second-leading receiver and third-leading scorer. He will also be counted on to lend experience to the young group of running backs, much the same way that Lawrence Dawsey did with the wide receivers this year.

Switching gears, the FSU basketball team is looking like a definite contender for the national championship—no, not the men's team.

The Lady Seminoles have won 10 in a row and will take on No. 4 Georgia tomorrow night. The Lady 'Noles are currently ranked No. 22, and a win would put them in the national spotlight.

The men's team on the other hand continues to look erratic. How the Seminoles can beat good teams like South Florida and LaSalle and lose to bad teams like Florida and Tulane remains a mystery to FSU fans.

COMMENTARY

Youth and inexperience are once again being used as reasons for the Seminoles' inconsistency. Pat Kennedy himself has said that Florida State fans may be tired of hearing it.

The truth is that the Seminoles have a good nucleus of young talent. Doug Edwards, Rodney Dobard and Chuck Graham are all sophomores. Andre Reid, Jesse Salters and Charlie Ward are only freshmen.

FSU could be a very good team in a couple of years, but nobody may notice.

Remember, the Seminoles will play in the Atlantic Coast Conference, where teams like North Carolina, Duke and Georgia Tech could eat the Metro Conference for breakfast.

The basketball team isn't the only area where FSU has to improve; the Seminole fans leave plenty to be desired as well.

Sure, a full house can be expected when Arkansas or Louisville comes to town, but when mediocre teams come only about 4 or 5,000 show up.

For a good look at great basketball fans, tune in the next time ESPN telecasts a Duke or Kansas home game—they pack the place everynight, no matter who they're playing.

King back in NBA All-Star game after six years

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

LANDOVER, Md.—Nearly six years after a knee injury threatened to end his career, Washington Bullets forward Bernard King was chosen by conference coaches Tuesday as a reserve on the East All-Star team.

"Six years ago I suffered an injury that no one said I would come back from," said King, adding that since his return, being an All-Star "has been a dream of mine from Day One."

There is even a chance King, the league's No. 3 scorer, could start for the East in the NBA All-Star game Feb. 10 in Charlotte, N.C. The two forwards voted onto the starting squad by the fans, Boston Celtic Larry Bird and Philadelphia 76er Charles Barkley, are both nursing nagging injuries.

East Coach Chris Ford of the Celtics will pick any replacements in the starting lineup. Among forwards, King was third in the All-Star Voting.

Bird has been out of the lineup since Jan. 8 with back spasms and his status is day to day.

"That's basically Larry's decision whether he'll play in the All-Star game or not," said Celtics administrative assistant Wayne Levy. "It's still kind of up in the air, 50-50."

Pointing out that Bird has only resumed practicing with the team this week, Levy said, "I'm inclined to think he won't" make the game. "What would happen if he reaggravated the injury?"

On Jan. 11, Barkley badly sprained his left ankle and his status is day to day as well. The 76ers said it is too early to determine whether Barkley would play in the All-Star game.

It will be King's first All-Star game since his devastating knee injury March 23, 1985. The injury forced him to sit out the entire 1985-86 season and six games of the 1986-87 season while with the New York Knicks. He joined the Bullets in October 1987.

King headed into the Bullets' home game Tuesday against the Miami Heat averaging 30 points a game, placing him third in the NBA behind Chicago Bull guard Michael Jordan (31.0) and Barkley (30.8). Jordan is a starter on the East All-Star squad.

This will be the 6-foot-7 King's fourth All-Star appearance since he began his NBA career in 1977, and his first in four seasons with the Bullets.

A Venezuelan manager was fined $1,000 for trying to bite an umpire in the neck during a game. Domingo Carrasquel, manager of the Lara Cardinals, jumped on umpire Emilio Velasquez and attempted to sink his teeth into him during a playoff game against the Caracas Lions. Caracas won the game 4-3. Catcher Charlie O'Brien avoided arbitration by signing a 1-year contract with the Mets for $300,000. He earned $150,000 last year, in which he hit .162 in 28 games with the Mets.

Boxing

Roberto Duran will fight for the first time in 15 months, facing Pat Lawlor March 15 in Las Vegas, Nev., on the undercard of the Mike Tyson-Razor Ruddock bout. Duran, 39, last fought Dec. 8, 1989, losing a 12-round decision to longtime rival Sugar Ray Leonard. Duran, a Panamanian who has held titles in four divisions, will fight Lawlor of San Francisco in a super middleweight bout.

Football

One day after New York City said it couldn't afford a ticker-tape parade, the Super Bowl champion New York Giants said they will skip a smaller City Hall ceremony because of the war in the Persian Gulf. The city then canceled Wednesday's tribute. Cornerback Dwayne Woodruff says he is unhappy with the way the Pittsburgh Steelers have treated him the last three seasons and wants to play elsewhere next year. He is the lone Steeler left from the 1979 championship team. David Shula, an assistant coach with the Dallas Cowboys and son of Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, cleaned out his office and told associates he was taking a position with the Cincinnati Bengals. Shula was demoted by Dallas Coach Jimmy Johnson earlier this month.

UNLV still on top poll

Yep, the U.N.'s base in Las Vegas appears to have everything under control—16 flawless bombing missions. It appears its only resistance will come in February ... anyone have a date?—when the Runnin' Rebels meet Arkansas.

Although UNLV is still perfect, so is Ohio St., which is tearing up the Big 10. However, the Buckeyes received all 3rd place votes behind Arkansas, the nation's first 20-game winner despite its lingering loss to Arizona early in the season.

The Flambeau also has a first to boast of: the first-ever poll with two three-way ties. Just look to the left and admire its beauty. It don't get much pertier than that.

The voters are: Staff Writers Michael Harris and Jack Clifford, Assistant Arts Editor Chris Talbott, Assistant Sports Editor Rich McCrary, and Sports Editor Paul Slurer.

Twelve U.S. Marines die in the war's first land battle

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Iraqi armored forces crossed into Saudi Arabia and fought Allied forces Wednesday in the biggest ground battle of the Persian Gulf war, taking control of parts of a border town. The United States suffered its first deaths in ground fighting and Iraq was said to have suffered heavy losses.

Twelve U.S. Marines were killed in the battle and two were injured, U.S. officials said.

Gen. H. Norman Schawrzkopf, the U.S. commander of the Allied forces, said at a news briefing in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, he expected the ground fighting to intensify, especially since Allied forces claimed air supremacy and Iraqi naval response was practically non-existent.

Saying "there's a lot of fight left" in the Iraqi troops, Schwarzkopf added: "With regard to Saddam Hussein saying he has met the best the coalition has to offer, I would only say, 'the best is yet to come.' "

But officials quickly dispelled speculation this was the beginning of an Allied ground offensive to drive Saddam's troops out of Kuwait. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "The incursion . . . did not represent the start of the ground war, no."

The White House also said a joint U.S.-Soviet statement issued Tuesday night was misinterpreted as linking Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait with a resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Gas masks are a hot commodity

BY AMY ELLERSON
STAFF WRITER

Gas masks are quickly selling out all over the United States—including Tallahassee—even though the Persian Gulf war is being fought thousands of miles away.

Beth Norman, manager of the Army & Navy Store on West Tennessee Street, said the store sold out of all its gas masks last week. As a result, she said, it quadrupled its stock.

"Most people are buying them to send to relatives overseas. We have a few people buying them for here," said the store's owner, Cindy Hood. "One guy in particular wanted them for relatives in France, and then some people want them for Israel."

Frontline, a military surplus wholesaler based in Chicago, no longer has any gas masks in stock. And according to Mark Saltzman, the company's spokesperson, chances of restocking are impossible.

"Gas masks are history—they're all gone," Saltzman said, adding that the growing demand for the masks and shrinking supply have increased prices to an all-time high. "As people run out, the prices keep going up. It's no longer cost effective to sell them."

Frontline sells most of its military equipment and clothing to privately owned businesses, including Tallahassee's Army & Navy Store. The company normally buys its surplus gas masks from the Israeli government. But Saltzman said that when Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, Israel stopped selling its masks.

"Once Desert Shield started, The Israeli government stopped selling them and started issuing them to its own population. So of course that stopped any surplus mass," Saltzman said in a phone interview Wednesday.

Activist lawyer addresses war, environment at FSU tonight

BY BRIAN P. BRAY
STAFF WRITER

"What will happen to our climate as carbon dioxide doubles in the atmosphere in the next 30 to 80 years?

What will be the environmental consequences if Saddam Hussein makes good on his threat to set fire to all of the oil fields in his control?

Is the greenhouse effect taking place now?

Albert Bates, an environmental lawyer who studies global warming and recently published Climate in Crisis—a book on the subject—will be at Florida State University tonight to answer these and other questions on global climate.

During a recent phone conversation, Bates said the focus of his lecture will be global warming and the environmental consequences of the war with Iraq.

Bates said the possibility of global warming hasn't garnered much public interest, but the war in the gulf has brought a new threat to the attention of the world—environmental terrorism.

"The war in Iraq is going to have some greenhouse gas effects," Bates said. "It seems like a good time to be discussing the consequences of the war."

Many scientists, including Carl Sagan, have suggested the possibility of a nuclear winter phenomenon occurring if Saddam Hussein carries out his environmental threats.

"That scenario is within the realm of possibility," Bates said. "If he does set fire to more of those wells then you'd see a cooling effect. The greatest threat would be to the rice crop in Asia."

But a global catastrophe in the gulf crisis could have a positive effect, Bates said. The result could be to scare the United States into changing its approach to energy sources.

"It could be a good thing to carry this lesson. It's going to be a hard lesson," he said. "Hussein knows what kind of environmental terrorism he is involved in, even if Bush doesn't."

The real threat to the environment is the extensive use of fossil fuels, Bates said. Even if all the oil fields in the gulf are not torched, there remains the problem of increased greenhouse gases being put into the atmosphere.

> 'The war in Iraq is going to have some greenhouse gas effects. It seems like a good time to be discussing the consequences of the war.'
> —Albert Bates

Bates said the U.S. could learn from other nations, like Japan, who use their fuel much more efficiently. By reducing consumption, the effects on the environment would be reduced, he said.

According to Suzanne Masonbrink, a member of the FSU Environmental Law Society—which is cosponsoring Bates' lecture along with the FSU Center for Participant Education—the nation's approach to improving fuel efficiency has declined in recent years.

"During the Reagan era we cut back on funds for developing alternative fuel sources," she said. "I think this was a big mistake. We can do much more, but people need to know the problems."

Masonbrink said the solution is to

Ground war from page 1

Iraqi tanks and other armored vehicles, which had been massing inside Kuwait near the Saudi border, rumbled over the frontier in separate places about midnight local time (4 p.m. EST Tuesday).

Some headed to the abandoned Saudi oil town of Ras al Khafji, where they were met by Allied ground forces, including U.S. Marines, according to staff officers of the 1st Marine Division. Lt. Col. Cliff Myers described the fighting as "hellacious."

Fitzwater said President Bush was "very saddened" by the casualty report.

Schwarzkopf said there were 24 confirmed kills on Iraqi tanks and 13 other vehicles. He said 13 Iraqis were taken as prisoners of war. The Marines lost two light armored vehicles.

Allied military officials said the Iraqis suffered heavy casualties but gave no figures. A Saudi military spokesperson said his nation's troops also suffered casualties but they were "very limited."

Iraq's foray into Saudi Arabia was its first major incursion of the war, and the Pentagon estimated the size of the force at about 1,500 soldiers.

The first two attacks were west of the city in the vicinity of al Wafra, and in each case they were engaged by ground and air forces. The Iraqis suffered equipment losses and casualties, and withdrew. The fist attack was by an Iraqi mechanized battalion and the second, on Wednesday, was by a column of tanks.

Another 2,000 to 4,000 Iraqi troops, in armored vehicles, moved in late Wednesday morning and fought Saudi troops on the outskirts of Khafji.

By sunset, following a long day of skirmishes between Iraqi and Saudi troops as well as heavy U.S. Marine artillery fire on Iraqi targets in the city, U.S. military officials said it appeared up to 150 of Saddam's soldiers controlled at least parts of Khafji, according to a media pool report.

Masks from page 1

Norman said that although her store's general sales have not increased since the war started, more people come in to visit and look at the merchandise. Camouflage uniforms, olive green canteens and gas mask filters are some of the items displayed throughout the store.

A sign ouside the store reads: "Gas Masks—$26.95. God Bless Our Troops in the Gulf." Yellow ribbons and war-related headlines from recent issues of the Tallahassee Democrat hang in a display window.

But Norman said the store is not exploiting the war, and is trying to stay politically neutral. She criticized other businesses in the market which, she says, are taking advantage of the crisis by increasing prices.

"We're not raising the prices like some people are. Some of our wholesalers have, and it's sickening," Norman said.

Waldo Kinsey, owner of the Army Surplus Store on Blountstown Highway, said that about 30 people requested gas masks last week. He added that numerous attempts to order any have proved fruitless since all of the nation's military supplies are going to the U.S. government.

"I've checked all over the United States and I just can't get them," Kinsey said. "Anything you sell out of you just can't get anymore. With things like boots, all of the production is going to the government."

Kinsey added that he is sold out of any piece of merchandise with the American flag on it. He said the majority of people who call in requesting gas masks want them for relatives in France.

Locals are buying more flags, globes and maps

BY PHIL JACKSON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Tallahasseans are waving the stars and stripes to show their support and grabbing up maps to get a better grasp on where U.S. soldiers are fighting in the Persian Gulf.

Debbie Cross, who teaches at a private school in Tallahassee, said she went to the Map and Globe Store at 741 N. Monroe St. to familiarize herself with the Middle East.

"We're concerned about what's going on," said Cross, who went to the store with her teenage son. "Our boys are over there. Maps show things in detail. It gives an idea of how large the area is. It is a good tool for children to learn from."

Neil Blount arrived at the Map and Globe store to find out that most of the maps were sold out. He plans to come back later next week.

He wanted to buy a map "mainly to follow news reports. It gives you a better idea of what they are talking about."

Nancy Rains, a salesclerk at the store, said a lot of customers have been coming in for maps, globes and flags—both American and Iraqi—since the war erupted.

"People go to bookstores and they are sending them here for maps of the Middle East," she said. "Some of the people are buying Iraqi flags to burn."

Iraqi flags sell from less than a dollar to $46 at stores across town.

Stan Nettles, store manager of General Office Equipment on 114 S. Duval St., said the majority of flags are bought around Memorial Day. But this year is different. "Last Thursday, we had to have about 144 three-by five (American) flags freighted in overnight," he said. "Normally, it's a low time in the year for flags.

"It's the patriotic thing to do."

Janet Foy, president of American Advertising, a flag store on 1004 Buena Vista Drive, agreed. Her store sells American flags for anywhere from 58 cents to $14.60.

"The run on flags has been American flags," she said. "People are interested in having them in the ground or any visible place. They have friends and relatives in the Middle East and they are concerned about them."

American flags can be seen throughout Tallahassee—from Killearn to Frenchtown to university campuses. But not all of the flags on display were recently purchased.

One flag on display at a fraternity house on the corner of Pensacola Street and Walker Avenue is from the carrier U.S.S. Nimitz. One of the fraternity's alumni donated the flag, which was getting tattered on board the ship.

"The flag is there in support of the troops, not necessarily supporting the war," said Matt Thomas, president of the Florida State University chapter of Beta Theta Pi.

Some people, meanwhile, have always displayed the flag—war or no war.

"It's been a permanent part of this place for years. It's about time to buy a new one," said J.H. Booth who lives on St. Augustine Street. "It's kind of getting worn out."

Teachers, county still argue over raises

BY DAVE BRYAN
ASST. NEWS EDITOR

After months of debate, the Leon Classroom Teachers Association and county school board officials are still at odds over salary raises for teachers.

The union rejected an offer from Leon County School Board officials Monday to increase salaries by $1,100 because the amount would not be retroactive, said LCTA President Mildred Hall.

Hall argued that such a raise would really add up to only $550 because the increase would not include the first six months of the fiscal year, which began in July.

"Basically, this means you work half a year without the raise," Hall said Tuesday. "This is the reason we've been rejecting it and rejecting it."

But John Muldoon, the school board's chief negotiator, said despite the fact teachers wouldn't be getting the entire raise this year, they should agree to the offer because they'd get the entire $1,100 beginning next fiscal year.

"In effect, when you annualize . . . they pick up the full $1,100."

Hall is concerned that the school board may not be able to make good on its yearly contracts because of shortfalls in the state's general revenue fund. She said that is why teachers are trying to get as much money as they possibly can this year.

The union asked the district to change the raise Tuesday to $800 for most teachers and $1,000 for those with 17 and 18 years experience—with the condition that the amount be retroactive. If the union and school board agree, this would allow teachers with the most experience to collect $450 over the district's current offer.

Less experienced teachers would collect $250 over the school board's current offer.

"We think that that's affordable and we hope the district can come up with that," said David Clark, an LTCA negotiator who heads several local teachers' unions in the Big Bend area.

Muldoon said that normally, negotiations are finished months before the school year begins. But this year, teachers are showing uncertainty about the amount of the raise because of the state's budget problems.

"This is an unusual year," he said.

Muldoon said that compared to the 40 or so other school districts in the state which have settled their contracts, Leon County's offer is "probably in the ball park" of other districts with its offer of a 4.2-percent increase.

"We're concerned about having a competetive salary schedule in the long haul," Muldoon said.

Man shot and killed

A Suwannee Swifty robbery suspect was shot and killed Tuesday night by a Leon County corrections officer, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson said Wednesday.

Abner Green, 1522 Crown Ridge Road, was shot in the upper left part of his chest by Jerome Scudder. Green, 22, had allegedly tried to rob the store at 3618 Apalachee Parkway where Scudder's wife works. Jerome Scudder, 43, has a state pistol permit. He was visiting his wife at the store at the time of the incident, Simpson said.

According to Simpson, Jerome Scudder arrived at the store before 10 p.m. after his wife, Mayellen, called and asked him to bring a sweater. While Jerome Scudder was in the bathroom, Abner Green entered the store and allegedly pointed a gun at Mayellen Scudder and demanded money from the register.

Jerome Scudder came out of the bathroom after hearing his wife yell. Green allegedly turned and pointed his gun at Jerome Scudder, who drew his gun and fired two shots. One shot missed Green and hit the store's front window. The second hit Green in the chest, Simpson said.

Paramedics were called and Green was taken to the Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center. He was pronounced dead at 10:44 p.m.

Suwannee Swifty employees refused to comment on the incident.

Simpson said Green was on probation at the time of the shooting. He had been released on bond following his arrest for carrying a concealed weapon.

Big lies

President George Bush's State of the Union address Tuesday night was, all at the same time, one of the most entertaining, disgusting, shallow, hypocritical, insulting and frightening speeches made in a good long while.

The Big Lies—everything from to how the Bush administration is "strengthening the power and choice of individuals and families" to how the U.S. is "selflessly" confronting "evil for the sake of good in a land so far away"—would have been funny had scores of millions not been sucking all the red, white and blue crap in while their less fortunate counterparts suffer through America's ugly realities.

That the president could smile and lick his lips and say how things just really aren't so bad in this time and place is beyond belief. Hundreds of thousands of American troops sit senselessly and needlessly in a land far away; as Bush spoke, some were even engaging, and dying, in the initial phases of an ugly war, and for a cause that nobody can figure out.

" . . . we need to build a new, enduring peace—based not on arms races and confrontation, but on shared principles and the rule of law," Bush said, without batting an eye, while first lady Barbara looked on proudly from the front row of the balcony.

What a load! That George Bush continues to harp on how indignant he is about naked agression to justify U.S. military involvement in the Gulf even though everybody—even those who support U.S. action—knows what crap that is, doubtless put many television sets on the brink of disaster.

But without a pause, Bush took his shamelessness further, yammering with a Gipper-like twinkle in his eye about the democratization of Latin America. Government by death squad terror in El Salvador, contra terror and destruction in Nicaragua, the support of right-wing elements throughout the rest of the region: oh yeah, the U.S. has democratized Central America.

Bush was just as entertaining, disgusting, frightening, etc. when he talked about the home front, too. In the most affluent country in the world, millions are unemployed, millions are illiterate, millions are young and pregnant, homeless, hungry, drug-addicted and incarcerated.

And yet all Bush does is harp back to the "thousand points of light" nonsense he promised in the election two years ago: " . . . if you know how to read, find someone who can't. If you've got a hammer, find a nail. If you're not hungry, not lonely, not in trouble—seek out someone who is . . . "

He sounded so sincere, with that little shake of his head and that grandmotherly tone in his voice, you almost expected him to say, "And if you got lots of money, give some of it away." But no such luck. Bush instead had the nerve to bring up the capital gains tax cut and how he really—really by golly—did want a civil rights bill that he wouldn't have to veto.

What a slap in the face—as if the poor and middle classes won't have enough to be indignant about when their sons and daughters start coming home cold.

All the applause and standing ovations made the scene even more unreal. Not a single booh or hiss or obscenity the entire time. Incredible. You figured Bernie Sanders at least, or Ron Dellums, would come through with a few apropos retorts.

Bush's speech wasn't all Big Lies, Lies, Lies, though; there was an ominous nugget of truth underneath all the brown stuff being spewed. It was that stuff again about "the long-held promise of a new world order . . . " and "the winds of change are with us now."

Oh yeah . . . new world order and winds of change indeed.

Propaganda

Editor:

I am writing in reference to the film Portrait of Teresa, by Pastor Vega, which was shown on Jan. 16 in Moore Auditorium. This film was part of a cultural exposure program for the language students. This picture is a border-line propaganda film for communist Cuba. It quite clearly shows that working for the Communist party is more important than working for the benefit of your family.

The main character, Teresa, is a textile worker who joins the company union. The union becomes the central part of her life to the detriment of her family and marriage. Every time she tries to leave the party she is harassed by the communist community.

Also dominant was the male chauvanist attitude of the community. Teresa is forced to exist in a subservient role to her husband. This fact and the dominant theme praising Castro and the Communist party totally undermine any educational value the film might have had. I believe it an outrage that FSU condones the use of this film as an educational tool.

As a whole

Editor:

We read with disappointment the Jan. 22 letter of our colleague Professor Bonnie Braendlin on this semester's "Masterpieces of Freedom" course. This is the fifth course in an exciting and innovative (indeed, award-winning) series of courses, each featuring works of excellence organized around a common theme and taught by distinguished members of the faculty. A publicity flyer is attached.

This fall the nation will end the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution with programs on the Bill of Rights, and we felt that it would be appropriate to fashion a series of courses on the topic of freedom as part of Florida State's participation in Bicentennial events. "Masterpieces of Freedom" is the first of two courses; this term's class is a celebration of the philosophies which contributed to and/or influenced the Bill of Rights. Since we are presenting "Masterpieces of Freedom" chronologically, we cover early literature in this first course, thus having a disproportionate representation of works by white, male, western thinkers, such as Sophocles, Polybius, Shakespeare, Racine, Luther, Erasmus, Milton, Locke, Rousseau, Voltaire, and Adam Smith.

This course will be followed in the fall by a sequel, "Masterpieces of Freedom, Part 2," that begins with the Bill of Rights and spans the 19th and 20th centuries. The second course will focus on more contemporary expressions of freedom and will include a number of works by non-white, female, and non-western thinkers (and artists), with evenings devoted to Mary Wollstonecraft, Isadora Duncan, Black spirituals, and Latin American liberation theology, among others.

The course's predecessors, on themes of Justice, Love, Journey, and Dream, were representative of the University's faculty in race and gender as well as disciplines and departments. The works themselves were also representative of diverse eras and cultures—including Islamic, Japanese, East Indian, and Native American.

The works Dr. Braendlin mentions as calling for inclusion (Virginia Woolf's A Room of One's Own and Martin Luther King's Letter From a Birmingham Jail) have already been texts in the courses on Justice and Dream respectively.

We are grateful to Professor Braendlin (and the editor) for the opportunity to let Flambeau readers know more about the Masterpieces series. We still would welcome registrations in HUM 3930r 70 Humanities-Special Topics, and would be happy to answer any questions readers might have.

Indignant

Editor:

I am writing in response to the Assistant Arts Editor's review of Franco Zeffirelli's Hamlet. Upon reading this review, I was nearly knocked unconscious with indignation! However, "more matter with less art." To begin with, the first scene of the movie is in the play. Zeffireli didn't just put it there to show us how crafty he was. It is taken directly from the text! Hamlet himself explains it all for you in his first soliloquy in Act 1 Scene II. What obviously confused you was meant to make it more accessible to modern day audiences. When Hamlet reflects on this event it is clear to the audience what he is referring to. How can you write of the play's "delicate balance" when you hardly know it well enough to even conceive of giving it such a label? Anyway, if there is a "delicate blance," it is not the reason the bard's masterpiece has captivated audiences for more than 400 years. Hamlet (as well as any other great work of Shakespeare) has survived so long because it can be interpreted in so many different ways! Believe you me Mr. Talbott, Hamlet has not been so well received for so long because it has been produced verbatim each time on account of any "delicate balance"! No doubt, in each period of time Hamlet is performed, it is done so with the mind set and the influences of the given generation. If your "delicate balance" theory holds true, then why was Oliver's Hamlet so well received when he "cut and muddled" more than Zefferelli did? His movie didn't even have the Rosencrantz and Guildenstern subplot!

ACLU says no way is art obscene, and it shouldn't be censored

BY LAUREN V. LUSTIG
ARTS EDITOR

No one got up to walk out of the room when Robyn Blumner prefaced her famous "Sex and Censorship" slide show with a warning that it contained photos and paintings of nude people.

"Those people who may be overcome by the need to commit a sexual act upon viewing these slides should leave," quipped the executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Florida.

Blumner was in town from Miami to present the slide show, which chronicles the history of censorship in the 20th century, at an open ACLU meeting Tuesday night.

Beginning with the banning of James Joyce's novel Ulysess, Blumner discussed censorship and its "victims" throughout the century, including George Bernard Shaw, Lenny Bruce, Henry Miller. She worked her way up to the recent controversy regarding Robert Mapplethorpe's photos and 2 Live Crew's album, Nasty As They Wanna Be. Both were the focus of court cases last year, but were deemed not obscene.

> 'Taken from a legal standpoint, censorship is wrong for those who believe in a free society.'
> —Robyn Blumner, executive director ACLU of Florida

Some of the analogies Blumner used in narrating the slide show, and illustrating why even offensive materials should be protected under free expression, angered some members of the audience.

For instance, Blumner pointed out that Martin Luther King Jr.'s flaunting of conventional standards was gut-wrenching and challenging to many members of the community, just as so-called obscene art often is.

This analogy angered Dean Moyer.

"I have a hard time believing Martin Luther King would side with you," said Moyer, a member of the non-fundamentalist Christian Campus ministry.

Moyer fired fast and furious questions to Blumner, asking if she thought that "as far as sex and censorship goes, is there a moral issue involved?"

Blumner fielded Moyer's question with references to the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

"Taken from a legal standpoint, censorship is wrong for those who believe in a free society," she said.

Blumner showed slides of a few Mapplethorpe photos: the back of a naked child, a partially naked women and a man with a bullwhip coming out of his rectum.

"The reaction of a 11-year-old upon seeing this would be 'Eeww' and they'd walk away," she said, referring to the latter.

The presentation also included arguments against self-appointed censors of the past and present, like Anthony Comstock, who called Shaw "an Irish smut dealer," and State Attorney John Tanner, who sent letters to Florida bookstores and vidoe shops last March saying the stores should rethink selling some of their material. Pink Floyd's The Wall was on the list of items he thought should be banned.

Bringing up many well worn arguments, Blumner criticized ex-U.S. Attorney General Ed Meese's 1984 committee on pornography for its "ridiculous ambiguity." She said that the committee itself admitted that some evidence points in the direction that guns, martial arts and slasher films are likely to produce worse consequences than the viewing of pornography.

People still fishing at lake despite recent contamination

BY DOUG MARTIN
STAFF WRITER

Although Lake Munson has been recently inundated with more than 3 million gallons of raw sewage, people continue to use it for fishing and recreation purposes.

That has some residents and experts, as well as the state Department of Environmental Regulation, concerned. They say the sewage constitutes a health threat.

"We went down there and told (the people fishing) they (the city) was dumping sewage," said John Gibby, a lakeside resident. "They said they didn't know anything about sewage being dumped. It would be nice if someone put up a sign to tell people not to fish there."

But the local government agency that has jurisdiction over health matters—the Leon County Health Unit—has not conducted tests of the water.

"We did not see this as a threat to the drinking water," said Arthur Cooper, director of the Leon County Health Unit.

On Jan. 13, almost 4 million gallons of raw sewage overflowed from the city's sewer system into Black Swamp in the southern part of the city. Heavy rains subsequently pushed the sewage from that spill—as well as two lesser spills totaling 300,000 gallons on Jan. 19—into Munson Slough, a wetlands area which flows into Lake Munson.

Cooper said tests were conducted soon afterward of private wells adjacent to the slough to determine if they had been contaminated by the sewage. The tests turned out negative for fecal coliform, a bacteria linked to several human diseases, including dysentery, typhus and cholera.

The health unit did not test the open waters of the slough or the lake.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua—Costa Rican President Rafael Calderon arrived in Nicaragua Wednesday for a two-day state visit, promising to renegotiate Managua's debt and offer aid in educational and health matters.

Calderon, who was born in Nicaragua 41 years ago to Costa Rican parents, is making his first visit to the country as president.

PARIS—The giant French construction firm Bouygues confirmed Wednesday that it built an underground bunker beneath a luxury apartment complex near the presidential palace in Baghdad.

Bouygues said the anti-bomb shelter, built between 1981 and 1983 during the war between Iran and Iraq, was constructed under a complex of 760 luxury apartments it put up for high-ranking civil servants. The company added that all new buildings constructed during that period in the Iraqi capital included such shelters.

A spokesman for the company said the firm did not know whether the shelter was later transformed for the personal use of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, as maintained by the French weekly "Le Nouvel Observatoire" in its latest issue.

WASHINGTON—Americans are following news reports of the war in the Persian Gulf very closely and 50 percent say they can't stop watching, a poll said Wednesday. Many report feelings of sadness, fear and confusion at the news.

Eighty-one percent of the public said it is keeping television or radio turned to the news and 51 percent said they were reading newspapers more closely. Sixty-seven percent reported they are following the war very closely, 28 percent fairly closely, and just 5 percent saying they are not following it closely at all.

WASHINGTON—The Persian Gulf war is beginning to take its toll on President Bush.

His face is beginning to look gaunt and his press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, acknowledges the president is preoccupied with the war and does not have time for play anymore.

He also has been grumpy at times. He obviously is not getting a full night's sleep in view of the eight-hour time difference between Washington and the gulf.

NEW YORK—A Korean grocer Wednesday was acquitted of charges he assaulted a black customer in a case that triggered months of racial bitterness and protests in Brooklyn.

The Brooklyn Criminal court jury deliberated just three-and-a-half hours before acquitting Pong Ok Jang of assault, attempted assault and harassment of Gheselaine Felissaint, 47, in his Flatbush store Jan. 18, 1990.

The racial feud stemming from the case was marked by repeated rallies by blacks calling for closure of the two Korean stores in the predominantly West Indian neighborhood, and by Koreans protesting against infringement of their livelihood.

WASHINGTON—The Senate passed and sent to the White House Wednesday legislation that could lead to a final decision on what cancers suffered by veterans of the Vietnam War are caused by the defoliant Agent Orange.

One part of the bill puts into a law a directive by Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward Derwinski issued two years ago that Vietnam veterans who suffer from two forms of cancer—non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and soft tissue sarcoma—receive disability benefits.

The bill also codifies the presumption that veterans suffering from choracne are victims of Agent Orange if the symptoms appear one year after their last duty in Vietnam, rather that than the six months specified by the VA.

picketers in front of movie theater's showing Freddy films," said Blumner.

Denise Morgan, who was on the panel for discussion after the slide show viewing, took a different tack with the issue. She said that people need to stop distinguishing between art and obscenity.

"Why does obscenity have to be devoid of worth? Or art, obscenity?," said Morgan, a law school professor at Florida State University.

Morgan said she didn't think 2 Live Crew and the Mapplethorpe photos were censored because of sexual content.

"I think the prosecution was motivated by racism and homophobia," she said.

Morgan also said art should be protected unless it causes direct, physical harm: murder, assault, battery or rape.

Diane Montgomery, another panelist, said the nuances behind deciding what and how something causes harm makes it an almost impossible task.

"The issue is direct cause and effect, and the research isn't there," said Montgomery, a social work professor at FSU. "We can't prove this particular movie, this video, whatever, made someone murder."

The fourth panelist was Mark Krause, an attorney from the Rackateer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) section of the office of the attorney general. He said the Florida Supreme Court applies the "Miller Test" in cases of obscenity, leaving it up to a particular county to decide what is obscene.

"The Miller Test means if the material is patently offensive to the standard in the adult community as a whole, without serious literary, political, scientific or artist value, it can violate statute," said Krause.

This is what applied in the 2 Live Crew case, he added.

The panel generated a lively discussion at the end.

Moyer, who had many questions for Blumner, wouldn't comment to the Flambeau on the slides he saw that evening.

"I'd rather not comment, being that even in the best case scenario, I can't see it to be instrumental," he said.

Lorie Fridell, a professor of criminology at FSU and vice-president of the local ACLU chapter, had no such qualms.

"Some of those photos were offensive to me," she said. "But there is nothing wrong with being offended."

Hazard from page 5

Cooper said they did not consider conditions at the lake a hazard to the health of the population and the wells were only checked as a precautionary measure.

But others say the unit should have done more because the sewage is a hazard.

"You've got to be careful what you do around that lake for a while," said Skip Livingston, a Florida State University biologist. "That's a lot of sewage for a lake that size ... it's very easy to get diseases from this material."

Livingston added that he didn't think people should swim or fish at the lake.

Gerry Neubauer, who heads the Department of Environmental Regulation's Tallahassee district branch, also agreed that the sewage poses a hazard.

"We definitely consider raw sewage to be a major health hazard," said Neubauer, who added that DER has conducted its own tests. "This discharge was a crisis."

Other long-time lakeside residents said sewage spills happen so often that signs should be put up on a permanent basis until the city gets the lake cleaned up.

"If it had happened to Lake Jackson, there would have been an uproar," said Glenn Carter, a resident of the lake area for 21 years and a past head of Lake Munson Preservation Inc., a homeowners group. "But I guess we're on the wrong side of the tracks to get justice."

If you don't want to get or stay married, you're in good Company

BY MARTIN ALLEN
STAFF WRITER

Stephen Sondheim has been tagged as the "Steven Spielberg of modern theater." Like his almost namesake, Sondheim has a way of taking the most mundane story matter and giving it a new twist. Unlike Spielberg, a work by Sondheim has a way of staying with you and messing with your head for a good while after the house lights have come up.

Such is the case with the Florida State School of Theatre's latest production, Company. After a pretty standard opening number, the play begins to tell the story of an average guy: Bob, or Robert, Bobby whatever. Everybody calls him something different. Bob (Jay Douglas) is 35, unmarried and seemingly unconcerned about it.

Not so with all of his married friends, however. All of them think it's time he settle down and start living like a normal guy.

To accomplish this goal, Bob's friends invite him over for dinner, drinks or other fun. They attempt to show him by example the many joys of domestic bliss. Pity though, that hardly any of them really seem to be happy together themselves. It must be a case of misery desperately wanting company.

The entire first act consists of these scenes in a long flashback that takes place one brief moment during a surprise birthday party. It's in the second act that things really begin to heat up for Bob. Despite his friends' misgivings, he is painfully aware of his situation and is trying to do something about it. He spends time chasing three women and actually has a bit of luck with a charming, attractive, if empty-headed, airline hostess, April (Amanda Watkins).

In fact, he gets really lucky what with the sob story, the baby oil and the champagne until he forgets her name and calls her June. It's downhill from there for our hero. By the time the play ends Bob is not a happy man. It may not be a tragedy of Shakespearian dimensions; but to suddenly break the mood of the play and have a happy ending would have made it seem too much like those MGM musicals of decades past.

This is a play that reflects the current mood of life in America, where one out of two marriages ends in divorce. The underlying message is that many of the same couples who do stay together, do so out of a deep fear of loneliness as much as affection. In the play, the happiest couple around is the one that gets a quicky Mexican divorce and continues to live together.

Late in the second act, when Bob is deep in his agony and the debate goes around again about why people get married or even more stupidly, stay married, Bob shouts out: "FOR COMPANY!" Get it?

This play was originally produced 20-plus years ago during the height of the previous generation's sexual revolution. Apart from updating a few topical references, it still retains its punch. There are quite a few punches, if you include a funny scene in Act 1 with the first of Bob's married friends taking turns trying to out bitch each other over their respective alcohol and diet fixations. The scene ends in a slamming contest when the wife decides to show off what she's learned from her karate magazines.

Cast of Company

This is a play which reflects the current mood of life in America, where one out of every two marriages ends in a divorce.

REVIEW

Director Lori Bales keeps the pace lively and the actors do their work well. There are too many good performances to give equal attention to, so just go see it for yourself. Two items of special interest to remember though. The music is live, with a piano, guitar and drum. Look to the left every once in a while during a hilarious scene where one of Bob's women friends chickens out of marrying her live in. While the rest of the cast doubles as the church choir, look for the drummer to make a clever cameo as the conductor.

The other item to watch—you can't help but notice unless you've died of old age during the performance—is while Bob is having his way with the stewardess and the baby oil. The bed that they're in retracts into the scenery. Out comes an otherwise unnamed dancer, (Leigh Brown) who performs a none too-subtle dance to a taped monologue of the two character's inner thoughts. Not for the squeamish or the easily embarrassed. More than one overcoat was removed after that one.

FSU Studio Theatre presents Company Jan. 30 through Feb. 2 and Feb. 6 through the Feb. 9. All shows will begin promptly at 8 p.m. Tickets are $6 for the general public and, as always, free to FSU students with valid ID. For more information, call either the Fine Arts ticket office at 644-6500 or the publicity office at 644-6488.

16th annual conference packed to brim

KELLY SHANE
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Ivory tower artistry and lowbrow pop culture will be put under scrutinization at the Sixteenth Annual Conference on Literature and Film this weekend.

The conference, titled "Social and Political Change In Literature and Film," will look at contemporary and historical cultural creations and how they reflect and influence the world around us. Beginning today, the lecture series, which takes place on the Florida State University campus, will feature an abundance of speakers on a multitude of topics—including how such topics are presented in media.

"Hopefully, there will be something for anyone in a college setting," said conference director Richard Chapple.

Chapple was pleased with the inclusion of more presentations dealing with ethnic topics, as well as an increased sensitivity of women's issues.

He noted that both of the special evening sessions will deal with gender. Tonight's will feature Helena Goscilo of the University of Pittsburgh, an expert on women's fiction with emphasis on Eastern European and Russian fiction. Peter Lehmen of the University of Arizona will discussg male representation in film on Friday evening.

"He promised me it would keep the after-dinner crowd alert," said Chapple. "But nothing off-color."

Due to the short length of the conference, many of the presentations had to be scheduled simultaneously. Unfortunately, this was the only way to cover the mass of materials to be discussed.

Today's Schedule:

Thursday Morning 9am-noon

(1) Social and Political Change in Italy
(2) The Body, Sacrifice, Simulation
(3) Landscape of Modern American Fiction
(4) Southern Women and Southern Men in Literature and Film
(5) The Portrayal of Aviation Disasters
(6) The Literary Response to Vietnam
(7) Myth and Politics in Spanish-American Literature
(8) Cosmopolitics
(9) The Artist and the Text
(10) Zola and the Winds of Change
(11) Film and Race

Thursday Afternoon 2pm-5pm

(12) "Are You For Real?" or, the Question of Public Identity in Film, Television and Print
(13) Film and Politics
(14) Literature and Politics
(15) English Literature, Politics and Gender
(16) American Fiction
(17) Contemporary Theory in Literature and Film
(18) Responses to Vietnam
(19) French and Quebecois Film
(20) Almodovar
(21) Italian Cinema and Literature

Thursday Evening Plenary Session, 8p.m.

Gender Culture-Engendered and Endangered Under Glastnost

There will be film and video screenings on Saturday afternoon. (See story in Friday's Flambeau). The specific films and screening times will be available from the Center for Professional Development today. For more information or a conference schedule with locations and times of presentations call CPD at 644-7546. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

They'll be a lecture on Tennessee Williams (above) as part of the conference series.

Florida Game Commission is lauded for successful year

BY BRETT BUELL

"If it weren't for the job they're doing, animal populations and hunting would be endangered for years to come."
—Hunter Brad Farr on the Federal Game and Freshwater Fish Commission

Picture the most magnificent buck ever created—the mysterious, majestic creature that you see only once in your lifetime, like a shadow that disappears into the wind. It's the one that got away.

It's the one that got away from Florida State University student Chance Raehn hunting on property near Orlando last Thanksgiving.

"It was Thanksgiving morning, we were running dogs and I see these white things get up and all of a sudden I see the buck run out," Raehn said. He took a shot from about 70 yards. "But he didn't fall or flinch and he ran off. I never saw him again.

Raehn went home empty-handed. But about three weeks ago he got a call from a relative who hunts the same land as Raehn was.

"The antlers were just like I described them. They were 18 inches wide, an eight-point, perfectly symmetrical bleach-white rack."

Hunters hate to lose their game. An occasion where a trophy rack gets away and is found months later is almost unheard of.

"It was probably about a quarter-of-a-mile from where I saw it that they found the animal. I'm glad they found it because it was just going to waste," Raehn said.

Raehn said that this 185-pound buck was one of the largest he's ever seen in the state. Florida typically has the smallest deer in the United States due to the lack of protein- and nitrogen-rich food—elements necessary for muscle, bone development. Seeing such a large buck is a credit to the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Many hunters agree that this has been one of the best hunting seasons on record for deer and other game animals. FSU student Bo Bradford said that

Lady 'Noles go for history vs. Georgia

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Florida State women's basketball history could be made tonight if the Lady Seminoles beat No. 4 Georgia at Athens, Ga.

The 7:30 p.m. game pits defense-oriented FSU, 14-2 and ranked No. 22, against the powerful Lady Bulldogs, 17-2 overall and 4-0 in the tough Southeastern Conference.

If FSU can pull out a victory, it may be ranked the highest in school history. Seminoles Coach Marynell Meadors said a win is definitely possible for her team, which is presumably the strongest of any in her five years at FSU.

"We're just going to take it to them," Meadors said. "We've got to keep doing what we do best."

What the Lady Seminoles do best is run constantly and play aggressive defense. FSU is on a 10-game win streak, is 7-0 in the Metro conference and would also break the school record for number of consecutive wins with a victory over Georgia.

Georgia has beaten six Top-25 teams this year and lost only to defending national champ Stanford and No. 9 Rutgers on the road by three and one points, respectively.

"We're not going to make a lot of changes for Georgia. I don't think they'll be any tougher than Virginia or LSU."
—FSU Coach Marynell Meadors

The Lady Bulldogs return four of their starting five from last year's successful NCAA Tournament squad. They're led by a trio of backcourt standouts, including team-leading scorer Camille Lowe, who averages 16.5 point per game.

The three-guard front also includes Lady Hardmon with 12.1 points per game and Adrienne Shuler, the point guard who has 106 assists in 19 games and adds 7.8 points a contest.

Georgia Coach Andy Landers said his team is not affected by its No. 4 ranking nor is it worried about Florida State.

"We have a lot of maturity and leadership on our team, and they're playing totally together," Landers said.

Second-leading scorer Stacey Ford (12.2 ppg) and leading-rebounder Tammye Jenkins round out the Georgia squad at the forward spots. Jenkins snags 6.4 rebounds and adds 11.9 points per game.

Landers said he will play a straight man-to-man defense against FSU, but Meadors said she's seen that all year and was not worried.

"We're not going to make a lot of changes for Georgia," Meadors said. "I don't think they'll be any tougher than (No.1) Virginia or (No.10) LSU."

The Lady Seminoles beat LSU at home Dec. 2 but fell to Virginia the next weekend in Charlottesville, Va. FSU's record on the road is 6-2.

FSU's leading scorer Wanda Burns returns to the lineup tonight after sitting out the Tulane game with a virus. She and point guard Danielle Ryan will be crucial to an FSU victory and will have their hands full with the Lady Bulldogs' backcourt players.

Post players Tia Paschal, Tracy Walker and Chantille Dishman complete the starting roster for the Lady Seminoles, but versatile Chris Davis will see plenty of action to help contain the Georgia offense.

Landers said he is aware of the FSU triple threat of Burns, Paschal and Dishman.

"We can't shut them down, I know," he said. "But we're going to try to slow them down.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Ask yourself if you are making good use of the resources at your command. If you plan ahead, you will continue to outdistance the competition. The financial outlook indicates steady improvement. Confide more in your mate and children; they need to know why certain restrictions are necessary. Working together toward a shared goal strengthens the ties that bind. Early winter is the best time for a wedding.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: writer Zane Grey, baseball star Jackie Robinson, actresses Carol Channing and Suzanne Pleshette.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A handsome, tailored look will impress conservative clients. A friend could be entirely off-base. Rely on your intuition. Romance gives you a feeling of deep contentment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have to handle a "hot potato" at work today. A competitor is "crazy" like a fox. Stay alert! Family members will help reduce financial pressures. Enjoy a quiet evening at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Top-quality sales items can brighten up your wardrobe. Be more considerate of your mate and you will re-establish your old rapport. Tend to the needs of an older person without complaint.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be careful not to overstep your bounds at home or work. Acting on impulse could create havoc. Good things come to those who wait. Refrain from taking too many financial gambles now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not let uncertainty over a personal matter put you off your stroke. Now is the time to consider wide-ranging business proposals. A sudden windfall means you can spend extra money on your family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your partner is more tuned in to your needs today, but your offspring will keep you busier than ever. Think of creative ways for them to use up all that boisterous energy!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An innovative idea pays handsome dividends. Your flair and imagination help you decorate your home in a way everyone will admire. Share secrets with a trusted loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Other people come through with funds or ideas just when you need them the most! Show your gratitude in tangible ways. Be mindful of possible snags where travel is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Focusing on long-term work goals is vital today. Be certain that you have the latest available information to give to VIPs. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be careful not to shake the foundations of your professional or personal life. It is possible that you are barking up the wrong tree. Ease up; you can not force the pace of progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A patient, mature approach is vital today. Do not let your temper get the best of you. Count to 10 when things go awry. Making low-key, constructive suggestions wins you widespread respect.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ignore those who make negative comments. Concentration is the key to advancement at work. A secret desire will soon be fulfilled. Pursue romance in a glamorous setting.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Ask yourself if you are making good use of the resources at your command. If you plan ahead, you will continue to outdistance the competition. The financial outlook indicates steady improvement. Confide more in your mate and children; they need to know why certain restrictions are necessary. Working together toward a shared goal strengthens the ties that bind. Early winter is the best time for a wedding.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: writer Zane Grey, baseball star Jackie Robinson, actresses Carol Channing and Suzanne Pleshette.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A handsome, tailored look will impress conservative clients. A friend could be entirely off-base. Rely on your intuition. Romance gives you a feeling of deep contentment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have to handle a "hot potato" at work today. A competitor is "crazy" like a fox. Stay alert! Family members will help reduce financial pressures. Enjoy a quiet evening at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Top-quality sales items can brighten up your wardrobe. Be more considerate of your mate and you will re-establish your old rapport. Tend to the needs of an older person without complaint.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be careful not to overstep your bounds at home or work. Acting on impulse could create havoc. Good things come to those who wait. Refrain from taking too many financial gambles now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not let uncertainty over a personal matter put you off your stroke. Now is the time to consider wide-ranging business proposals. A sudden windfall means you can spend extra money on your family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your partner is more tuned in to your needs today, but your offspring will keep you busier than ever. Think of creative ways for them to use up all that boisterous energy!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An innovative idea pays handsome dividends. Your flair and imagination help you decorate your home in a way everyone will admire. Share secrets with a trusted loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Other people come through with funds or ideas just when you need them the most! Show your gratitude in tangible ways. Be mindful of possible snags where travel is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Focusing on long-term work goals is vital today. Be certain that you have the latest available information to give to VIPs. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be careful not to shake the foundations of your professional or personal life. It is possible that you are barking up the wrong tree. Ease up; you can not force the pace of progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A patient, mature approach is vital today. Do not let your temper get the best of you. Count to 10 when things go awry. Making low-key, constructive suggestions wins you widespread respect.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ignore those who make negative comments. Concentration is the key to advancement at work. A secret desire will soon be fulfilled. Pursue romance in a glamorous setting.

while he usually hunts deer during bow season, he has seen some of the largest animals he's ever seen while hunting.

"The number of deer the hunters are harvesting now are the perfect ratio for the balance of nature," Bradford said. "And what people don't know is that bucks will let the doe eat first when there are food shortages, meaning bucks are first to starve. It's really important to take the right amount of doe too."

So when hunters see large bucks with perfect, symmetrical antlers, the animal populations are at their optimum levels.

If hunters were not out harvesting the game animals, the population numbers would grow, but the individual animals would be small, weak and generally unhealthy. And the deer would be more susceptable to disease and have difficulties carrying pregnancies.

Antler development is an easy measure of how healthy a population is. When lands are overpopulated, deer have small, deformed racks.

However, thanks to the Game Commission's carefully set policies, this year's deer are some of the healthiest in memory.

Dr. Robert Venderhoof, a field biologist from the Commission, confirms these accounts.

"From our reports it looks like we've had a pretty good season," Venderhoof said.

FSU student Brad Farr agrees.

"I've seen some of the biggest animals I've ever seen this year and some tracks that would knock you out. While I've had some bad luck (hunting) this season, I've seen deer like I've never seen, including a 14-point non-typical," Farr said.

Farr credits the Game Commission for a job well-done.

"This is the first year I've gotten to hunt on the (Wildlife Management Arwea's in Leon County. There's more upkeep and more protection than I've ever seen," Farr said. "If it weren't for the job they're doing, animal populations and hunting would be endangered for years to come."

Hunting is an important factor in animal population control. Game commissions spend a lot of money employing field biologists and acquiring field offices to set game laws. The purpose of the game laws are to yield healthy animal populations that will not damage the environment.

The easiest credit a student can get.

As a student, you probably want to establish credit for the future. That's why, unlike most other banks, Citibank has made it easy to apply for a Visa or MasterCard.

You don't even need your parents to co-sign. All you need is a photocopy of your current validated student I.D.

And once you become a Citibank cardmember, you can use your Citibank card at over 7.6 million establishments and get cash anytime at over 51,000 Automated Teller Machines (ATMs) worldwide.

What's more, Citibank offers 24-hour customer service, 7 days a week. So you can always reach us whenever you need us.

While other banks give you the runaround, Citibank believes you should spend your time reading Catch 22. Not living it.

To apply by phone, call
1-800-847-4477.

To apply by mail:

1. Fill out the application and tear it off.
2. Photocopy (both sides) of your current validated student ID or your tuition bill for the current semester.
3. Put everything in an envelope addressed to:

Citibank (South Dakota) N.A.
Citicorp Credit Service, Inc. (MD)
P.O. Box 8000
One Citicorp Drive
Hagerstown, Maryland 21741-8000

Seal the envelope. Put a stamp on it. Mail it. And we'll process your application promptly.
